RECEIVERSHIP.—On Sept. 12 1912 W. E. S. Strong and Roberts Walker were appointed receivers.

CREDITORS' REORGANIZATION COMMITTEE.—Geo. W. Davison, Chairman; A. Spottswood Campbell, Sec.; Central Trust Co. of N. Y., depositary. V. 95, p. 1044.

REORGANIZATION PLAN.—The plan, prepared by the creditors' committee, dated Oct. 10 1912, and approved by the merchandise creditors' committee (V. 95, p. 1044), provides for the reorganization of the U. S. Motor Co. and five of its subsidiaries, the Alden-Sampson Mfg. Co., Brush Runabout Co., Columbia Motor Car Co., Dayton Motor Car Co. and Maxwell-Briscoe Motor Co., through the formation of a new company which would issue the new stocks shown in above table. This Co. in addition to receiving $3,000,000 new cash working capital (increasing the liquid assets to over $10,000,000) would be free from all the present debt ($6,000,000 funded and $5,100,000 floating), except $164,540 of real estate mortgages. Haligarten & Co., N. Y., have underwritten the cash payments of 24% ($24 a share) due from the stockholders and are syndicate managers.

The first pref. stock will be entitled to 7% cum. divs. from Jan. 1 1913 and be subject to redemption at 105, with annual cash sinking fund beginning in 1915 equal to 1% of the first pref., payable out of the net profits before paying any dividends on the stock.

All of the three classes of new stock will be vested in Charles H. Sabin, Harry Bronner and James C. Brady (the number may be increased) and their successors as voting trustees for not exceeding 5 years, subject to the termination of the trust at any time. The agreement will, if practical, forbid the creation of any lien upon the property and assets as well as the increase of the first pref. stock, without the consent of voting trust certificates representing 75% of the first pref. and a majority of both 2d pref. and com.; and also any increase of the 2d pref. without consent of voting trust certifs. for a majority of the 2d pref. and a majority of com. stock.

SERVICE
QUALITY

IN this new factory of ours—the largest and most complete of its kind in the world—are being printed securities for almost every civilized country on the globe. It is located at Hunt's Point, in the Bronx, New York City. The people in it equal the population of a good-sized city. The main pressroom contains 80,000 square feet, with a battery of 179 presses, enabling the company to meet any demand for prompt deliveries and rapid service.

THE plate vaults contain Engravings held for customers for more than a century. There are now in these vaults over 130,000 plates (subject to printing orders from the proper authorities) ready to put to press at a moment's notice.

The new plant is also equipped throughout with especially designed steel cages in which the work in progress is locked each night, thereby insuring accuracy of count and security. The buildings are absolutely fireproof. Frequent fire drills are held by employees.

The importance of the permanency and integrity of the institution that guards the plates and dies from which securities are printed cannot be overestimated. This new factory contains the systematized results of a hundred years spent in endeavoring to excel in Security.

The equipment of the type and ticket printing divisions of the American Bank Note Company is modern and complete. The composing room, electrotype foundry, press room and bindery, together with the map-engraving department, are models in their own peculiar and individual lines.

Ticket presses of great capacity enable us to offer to railroads and all users of tickets or coupons those much sought after but seldom found qualities—speed and accuracy. The American Bank Note Company would be glad to acquaint you personally with the operation and products of this modern plant.

Seasoned Public Utility Securities

FOR BANKS, INSTITUTIONS and PRIVATE INVESTORS

This house offers exceptional opportunities to participate in the original issues of public utility securities which it brings out from time to time. We should be glad to furnish details, explaining the many advantages to be obtained by such participation.

For many years we have been the fiscal agents for the American Water Works & Guarantee Company and other public utility companies. The officers of the American Water Works & Guarantee Company by their connection with many different types of public utilities, extending over a period of more than a quarter of a century, have acquired a wide knowledge of the construction and operation of such enterprises. Their judgment and foresight, based upon this long experience, is a protection afforded our clients in addition to the examinations made by our own attorneys, accountants and engineers.

Each issue of bonds purchased by this house and offered to our clients has been subjected to the most rigorous examination and meets all of the requirements of a conservative investment. The list of our present offerings includes waterworks, traction, and hydro-electric bonds yielding from 5% to 6% interest, and municipal bonds yielding from 3.50% to 4.20% interest. Investors are requested to write for descriptive circular No. 262.

Your Bond Purchases

when selected with discrimination to meet your special requirements of the moment and at the same time with an eye to their future value, can be made a highly profitable investment and the safest avenue for employment of a portion of your funds. Without careful discrimination, the best results cannot be obtained and in this respect it is as important to know the responsibility of the House you deal with as to select the right securities.

WE have successfully served our banking clients since 1885 and for results can refer to any of them.

WE carry Bonds suitable for Postal Savings, Emergency Currency, State and local public deposits, etc., etc.

WE make deposits of Bonds at Washington without expense or trouble.

At the present time many safe bonds can be had to net 5% or better. If you hold lower rate securities let us suggest a legitimate means of increasing your returns to accord with the present market.

In estimating the safety of a Bank, it is always well to remember that the Capital and Surplus, in other words, the Bank's own money, is that which gives security to the depositors. In view of the financial disturbances through which the country has passed, security is the feature which should merit the first consideration. The large Capital and Surplus of this Bank forms a fund that insures absolute security to those who entrust their money to us.

DETROIT—HER MARVELLOUS PROGRESS AND HER FUTURE.

By EMORY W. CLARK, President of the First National Bank of Detroit.

If luck has any bearing on the development of a municipality, Detroit is lucky. By comparison alone with other cities of the same class can the story be told of Detroit's enviable position and her probable future, among the great industrial centers of America. It remained for the Honorable James Bryce, an Englishman, to give to us in the "American Commonwealth" the broadest, most lucid view of our complex institutions. Mr. Bryce has said within the year that Detroit typifies the most ideal conditions of any city on this continent. Her fifteen miles of water front on our finest navigable river; her broad, clean streets; her park system; her homes; the diversity of her industries; her labor conditions and her citizenship mark Detroit as a city where "life is worth living."

Her growth in the past ten years has been greater than that of any other of our large cities, the increase in population being sixty-three per cent. Ten years ago Detroit held sixteenth place in the value of her manufactured products. In 1911 only New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and St. Louis excelled her. In the value of her product above the cost of raw material she held the same position. In ten years the wages paid to labor more than trebled, the savings deposits in her banks doubled. The capital invested in her two thousand industries increased one hundred and eighty-three per cent.; her manufactured product one hundred and eighty-five per cent. to a total of three hundred and sixty-five millions of dollars; her post-office receipts one hundred and sixty-eight per cent.; her bank resources one hundred and seven per cent. and her clearings one hundred and thirteen per cent. The record of our Clearing House for the first six months of 1912 indicates for the first time in the city's history that the annual clearings will exceed the billion dollar mark. For the first six months ending June, 1912, the clearings aggregated $531,763,000, an increase over the same period a year ago of $68,252,000. Detroit's trade with foreign countries has grown from twenty millions in 1900 to forty-nine millions in 1910. The total exports for the fiscal year which closed June 30th, last, amounted to fifty-five millions, as against forty-six millions for the previous year and fifteen millions for 1900. This increase of upward of three hundred and fifty per cent. in the twelve years is one of the straws pointing to Detroit's future as a manufacturing and an export center. It is interesting to note that our chief items of export are pork products.

Much has been said about Detroit's position as an automobile center. It is true that her greatest single product is automobiles and auto parts, but it is also true that all of the capital invested in her eighteen automobile plants does not equal the market value of the capital stock of one of her great drug concerns, for in the manufacture of drugs she leads the world, as in the manufacture of stoves. Detroit is the greatest shipbuilding center on the Great Lakes, and more tonnage was produced in our lake ports in the decade than on our entire seaboard. Her plants for the manufacture of freight cars are exceeded only by St. Louis. Only four cities lead her in the number of cigars manufactured. Detroit's prominent position in these and many other varied industries preclude the possibility of her dependence on any one of them.

A recent commercial agency report shows that of the $300,000,000 capital invested commercially in Detroit there are less than $40,000,000 of this that is associated in any way with the automobile industry, or about thirteen per cent. The rapid growth of this one industry has had the effect of overshadowing in the public mind the many diversified lines which have been growing up all about us.

Detroit's great progress during the past five years, when the country as a whole, and her industrial centers in particular, have shown a hesitating tendency, is too well known to require comment. She barely felt the effects of the panic of 1907. From the first day of January in 1908 her progress has been steadily upward. Each year has added to the strength of her position, and she is too well grounded in conservatism not to have builded well.

What are the factors responsible for this growth? First, I should say, her comparatively ideal labor conditions; organized labor has not been a disturbing element here for the past twenty years; the broad spirit of her civic activities; the potent influence of her Board of Commerce; the encouragement offered capital investments and her desirability as a city in which to live.

The London, England, Board of Commerce recently received the report of a commission which it had appointed to report in detail regarding the industrial conditions in twenty-seven of the principal cities in the United States. This report shows that Detroit is the least expensive city to live in of any of the ranking cities of the United States; on the other hand, Detroit outranks many of the cities in wages paid to all classes of labor. The report shows that Detroit's average citizen spends only $59 for rent, as compared with the $100 spent in the same period by the like citizen of New York; $101 in St. Louis; $94 in Chicago, etc. The report gives special attention to the working conditions in the Detroit factories, in every case giving high praise, indicating that skilled labor is better cared for here than in any other city in the Union.

Detroit's water advantages are unequaled, and that these are appreciated by her citizens and by the visitors within her gates is evidenced by the fact that, in 1910, over nine million, one hundred thousand passengers cleared from this port, an average of more than fifty thousand each day during the six months' season. This was more than one hundred and twenty-five times the number clearing from Chicago.

What of the future? Detroit will have her setbacks, as every growing city does, but when the present industrial, economic and political conditions of this country clear, as they surely will, Detroit's position should be a leading one in the progress to follow. In the meantime, the financial strength which has been added each year to her industrial enterprises, because of their successful administration and marked activity, and, furthermore, the fact that the conservatism which has characterized Detroit's course for so many years has influenced her new spirit of development and will continue to do so, should and no doubt will save Detroit from any marked reaction which almost invariably follows such periods of expansion. The Government census taken in 1910 gave Detroit four hundred and sixty-five thousand people, and from the records of the gas and water offices, we now have five hundred and thirty-five thousand.

I should say that Detroit's position to-day is very similar to that of Chicago's twenty-five years ago, when her development for ten years had been so marked as to make its continuance questionable, and yet which proved to be only the beginning of a municipal development which has had no parallel in the history of the world.

THE CONVENTION AND CURRENCY REFORM.

During the past three or four annual conventions of the American Bankers' Association, the currency reform plan has invariably held the center of the stage. Beginning with some rather wide divergence of opinion as to the proper details on which this great problem should be worked out, the Association eventually took its stand, last year, positively in endorsement of ex-Senator Aldrich's published plan in all its details. It is quite natural, therefore, that many of the delegates to the convention at Detroit this year, and many of the readers of that convention's proceedings, should have looked for further action of some sort on the question.

As a matter of fact, the Convention did devote a good part of its time to discussions of the general question. Mr. R. W. Bonynge, of the National Monetary Commission, delivered on Tuesday a speech of much force outlining what ought to be accomplished through currency reform. He properly pointed out that "the three fundamental defects in our monetary system were," he said, "the unscientific treatment of our cash reserves, the rigidity of our entire credit system and the lack of effective co-operation between our banks," and that these "are now pretty well understood to be the responsible causes for the many bank panics that have disgraced us in the past and from which all other great commercial nations have been exempt for practically half a century." He further explained in much detail exactly what the plan as it stands would do and how far it would have to be supplemented, as time goes on, with other legislation. Chairman Reynolds of the Association's Executive Council, referring to the legislative situation in regard to currency reform, had this to say:

"It would seem, notwithstanding the labor and attendant expense of the Monetary Commission appointed by the Congress of the United States and the aid extended to the commission by the independent bankers of the country, that the political horizon has not yet sufficiently cleared to expect any modification of the currency laws—so much desired, not only by bankers but by other great business interests.

"Many of us had hoped, in view of the fact that the operation of the Aldrich-Vreeland measure expires in 1914, that some action would be taken by Congress, looking to that permanent reformative legislation, to which the people are entitled. In this we have been disappointed.

"I fear our legislators have not realized their responsibility in their failure to act. It should be the prime object of the American Bankers' Association to demand and urge remedial legislation along some proper line, and the Currency Commission should be urged to continue the work even though we seem to be laboring under many adverse conditions. I believe the people will ultimately meet the situation in some proper way."

This was not altogether cheerful; but, so far as concerned the attitude of the bankers, Mr. Livingstone, President of the Association, in his presidential address remarked that "the Association should 'stand by its guns' in this important matter, in the fullest sense of the word, and should continue to support the bill as previously recommended, and again go on record as favoring its adoption."

All of these declarations regarding currency reform were well received, and the Convention renewed its own assurance of support. But in regard to resumption of aggressive propaganda at the present time, the Convention appears to have been of a somewhat different mind. It did not endorse the immediate continuance of the aggressive campaign for currency reform based on the Aldrich plan. No vote was actually taken in advocacy of such a campaign and the general result appears to be that the work was allowed to rest in abeyance. The comments of the press (so far as it represented interest in the currency reform plan) have generally been to the effect that the Convention's attitude will act as a chill to the currency reform propaganda, and the fear has been expressed that this inaction at Detroit, taken along with the absence of any reference to the subject in Mr. Taft's speech of acceptance and the negative attitude on the subject taken by Governor Wilson, has set back the movement very seriously.

What is to be said regarding the position in which the currency reform plan is left as a result of this condition of affairs? For ourselves, we cannot say that the passive attitude of the Detroit Convention causes either surprise or regret. Let us suppose that the bankers had not only endorsed the Aldrich plan itself with the unanimity of a year ago, but had insisted upon an immediate and aggressive campaign for currency reform, and on that basis had named an active committee for immediate work towards such an end. One of two results must have followed that action. Either the committee would have met with outright refusal from the campaign managers and speakers (which is probable, in view of the party platforms and the acceptance speeches) or else the issue would have been actually forced into the Presidential controversy.

The first result would have meant public rebuff and open defeat to the plan of currency reform. The second would have presented a wholly new situation. As it stands, the Democratic platform is in form committed against the Aldrich plan. The Republican platform is silent on the subject. The Third Party platform, as we have heretofore pointed out, denounces the Aldrich plan and expresses its desire for government money issues—which may or may not represent a demand for greenbackism of the old-fashioned sort—we do not know which, because none of the party's leaders has referred to the subject since. It would seem, therefore, impossible that advocacy of the Aldrich plan would be obtainable from more than one party, and if it were thus obtained, the quite inevitable result would be to draw upon the plan of currency reform the campaign fire of the other parties.

Let it be observed that the Presidential campaign to date has emphatically shown that this is no time for calm deliberation on economic subjects. It is no time to ask the average voter to take a sober and conservative view of another and a more or less controversial subject in governmental affairs. It is pre-eminently not a time to propose a plan of centralization of banking resources when at least one party, and probably two, are disposed to be active in stirring up public antagonism toward the banking interests of the country. The very multifariousness of the schemes of legislation proposed in the Third Party platform, and the very wildness of the propositions themselves, would make intelligent discussion of the banking reform plan politically impossible. We are in the midst of a confusion of tongues which is hardly likely to reach its end until the election of next November. Currency reform cannot possibly be raised into the leading issue at this stage of the campaign; and as a subordinate and belated proposition for the contest, the chances of impressing it on the public interest could scarcely be helped by any such action at the present time, and might be greatly hurt.

This view of the case necessarily leaves open the question, What is to be the future of the banking and currency reform plan? What, in other words—even supposing that the advocacy of the subject at this time would be most unwise—is to be expected after the Presidential vote? Our own opinion is that the chances for effective propaganda in this matter would be distinctly better because the subject had been deliberately neglected during the heat of the campaign. There is a certain weariness and sense of surfeit which always overcomes the public mind after election, in regard to the topics on which the three or four months' controversy is waged. Public discussion at such times invariably turns to something new. It is ready to turn to new propositions in the way of governmental reform which have not been worn threadbare in the newspaper leaders and the stump speeches of the contest.

In other words, the public mind will at least be more receptive to the currency reform discussion then than it could be at the present juncture. But in the same connection, it must be remembered that the bill proposed and submitted by the Monetary Commission is now in the hands of the banking committees of Congress. It is the only plan which is now formally before them. It has been frankly favored with commendation, on some of its salient points, by the very groups of Congressmen from whom opposition might have been expected. We believe it safe to say that no member of Congress of any influence and intelligence could be found at the present time who would not admit, if speaking frankly, that the Aldrich plan contains at least some proposals which, in justice to his own constituency, he would be bound to favor. More than this, as we have hitherto said, since the Monetary Commission's plan is now the only distinct plan of currency legislation before the country, it must necessarily be the basis for any further formal proposition which the committees will see fit to report to Congress. To these considerations may without much stretch of probability be added the fact that the very large business which seems to be ahead of all sections of the country this present autumn, with the inevitable strain imposed by it on banking resources and currency reserves, will of itself emphasize the needs of a scientifically managed distribution of currency. It is not improbable that the course of events in the banking centers and the money markets during the next few months will provide an exceedingly useful text for advocates of reform on the general lines of the Aldrich plan.

There has been some criticism of the Convention, based on the fact that it did not at least provide for energetic agitation on the subject after the November vote and before the closing session of the Sixty-second Congress in December. We have no predictions to make as to when the currency plan is likely to come up in Congress. It is possible, of course, that the short and final session of the present Congress which convenes next December will take up and conceivably enact into law the requisite provisions for reform. That is what happened with the Specie Resumption bill, proposed in the Congress of 1874, almost wholly ignored in the platforms of the parties during that season's elections, but placed on the statute books in the early months of 1875. That occurred, notwithstanding the fact that the Congress then in session was holding its final short session before it was to be replaced by a Congress under control of the opposition party.

But the precedent will hardly hold, in view of the fact that the Congress which passed the Specie Resumption Act under such circumstances was largely Republican in both Houses, whereas in the present Congress neither party controls both Houses, and constructive legislation of the sort would be therefore on its face unlikely. We suppose the greater probability to be that the new Congress, which will be elected next November and which will assemble in December, 1913, unless convened before in extra session, will have upon its shoulders the task of currency and banking reform legislation. The question of currency reform can wait, even though delay may be deemed unfortunate. It will at any rate be better to await such developments than to jeopardize the whole campaign by injudicious and premature injection of the issue into the arena of excited partisan politics. What the opinion of the active supporters of the currency reform plan has been, regarding the wisdom or unwisdom of bringing up the discussion during the Presidential campaign itself, we have heretofore pointed out. They have wholly opposed such action by its advocates, from the beginning of the present year. We have no reason to believe that they are disappointed at the present outcome or discouraged as to the chances of the future.

Banking and Currency Reform.

By Hon. Robert W. Bonynge, Denver, Colo., Member National Monetary Commission.

For many years the American Bankers Association has taken a most prominent part in the nation-wide movement for a reform of our Banking and Currency Laws. It has been the leading topic of discussion at every recent convention of your Association.

Before the creation of a National Monetary Commission, you had appointed a Currency Commission to prepare a specific plan for Monetary Reform. Both Commissions, I am happy to say, co-operated in the arduous task assigned to them. The National Monetary Commission was greatly indebted to your Commission for most valuable aid and assistance in the performance of its duties.

It was pre-eminently proper and wise for the National Monetary Commission to seek advice and suggestions from those who, by long and honorable service as bankers, were best qualified to give valuable aid. It was as natural and proper to do so as it would be to look to the eminent lawyers of the country for suggestions for judicial reform. The members of your Commission freely gave the Monetary Commission the benefit of their practical experience. They were actuated by the patriotic motive of endeavoring to assist in framing a banking system that would be just to all alike and meet the needs of the country. At no time did they evince the slightest evidence of seeking to obtain any selfish advantage. They realized full well that the best banking system for their patrons and for the commerce of the country would be the best banking system for the bankers.

The Monetary Commission was not content, however, to consult bankers alone. They sought suggestions and advice from all students of our monetary problems: from political economists and from men engaged in all callings.

Public hearings at which all were invited to attend and offer suggestions were held in 20 or more of the leading cities of the country. It was thus the Monetary Commission was able to frame a measure, which, in its essential features, has received such unanimous support from students of our banking problems, men of affairs in all vocations of life, and practical bankers and financiers.

During the past five years our Monetary Laws have been subjected to the most comprehensive and analytic study and investigation. Their defects and proposals for their amendment have been discussed in every city of the Union at public meetings and at conventions of commercial associations.

Notwithstanding these public discussions, there is still, unfortunately, a great deal of apathy on the part of the general public in these problems and a woeful lack of understanding of the plan which has, since your last annual convention, been unanimously recommended to Congress by the Monetary Commission. No better evidence of this fact could be afforded than the financial planks contained in the political platforms of this year. Although the Monetary Commission's plan has been denounced in two of them, no substitute has been offered and no attempt whatever has been made by any political party to frame any suggestions for constructive remedial legislation.

The business world is tired of political make-shifts and temporary financial measures. They do not want any more patch-work in remodeling our banking laws. They will not be satisfied with mere denunciation of proposed measures. What they want is relief from the present deplorable conditions. Their demand is for true constructive legislation, based on correct and safe principles, so that the American people may have what their wealth and their intelligence eminently entitle them to, and that is—a banking system that will not by its frequent collapses be a constant menace to the legitimate commerce of the country, but which shall at all times be able to sustain and promote that commerce. Nothing else will be satisfactory. Any temporizing legislation on these great questions will only postpone the day for their final settlement and ultimately make the proper solution of them more difficult. I feel confident that I voice the sentiment of the bankers and of the business people who have given serious thought to these matters, when I say that they would infinitely prefer to struggle along under our present antiquated system, bad as it is, for many [illegible] to come, rather than have some haphazard and [illegible] legislation enacted at this time. If the country is not prepared now for a thorough and scientific revision of our Monetary Laws, so as to place our banking system permanently on a safe and sound basis, then by all means let us keep up the agitation and the discussion until the American electorate awakens to the situation that confronts us. It is earnestly to be hoped that that time will arrive before we are compelled to go through another financial panic with its inevitable loss to industry and capital.

It is perfectly safe to say that there is no well informed person who believes that our present banking system is at all adequate to our needs. All the political parties by their platforms of this year recognize it is inefficient. This, in itself, constitutes some advance, and perhaps we should congratulate ourselves that we have made that much progress. It is not a political question. It never should be treated as a political issue. The people do not and cannot be made to divide upon it along political lines.

The leading defects in the present system are now generally understood. The differences that exist are regarding the methods to be adopted for their correction.

It is unanimously admitted that our present method of dealing with Reserves is both antiquated and costly. Our scattered cash reserves are ineffective for use in emergencies. They restrict the loaning power of banks at the very time when, under a properly organized system, the reserves would and should be freely used and credit liberally extended to all solvent and deserving business men. We compel our isolated banks to adopt measures for their own self-preservation which necessarily intensify, if they do not produce, panic conditions. We force a portion of the reserves of practically every bank in the country and the surplus moneys of all sections to be concentrated in New York City. There, at certain seasons of the year, they can only be profitably employed by being loaned out on call on stock exchange securities.

The plentiful supply of money for call loans tends to promote dangerous speculation, leading to financial disturbances when the cash reserves are again required in the regular channels of trade and commerce. Our method of dealing with the bank reserves is unquestionably more responsible than anything else for the weakness of our banking system.

The need for a bank note currency which shall automatically respond to the constantly changing demands of commerce is obvious to all. The American Bankers' Association and numerous commercial bodies in all parts of the country have, for many years, been demanding that some provision should be made for what has become popularly known as an "Elastic Currency." By many it has been believed that the failure to provide such a currency is the chief defect in our existing Monetary System, but a more careful and analytical study of conditions has demonstrated that it is only one feature of the fundamental weakness that attaches to our entire credit system and which may, in one word, be expressed as its "rigidity."

The experience of the World conclusively establishes that the function of note issue cannot be exercised either by a Government, a Government owned bank, or numerous banking institutions, free from disastrous results. With the exception of Russia, every first-class power has turned to some credit currency, either directly or through a government owned institution. Those who contend that the function of currency is fundamentally a governmental function fail to draw any distinction between coinage of silver or printing with full legal tender power and credit currency, which is only a promise to pay [illegible]. They also overlook the fact that the most extensive and most elastic currency of the United States and of Great Britain is the deposit currency, issued by the banks themselves in checks drawn on their deposit accounts. The Government may and should, in the public interest, regulate the issuance of bank note currency, provided the basis upon which it may be issued and the agency or agencies to issue it. But if the monetary experience of the world proves anything at all, it is that a currency issued directly by the Government or through a Government owned institution never has and never can, from the nature of things, be made responsive to business conditions. Its amount is and must be determined by statutory enactments which are inflexible. Statutes cannot be altered to meet constantly changing business conditions. The result is that a currency issued by a Government is always dependent upon the government's financial needs rather than business requirements. It expands, but seldom contracts. Our own experience with the greenbacks ought to satisfy us on that point. Some agency, properly constituted, under government supervision and regulation, must, consequently, be created to exercise, in the people's interest, this important function.

At the present time we have only local banking institutions. They are indispensable to our development. But it is equally necessary that we should have some financial organization of a national character to represent us nationally and internationally in matters affecting the credit and standing of the United States as one of the great financial powers of the world. That organization should also be given the necessary powers and functions to insure effective co-operation between our many thousand isolated banking units for their own mutual protection and the utilization of our numerous banking resources.

The three fundamental defects in our Monetary System are, then, the unscientific treatment of our cash reserves; the rigidity of our entire credit system, and the lack of effective co-operation between our banks. They are now pretty well understood to be the responsible causes for the many bank panics that have disgraced us in the past, and from which all other great commercial nations have been exempt for practically half a century.

The urgent necessity for some kind of co-operation between the banks of different localities, for certain purposes, has naturally led to the formation of clearing house associations. They now number 242. They are all voluntary associations. Their manner of organization, including the admission of new banks to their privileges, the selection of their officers and managers, the power and functions to be performed by them—are all regulated, not by statutory provision, but entirely according to the by-laws and constitution adopted by each association. As new conditions from time to time have arisen, requiring co-operative action on the part of the banks, these clearing house associations have, through a natural process of affiliation, extended their field of operations. They have now become institutions without which our commerce could with difficulty be conducted. They have rendered in the past invaluable services, not only in fostering trade, but in furnishing aid and assistance in times of emergency. But they have never been able, because of the lack of necessary legal power and of proper organization, to prevent periodical suspensions by the banks of cash payments. Their greatest services in such emergencies have been in mobilizing temporarily the resources of their members, and thereby tiding the business of the country over until the financial storm had spent itself. Notwithstanding the eminent services these associations have rendered their right to exercise some of the powers they claim has been gravely questioned, and has recently been the subject of investigation before a Congressional Committee known as the "Money Trust Investigation." The regulation by the New York Clearing House of collection charges on out-of-town items, and the suspension of banks from the association who violate the established rule has been questioned as being in restraint of trade and a violation of the anti-trust law.

It has been argued that their ability, under their rules to refuse a bank clearing house privileges enables them to keep any group of men out of the banking business in New York City because, without clearing house privileges, successful banking in New York would be impossible. It is said that they thus exercise the power of life and death over the banks. However wisely these powers may have been exercised in the past, the fear that they might at some time be improperly used is giving rise to a demand that a certain part, at least, of the business of clearing house associations should be regulated by law. Few, if any, contend that some form of affiliation between the isolated units of our banking system is not necessary. The very existence of the clearing house associations, the functions they perform and the services they have rendered to the business of the country all abundantly and conclusively establish the absolute necessity for some legal form of co-operation for certain designated purposes between our isolated banking units. The method of creating that agency or institution, regulating who shall be entitled to membership in it, and upon what terms, what privileges therein membership will confer, the manner of selecting those who are to manage its affairs, so as to give every section of the country and every legitimate industry some voice in its management, insuring its operation absolutely free from control for sectional or selfish purposes, defining strictly its powers and functions, and how and under what circumstances they may be exercised, and giving to the government, through adequate representation upon its board of directors, the fullest and freest opportunity for supervision of its affairs and management, should and must be provided by statutory regulations.

These are among the objects sought to be accomplished by the creation of the proposed National Reserve Association. By its establishment, we would have an institution under government regulation and supervision, which could safeguard our cash reserves and make them available for use; issue and furnish a properly secured and safe currency that would automatically expand and contract in response to business requirements; act as fiscal agent of the government; keep the government's working balance in the channels of trade; insure co-operation of all the banks in the public interest and enable them to utilize our enormous banking power. These objects are all admittedly desirable of attainment, and it is contended that they cannot be secured except through some similar co-operative agency as that proposed by the creation of the National Reserve Association.

The plan in concrete form for its creation has now been before the country for nearly a year. During that time very few objections to any of its essential or fundamental principles have been advanced. There have been strong objections urged to some of the details of the plan by a few economists and bankers of undoubted ability, but no other or different plan in concrete form has been suggested by anyone that has received any serious consideration. There are some who still refer to the Reserve Association as a central bank. Although there is no more similarity between the two than there is between a clearing house association and a bank. Both have something to do with the banking business, but there their similarity ends. The field of operations of each is clearly marked and distinct. A central bank, as it is understood in this and every other country, is an institution having branches throughout a given country, each engaged in a general banking business, receiving deposits from the people at large as well as from other banks, making loans to individuals and to corporations, acting as the government's fiscal agent and usually having the power of bank note issue. Such have been all the central banks that have ever existed either in this or any foreign country or which now exist. The proposed National Reserve Association radically differs from all such institutions in the very important respect that it is not to engage in the general banking business. In fact, in that sense it is not a bank at all. Neither it nor its branches are to compete with State or National Banks in any field of operations in which they are now engaged; it is simply to be an affiliation or union of all the eligible banks of the country to perform for them and under statutory provisions, and through officers and managers whom they will select, certain necessary duties and functions that can only be performed by some organization of a national character. It is to have branches with local self-government to represent smaller subdivisions of the country. It would act as the government's fiscal agent, and as the custodian of a part of the reserves of its members. To it would be confided, under governmental supervision and regulation, the power of bank note issue. We would thus secure all the benefits to be derived from the organization of a central bank without any of the disadvantages which made the old First and Second Banks of the United States unpopular and finally led to their overthrow. We would have an institution built upon American Democratic principles and modeled absolutely upon our political institutions. But it is said that the proposed machinery is complicated and cannot be easily understood.

The difficulty in understanding the plan of organization of the Reserve Association, I have found, has been easily removed by comparing it to our governmental organization.

It is proposed that all banks of the country coming up to the prescribed standard established should be entitled to become members of the Association. They would become members by subscribing to its capital stock. The capital would be a flexible amount and would grow with the increase of banking capital in the country. Each eligible bank would be entitled to subscribe for an amount of the capital stock of the Association based upon the capital of the subscribing bank. There would be no other stockholders than the banks of the country and no one bank could subscribe for more than its allotted proportion. The stock would, therefore, be as widely distributed as the banking capital of the country. The whole plan is built upon maintaining the independence and integrity of the individual banking units. To secure that end most drastic provisions have been made to prevent the stock of the Reserve Association passing under the control of any individual or group of individuals. It is to be nonassignable. It cannot be sold or hypothecated nor can control of the stock of the Association be acquired by the ownership of a block of shares because it is provided that if a series of banks are owned by the same person or persons, that then each of those banks in the series should not be entitled to separate representation in the Reserve Association, but that all such banks for voting purposes should constitute only one bank, and vote accordingly.

After the different banks of the country had purchased their proportionate amount of the stock of the Association, the subscribing banks of a certain limited territory would first be grouped into what is termed "Local Associations." Each of such associations would be required to have at least ten banks with a minimum capital of five million dollars. The local associations would have local self-government through boards of directors to be chosen by the banks composing the local associations. The local associations would therefore be formed much in the same manner as cities and towns are called to form counties.

The local associations would then be organized into what is termed "District Associations," exactly as the counties make up the States of the Union. There would be 15 such associations in the country at large. Each would be organized around a commercial center or city, and all territory naturally tributary to such city would be included in the District. The different local associations within that territory would constitute the district association. The units for the district would thus be the local association. Each district association would have chosen by the constituent local associations. In each district there would be a branch of the Reserve Association having for that district, all the domestic powers of the Reserve Association.

To secure the equal advantages of the Association for all parts of the country, it is provided that there can be only one such district association in the New England States; two in the Eastern; four in the middle Western; four in the Southern and four in the far Western and Pacific States.

The National Reserve Association would be composed of the 15 district associations and would have its head office in Washington. The unit in the case of the National Association would be the district associations. The National body would have its own board of directors to be chosen by the District Associations, except the seven ex-officio members consisting of three cabinet officers, the Comptroller of the Currency, the Governor, and the two Deputy Governors of the Reserve Association.

The parallel, therefore, between the plan of the organization of the Reserve Association and the manner in which our political subdivisions are created and then united by progressive steps from the city to the county, the county to the State and the State to the Nation, is complete and perfect. One is no more complex than the other, and in operation it is safe to assume that the affiliation of our banks on a plan medeled upon our political subdivisions would work as smoothly as our governmental machinery.

The plan of organization is certainly democratic and American in its scope and character.

The methods suggested for the election of the Boards of Directors of the different organizations composing the Reserve Association is conceded to be novel and at first may appear to be somewhat complicated. The ends sought to be accomplished are to provide self-government for these different bodies, to secure boards of directors fairly representative of the different sections of the country, and of the industrial and commercial interest of all sections, and to keep the boards free from political and financial control or domination. The method proposed gives to each bank, large or small, in the local association, which is the initial organization upon which the Reserve Association is built up, an equal voice in the selection of a majority of its board of directors. A minority representation is provided on all the boards for the stockholding interest based upon the amount of stock owned in the Reserve Association. The commercial, agricultural and industrial interests of each district and of the nation is to be represented upon both the district and national boards by men actively engaged in business, but not associated as officers or directors of banks or financial institutions, and finally the national government is to have its own representatives upon the National Board. If all these desirable objects can be secured by any simpler method than that suggested, I am sure the change would be gladly welcomed. But I am convinced personally that the more the method provided in the Monetary Commission's report is studied, the more it will gain favor and the more patent it will become that the method is no more complicated than conditions make necessary.

The chief powers to be exercised by the Reserve Association are to act as custodian for a portion of the Reserves of the independent banks, to discount for member banks the short time commercial paper held by them, to act as the government's financial agent and to furnish to the country a currency that will fluctuate in amount in response to business requirements.

I fully realize that in addressing this Association it is not necessary for me to enter into a detailed explanation of the manner in which these important powers are to be performed or the great advantages to the real commercial interests of the country that would result from their exercise. All bankers are in practical accord upon these points, although there are differences as to the methods that should be adopted to accomplish the desired results.

There are a good many bankers in the smaller communities, particularly in the agricultural sections, who fear that they might not have a sufficient amount of the class of paper entitled to rediscount at the Reserve Association, or its branches, to make the Association any great aid to them. But they are beginning to understand that no right or privilege of any kind is taken from them by the organization of the Reserve Association. They still would be entitled to use any of their assets as collateral with their correspondents. It would supply them with an additional place where they could go for assistance in case of need. All of them would have some of the class of paper that could be used at a branch of the Reserve Association. That they could use these and still have the right to use any of their other assets with their correspondents. The difference to them would be that their correspondents would be at all times equipped to take care of their wants. Their correspondents would always be supplied with a large amount of the class of commercial paper that could be utilized by the Reserve Association, thereby increasing their reserves and their loaning ability, and thus enabling them to accommodate the country banks. In turn, the country banks would, in this way, be enabled to increase their loaning ability so as to take care of their individual customers. Thus the benefits to accrue from a standardizing of commercial paper and widening the market for it would reach out to every person engaged in any gainful occupation, and would include all elements of our population—the wage-earner, the employer, the farmer, the merchant, the manufacturer and the professional man.

One of the most difficult problems presented to the Monetary Commission was to devise a plan for the retirement of our present bank note currency and the two-per-cent U. S. bonds upon which they are almost wholly based. The plan proposed guards and protects the interests of the government and of the banks, and seems to have stood the test of critical examination.

Fear has been expressed in some quarters that the issuance of bank notes based in part upon commercial paper or government bonds and the counting of these notes by the individual banks as a part of the Reserves, taken in connection with the right of the banks to accept drafts drawn upon them and to rediscount them at the reserve association, would lead to an undue expansion of credits. It is confidently submitted that the strict requirements as to cash reserves and the extensive and plenary powers conferred upon the Association to protect the cash reserves, renders the danger of over-expansion very remote. The most effective means of preventing the evil of over-expansion will be found in this, as in all other countries, to consist in the ability of the management of the Association to regulate credit conditions through the discount rate. It is immaterial how sound the law governing a bank may be, if the management is incompetent it cannot operate successfully. In other words, the efficacy of every law rests with the officers who execute it. Every human institution must depend to a large extent in the last analysis upon the men who are to manage its affairs. The necessary powers to protect the reserves of the Association are conferred upon the managers, every precaution which the experienc of the world has demonstrated to be wise in guarding against the abuse of credit has been adopted, and the greatest care to see that only competent officials are selected to control its affairs have been employed, and that is as far as the law can go.

It must ever be remembered that the Reserve Association is planned to meet the commercial needs of the country. It will not nor is it contended that its establishment would fulfill all our financial requirements. We should have agricultural credit institutions and banks that engaged in furnishing capital for the development of our different industrial enterprises. They should be as they are in other countries, particularly Germany and France, separate organizations, and should be clothed with other and different powers to meet the legitimate needs of industry for long time investment. The establishment of an institution to provide for our commercial needs will inevitably pave the way, as was the case in foreign countries, for the creation of other banking organizations especially designed to take care of our other financial necessities.

In view of the action taken at the last Annual Convention of this Association, endorsing the fundamental principles of the plan which was later recommended by the Monetary Commission, I do not feel it incumbent upon me to delay you longer with an argument in its favor. I believe you are more interested in considering what steps can be taken to secure favorable action upon the plan or on some equally efficient measure for the sadly needed reformation of our banking and currency systems.

It has been my pleasure, during the past year, to address many commercial associations in a great many of the States of the Union upon this important topic. It is my firm conviction that we have no reason to be discouraged. The cause of Monetary Reform is steadily gaining ground among all thoughtful citizens. There is no use, however, in disguising the fact that there is an enormous amount of prejudice and apathy on the part of the public, which must be overcome before we can hope for practical results. But this Association, the National Citizens' League, and other bodies, as well as individuals, are doing yeoman service in that regard, and the effects of the campaign will undoubtedly be manifested when a Bill comes before Congress for actual con-sideration. It may be several years yet before the country will be ready for a full and scientific remodeling of our antiquated banking system, but this Association and the business men of the country who have enlisted in the cause cannot now abandon it. This is the accepted time to continue the campaign of education. It should be our constant effort to point out and make clear to the public the underlying defects of our present system and the essential principles that must be incorporated in any remedial legislation.

The American people are frequently slow to be aroused, but when they are they have a habit of acting speedily and decisively. With the progress that has already been made and with the united and consistent efforts of all who realize the transcendent importance of a wise solution of these problems, we may reasonably hope that in the not far distant future the United States will have a banking system that will no longer cause it to be known among the powers of the earth as a "Financial Nuisance," but which shall be not only a credit to us, but shall likewise be adequate to the needs of the present and of the marvelous material advancement that awaits our people.

Education and Agricultural Development.

By Andrew M. Soule, President of the Georgia State College of Agriculture, Athens, Ga.

The subject matter considered under this caption may be divided into four sections: first, Is there need of extension teaching in agriculture? second, What should extension teaching include? third, Suggestions for the organization of the work along efficient lines; fourth, Some data with reference to the progress and results attained by this method of instruction.

The Need of Extension Teaching.

The present condition of our agriculture is unsatisfactory. It is evident to the most casual observer that a great depletion in soil fertility has taken place in recent years; nor has the malpractice in this direction been arrested. The progress of a nation depends upon soil conservation. It is the one primal and inexhaustible source of wealth when rationally managed. Upon its successful manipulation depends the social, educational and industrial attainments of the people who own and operate it. An appreciation of its deficiencies, methods of overcoming these in an economical manner, and the power to maintain the soil in a highly productive condition constitute the fundamental and constructive factors upon which our whole social and industrial fabric rests. If any means may be devised by which knowledge affecting the soil may be obtained and placed before our land owners which will enable them to maintain high yields, and at the same time increase the productiveness of their soil and reduce the cost of making their crops, it will subserve the interests of the nation more efficiently than anything else which may be suggested at the present time.

The yields per acre of our farm crops have fallen to an alarming degree and this in spite of the sporadic efforts made here and there to maintain or increase yields on the part of the farmer by the use of various soil amendments. The situation is therefore one of national concern, and the importance of the case cannot easily be overstated. Cheap and abundant raw materials furnish the basis of all industries, and the time is now at hand when the stimulation of production along more economic lines than have been followed becomes essential to the welfare and permanency of our industries. From this it should not be concluded that the farmer is expected to raise his crop and sell it at non-remunerative prices. Far from it. There are, however, two viewpoints of production which must always be kept in mind. One is increasing the yield at a greatly reduced cost; the other is lessening the yield and selling at an unusually high price. The one method does not benefit the farmer any more than the other, yet limited production and high prices tend to stifle industry, and to make the cost of living prohibitive for those who live away from the land. On the other hand, the lack of system and definite business methods on the farm have resulted in driving a large percentage of what formerly constituted our agricultural population into congested areas of the towns and cities, and has brought about a condition of serious moment to the welfare of the country. In other words, the crowding of the former agricultural population into the city has left the farms undermanned, and with an insufficient supply of labor to operate them satisfactorily in spite of all the aids to cultivations which inventive genius has brought about in the development of labor-saving implements and devices. If there had been a more general appreciation of the soil, it is possible that under more intelligent systems of management the change of population from rural to urban witnessed in the last quarter of a century and the present degree of unrest brought about by the present high cost of living would have been obviated.

With such knowledge available thousands of persons who have seen the value of their holdings depreciate would easily have paid off the mortgage, established a savings banks account, educated their children, improved their homes, and become more valuable and successful citizens from every point of view.

There is much talk at the present time of the movement back to the land. The great need is to point out to the land owner, and to the boy and girl living in the country, the possibilities of farming where scientific policies are inaugurated, and when this is done the urban movement will have been checkmated. The nation is about to lose its economic equilibrium unless the city-ward movement is retarded. Could any more crucial situation develop than this? The magnitude of the issues involved has not been appreciated as it should be, or else a greater effort to stem the tide and rehabilitate rural conditions would have been made before this late date. There is now a lack of cohesion among the rural population and no spirit of co-operation in the true sense of the word. Under the conditions buying and selling is not carried on satisfactorily and low prices continue to dishearten the farmer. Without social or business organizations to protect and inspire him, he loses interest in his business and drifts away from the land.

Farmers obviously need help in many directions, and it is essential that it be brought to them as quickly as possible and in the most acceptable and easily understood manner. One who has given any thought to the situation realizes at once that scientific knowledge as affecting the problems of the farm has entirely outrun practice. Agencies have been developed for the last half century which through research have discovered a wide array of facts which put into practice would revolutionize farm production, and make it possible for the farmer to dominate nature in a hundred ways where she now dominates him because of his lack of technical information relating to his business. The oft-repeated suggestion that an agricultural revolution may be brought about is not a myth of the imagination, but one of the facts now as well demonstrated as man's mastery of electricity; but in spite of all that is known or appreciated concerning this matter, but little has ever been done to put the knowledge which is to bring about this desirable result in an acceptable form within the reach of those who must possess it if the end sought is to be attained.

What Should Extension Teaching Include?

An intelligent consideration of the subject matter under this caption calls for a definition of what extension teaching may properly include. The term is difficult to define because of the variety of subjects embraced. Generally speaking, it may be regarded as a method of disseminating information on all topics related to agriculture in the broadest sense of the word to those who are unprovided for in an agricultural college and not in position to avail themselves of the course offered therein. The stupendous nature of this task is not and has not been appreciated up to this time. The word stupendous is used advisedly, for extension teaching as defined above proposes to convey definite knowledge to the people of the whole State. It is the one method which suggests itself as capable of enabling the agricultural colleges to reach the masses of farmers more or less effectively. It is certainly vital to the interests of the people and of the institutions which attempt to serve them. Surely, it is the logical method, for truth must be discovered and established through the researches of our agricultural colleges and experiment stations before it can be disseminated, and the present demand made upon such institutions for service by the people of the several States indicates that they will of necessity have to undertake instructional work of this character.

This plan contemplates that the agricultural colleges shall become a clearing house for all those activities which are calculated to advance country life. The diversity of subjects embraced under the term agriculture and the various interests to be served suggest at once the organization of extension work along a number of definite lines. Some systematic instruction may naturally be undertaken, but much of the work will be of a more or less informal nature. Under systematic instruction may be included what is known as the extension school, which undertakes, as its name shows, to carry on definite instructions along certain lines into a given community for a period of three days to a month. This is probably one of the most efficient forms of extension teaching which can be inaugurated in any State.

The experimental farm or definite soil test area will follow next in importance. It should be laid down on a well-defined type of soil which covers a considerable area of one or more counties, and an effort should be made to ascertain through physical and chemical examination of the soil its main defects, and how these might be supplied most economically to increase the yields.

Correspondence courses would be found helpful. The instruction in this instance is based on outlines or syllabi furnished those enrolled. The lecture and reading course will also be found helpful in many communities. In other instances study clubs may be formed, and last but not least under this division would be ranked the work of the boys' and girls' clubs.

Under the head of informal teaching may be grouped a great variety of agencies. Of these probably the most efficient is the farmers' institute, an old and well-established organization which has served as one of the main factors for the dissemination of such agricultural knowledge as the farmers have received up to this time. Then would come the farmers' week generally arranged for at the Agricultural College. Conferences of one kind and another may be arranged either at the college or in various local centers. The occasional lecture would come under this head.

Under obect lesson teaching may be grouped the farm demonstration work, the special train, the fair exhibit, and the educational excursion. Publications will occupy an important place in the extension service, and should include the press bulletins sent out weekly or monthly, the leaflet or agricultural periodical, series of popular bulletins, and traveling agricultural libraries. These include some of the more important and definite ways in which the extension service would attempt to serve the needs of its constituency.

Suggestions for the Organization of the Work.

The nature of the work involved makes it apparent at the outset that it must be carefully organized and efficiently manned where effective service is contemplated. The men chosen for this line of work must be leaders in their respective fields; experts in fact and reality. There was a time when the college man might not have been in as close touch with the farmer as was desirable, but a marvelous change in this respect has lately taken place; so recently in fact that many leaders in extension work have not yet fully realized it.

In the administration of the work it will be well to have an executive secretary or a director of the extension service with a staff of men and clerks under his control. This constitutes the nucleus for the organization and direction of the work. The experts needed in agronomy, horticulture, animal husbandry, agricultural chemistry, etc., will be delegated from the members of the specialized staffs of these departments by the heads of the same on request of the extension director. By this method of organization departmental integrity is preserved and every man is not only brought in touch with the college and the student body, but with the people of the State as well. This interchange of knowledge and experience gives variety and facility to the work, and enables every man employed in the institution to engage in extension work in an acceptable manner without injury to his college duties.

The number of men employed in a State will naturally vary with the appropriation, and, of course, the organization must be adapted to meet local needs. The nature of the task involved makes it clear that liberal appropriations are essential for carrying on the work satisfactorily. These suggestions relative to the organization are made as the result of several years' experience in this line of endeavor.

In organizing extension work within the confines of any State, the college should, of course, undertake to establish a satisfactory relationship with all other agencies at work therein. These agencies may include the Experiment Station, the State Department of Agriculture, farmers' institute organizations, normal schools, district agricultural schools and the U. S. Department of Agriculture. A co-operative plan of work can generally be arrived at which will be satisfactory and enable all to work together in harmony and with greater success than if they endeavored to operate independently. The number of agencies to consider and the relationship which they shall bear to each other, and the nature and extent of the work undertaken by each can only be properly determined by a knowledge of the existing local conditions. An attempt to offer specific suggestions along this line is therefore both impracticable and inadvisable. New alignments and adustments will of necessity have to be made from time to time, and this will necessarily be true of any new work of such a comprehensive nature. There is no reason for discouragement in this direction, however, for the task will not be more difficult than that faced by those charged with the organization and establishment of the agricultural colleges and experiment stations in the several States within the last half century.

Naturally, the center of extension teaching in a given State must be the College of Agriculture. This is the only institution in existence at the present time with the local specialized knowledge necessary to carry the work on effectively. It is a personal work and cannot be carried on at long range or by those unfamiliar with the people and the conditions to be remedied. While some general principles might hold good over wide areas of the country, the crops, soils and seasonal conditions existing in the different sections of a given State are at wide variance, and advice of real benefit to the farmer can only be given by those who have traveled extensively in the State and studied the accumulated data gathered through the researches carried on by such institutions. It would be suicidal to attempt to carry the work on in any other manner. This is the conclusion reached by all men capable of judging the situation with accuracy.

Progress and Results of the Work.

While the public has not yet realized the all-important nature of extension teaching so far as agricultural topics are concerned, the work has already made remarkable progress. Six years ago practically nothing had been done along this line save the organization of farmers' institutes. Now there are extension departments in more than thirty States, employing several hundred men as specialists. In nineteen States alone more than one million people were reached through this agency in 1910-11, with an appropriation of $387,000.00. In 1911-12 more than $562,000.00 was appropriated by thirty-five States for work of this character, and growth in this direction has just commenced. It is quite evident from these figures that every State college of agriculture will have a well-organized extension department within a short time, and that the appropriations for this work will amount to several million dollars in the aggregate, and many million farmers to be reached in a manner which will insure an increase in their efficiency as producers. It is now conceded that the agricultural colleges and experiment stations have had a marvelous influence on the economic development of the United States. It is quite certain that the service which these institutions have rendered up to the present time is to be greatly magnified through the development of their extension teaching facilities.

In justification of this position, it is only necessary to cite briefly what has and is being accomplished along this line in Georgia. The first extension work authorized by the State was commenced two years ago with an appropriation of $10,000.00 per annum. In 1911 the work had become so popular that the legislature appropriated $45,500.00 for each of the years of 1912 and 1913. The work undertaken in the years of 1910 and 1911 included the holding of itinerant or traveling schools, farmers' institutes, teachers' institutes, miscellaneous meetings for farmers and teachers, the organization of fruit and truck societies, and boys' corn clubs and girls' canning clubs. Educational trains have also been operated. In all in these two initial years of work 444 meetings were held, attended by 76,633 people; the distance traveled was 126,639 miles. Including the train service, more than 758 meetings were held, attended by 576,633 people, while the distance traveled aggregated more than 178,517 miles.

With the larger appropriations now available all lines of work already in existence have been greatly expanded, and many new lines inaugurated. The popularity of the work grows with leaps and bounds. For instance, the 19 extension schools held in 1912 were attended by 4,420 persons. These schools lasted for four days each and were scattered over the State, so that a large territory was effectively covered. Twenty-one carefully systematized lectures were given at each of these points, a syllabus being furnished free to each person enrolled. It was both an interesting and inspiring sight to see from 50 to 500 farmers in constant attendance on these schools. The benefit which the discussion of this systematized knowledge in these communities is to confer in the immediate future cannot be estimated in dollars and cents. It is quite evident that the extension school has become a permanent factor in the scheme of agricultural education in Georgia.

Farmers' institutes were held in 103 out of the 147 counties in the State in 1911 with an attendance of 21,870 persons. Already this year 74 miscellaneous farmers' and teachers' meetings have been held, attended by 6,000 persons. Boys' corn clubs have been formed in 123 counties with a total enrollment of approximately 8,000. Girls' canning clubs have been organized in 23 counties with a total enrollment of approximately 2,000. Girls' clubs would easily have been formed in twice as many counties had funds and workers been available. It will be seen that in association with the school authorities of the State and U. S. Department of Agriculture, the College is reaching out and influencing the future welfare of more than 10,000 Georgia boys and girls. The greater efficiency in production which the members of the club organizations have shown and the new point of view which these young people are acquiring are among the least of the benefits which this work is conferring upon those who will presently be charged with the responsibilities of organizing and directing the affairs of the State of Georgia. In all 479 meetings have been held, 98,478 persons reached and 81,761 miles traveled within the past twelve months, a statement which conveys but feebly some idea of the interest which the people of the State are taking in some phases of the extension work as now conducted by the College.

New lines of activity which have been taken up the present year are the soil test areas. This work is being carried on by the department of agronomy and agricultural chemistry. Nineteen acres of land in as many distinct soil types are devoted to the work. A systematic rotation is being established on these soil areas in association with fertilizer test plats. The chemical department is determining the apparent deficiencies in these soils, while the department of agronomy is supervising the planting and harvesting of the crops. Next fall more definite information concerning Georgia soils will be available for the good use of the farmers than has ever existed before. Requests from many counties to undertake work of this character have been declined because of insufficient funds.

In addition, the College of Agriculture, in association with the Bureau of Soils of U. S. Department of Agriculture, is undertaking to make a physical survey of various counties in the State. The chemical department is also making analyses of every type soil found in each county surveyed. It is expected to expand and develop this work until the whole State is covered, and thus place at the disposal of the farmers the most definite and accurate knowledge concerning their soils which science can obtain for them. The value of the work of this character systematized and carried on for a series of years cannot be judged correctly by the present generation, but it means to develop Georgia's agricultural practice along definite economic lines in the near future.

The importance and need of this class of work can be better appreciated when it is stated that between $25,000,000 and $30,000,000 is spent in the State each year for commercial fertilizers.

Anthracnose of cotton causes a loss of about $10,000,000 annually to the State. The department of cotton industry several years ago undertook to develop a strain of cotton which has been named Sunbeam, resistant to this disease. It was distributed to farmers in twenty-one counties in 1911, and proved itself to be disease-resistant. It will be cultivated on about 40 acres of land in each one of these counties in 1912. In addition seed has been sent from the College to 38 other counties this year. The progress attending the work in the past indicates that in the near future this strain of cotton will be so widely distributed in the State that the disease of anthracnose may be successfully held in check. Pullnot is one of the standard varieties of cotton grown in many sections of Georgia. The following data concerning its performance in our demonstration field are of interest. It takes 68 bolls to make a pound; the staple is fifteen-sixteenths of an inch in length; it shows 38 per cent of lint, and the yield in 1911 was 1980 pounds per acre. Sixty bolls of the Sunbeam cotton make a pound; the staple is 1⅛ inches in length; it shows 42 per cent of lint; and the yield in 1911 was 3760 pounds. The possibilities of the service to cotton growers of the State through this line of extension development are unlimited.

Georgia is celebrated as a truck, peach and pecan State. There are many diseases and troubles afflicting these crops, however, and the horticultural department has undertaken to establish eleven test areas in the State for the study of these particular diseases, and it is believed that this department will show as fine a record as characterize the others in which extension service was commenced at an early date.

The need of improved live stock throughout the South is recognized by all who have studied our agricultural conditions. The College has distributed more than 100 head of pure-bred animals to farmers in various counties in the State at a reasonable cost, quality considered. It has introduced, for example, the Tamworth hog, a breed unexcelled for grazing purposes, yet pork may be made for about half the cost on grazing crops as on a ration of corn alone.

An active interest is also being taken in the campaign waged for the eradication of the cattle tick which has now been eliminated from several counties. Several other counties will soon be free from this menace to the cattle industry. The work will be continued until the whole State is freed.

Co-operative work in dairying is being carried on. Eleven silos were built last year under the supervision of the College representative. Advice and assistance is being offered some 38 farmers at the present time relative to the feeding and management of their dairy cows. As a result of this the cost of maintenance has been reduced, the yield increased, and many robber cows eliminated from the herds.

The department of farm mechanics undertakes to furnish plans for various farm structures. Something like 275 plans have been sent out already for barns, silos, hog houses and school buildings.

The enumeration of other extension activities would prove tiresome, but sufficient data have been presented to show the efficacy and desirability of work of this character, and the great influence it is destined to exert on the redirection of our agricultural practice and the development of a constructive economic policy by the farmers of the State. The further endowment of this work and its expansion along rational lines is destined to double and treble the producing power of the Southern farmer.

Land and Agricultural Credit.

By Charles A. Conant, author of "The Principles of Money and Banking" and "A History of Modern Banks of Issue."

The world is facing to-day a grave economic crisis. For centuries land was recognized as the chief and almost the only source of production. Then came the wondrous nineteenth century, with its new mechanical forces, its intricate machinery for multiplying the power of human hand and brain, and its gifts of rich prizes to the captains of industry and finance. For a time the world seemed to forget, in the enjoyment of its new-found luxuries, that these were not the essentials of human life. Population has gone on increasing until cities stand where cornfields grew, until the whir of the loom is heard where cattle mewed, and the world has been suddenly roused by growing scarcity to the primal importance of land and food in the economy of modern life. Our awakened economists and statesmen have discovered that demand for food products is more than overtaking supply, that population is encroaching upon farm land, and that even those lands still available for culture are lying fallow or are inadequately cultivated because the farmer lacks facilities for converting land values into negotiable credit.

It is greatly to the credit of Governor Herrick, so long an honored member of this Association, and to the committee which this Association has appointed, that they have become aroused to the importance of introducing in this country, as far as they are adaptable, the methods already employed in Europe for extending credit to the farmer. I propose to speak to-day upon two forms of banking which have in recent years obtained wide extension and great success in Europe, but are comparatively unknown in the United States. I refer to the conversion of mortgage loans into a readily negotiable form by the issue of bonds and to the system of loans to the farmer through mutual credit societies.

It is the fundamental function of banking and the banker to convert credit which may be good, but is little known, into credit which is known and is therefore readily negotiable. Hence arises the function of the banknote, issued upon the assets of merchants, which converts their individual credit, through the guarantee of the bank, into a form which passes from hand to hand without question as the equivalent of gold.

The question was asked very early in the evolution of modern banking what better security there could be for the issue of negotiable credit than the land, the source of all production and all values. When the people of France tore down in the Revolution the fabric of the monarchy and the existing economic order, they turned to the land confiscated from the church and the nobility and made it the basis of the national currency. In the famous address made by the National Assembly to the people of France on April 30, 1790, it was declared on behalf of the Assembly:

> When it gives to the assignats an obligatory and conventional value, it is only after ensuring for them a value real and immutable—a value which permits them to sustain to advantage the competition with the metals themselves. The property whose proceeds they represent constitutes their intrinsic value; that value is as evident as that of the metal contained in our usual form of money.

Bitter experience proved that these theories of basing circulating paper money upon land had in them the seeds of disaster. For a time, even thoughtful men were puzzled why a value so substantial as that of the land did not afford a proper security for the circulating medium. The answer to the problem is that land is not quickly convertible. Currency, whether of gold or paper, is a tool for quick exchanges. The promise to pay gold for a bank-note at some future time, instead of the present, is like the promise to a hungry man of a dinner at some distant date, instead of at the moment when he needs it. Still less acceptable is the offer of a qaurter section or even of a town lot when the holder of a bank-note desires to convert it into the value on which it is based.

Dangerous and illusory, therefore, are all projects which propose to sanction loans upon land or on other permanent forms of property by banks which bind themselves to meet their obligations at call. Their redemption fund must consist of gold—not land. It is for these reasons that thoughtful American statesmen have resolutely opposed the proposal that national banks should lend any part of their resources upon mortgages. Theoretically perhaps, the loan of a small portion of the capital of a bank, which is the property of the shareholders and not repayable on demand, may keep the danger at a minimum; but the capital of a bank should be considered as a guarantee fund for the protection of its demand liabilities and should be in some form of security more readily convertible than direct loans upon mortgages.

Is there then no means of aiding the farmer by converting into readily transferable form the solid value which lies in his land, buildings, implements and improvements? Yes. Modern European experience has found a way, safe, secure and flexible. It was known from long before the time of Christ that a loan upon land was well secured, if the title was transferred to the lender in the form of a mortgage. But the system of the ordinary mortgage loan has several serious defects. Among these are the difficulty of persuading individuals to lend upon single plots with whose character and value and even their location they are often unfamiliar, and, further, the fact that such loans could not be readily converted into money by sale, nor even transferred until another lender were found also familiar with the value, character and location of the loan and desirous of making an investment of exactly the same amount.

Europe has solved the problem of the ready transferability of mortgage loans and low rates of interest to the borrower by taking a leaf from the experience of the limited liability company in the issue of bonds and shares. In Europe, the man who has money to lend upon mortgage is no longer obliged to make personal examination of the property, nor to risk his capital upon a single investment in a non-transferable form. He has only to buy a negotiable bond—coupon or registered, according to his preference—which he can sell as readily as the bond of the government, and with even less risk of fluctuation in its price. He has behind the bond not merely the land, the source of all wealth, but he has the pledge of a stock company that they have examined the properties upon which loans have been made, that all such properties are held in the aggregate as assets against the outstanding bonds, and that the company has in addition an adequate capital to cover any unexpected shrinkage in the value of the property behind its bonds.

While the development of farm areas in America was in the speculative stage and land values were uncertain, the time was not ripe perhaps for introducing in this country the system of mortgage bonds. But our area of cultivated land has reached up to the foot of the Rocky Mountains, the pressure of population upon the food supply is creating an unsatisfied demand for larger crops, and the time seems to have arrived when we may follow in the footsteps blazed by European experience for the conversion of the land into convertible credit, avoiding the dangerous errors which have been made in times past and appropriating without cost to ourselves the results of foreign experience.

The development of agricultural credit abroad has proceeded along several different lines, adapted to different types of need. These may be defined roughly as the system of issuing mortgage bonds for long terms, as is done by the Crédit Foncier of France and similar institutions in Austria-Hungary, Prussia, Italy and other countries; the system of agricultural credit through grants of public money, under the methods provided for in the renewal of the charter of the Bank of France in 1897, and the system of mutual credit organizations among agriculturists.

It will afford perhaps the clearest idea of the system of mortgage bonds to describe first the organization and methods of the Crédit Foncier of France, although I shall point out further on that there has been too much centralization in the Crédit Foncier to extend its benefits fully to the agricultural community. The fundamental basis of the Crédit Foncier, however, is sound—to extend land credit on the lowest terms by establishing between the borrower and the lender an intermediary which is in a position to obtain money at the lowest rate at which it is offered in the market. The method by which the Crédit Foncier accomplishes this result is by the issue of its own bonds, guaranteed by its capital of $40,000,000, which must never be less than one-twentieth part of the bonds which it has in circulation.

What is the term and character of these bonds? They are made attractive to the borrower by the system of amortization by which they are paid off and by the long terms over which the amortization extends. Amortization, while a subject well understood in this country in relation to sinking funds and insurance reserves, has been applied but rarely in mortgage loans, and when applied it has often been for terms so short that the interest and amortization together imposed a heavy burden upon the borrower. In the loans made by the Crédit Foncier of France, more than three-quarters are for periods of fifty years or more. Hence the amortization charge involves only a small addition to the annual interest, and, as the latter also is fixed at the lowest available market rate, the net annual charge is much less burdensome than the rate of interest alone imposed upon the American farmer in the less developed portions of this country. The rate of interest charged upon loans during the last few years by the Crédit Foncier of France has been 4.30 per cent. For a loan payable in thirty years, the semi-annual payment required has been 2.982 per cent., or just under 3 per cent, making the two payments for the year equal to 5.964, or just under 6 per cent. Where the loan is for forty years, the sum of the two annual payments falls to 5.259 per cent., and for fifty years to 4.882 per cent. It may not be possible to float bonds in this country at a rate so low as to permit loans upon mortgage at 4.30 per cent., but even if 5 or 5½ per cent. is charged, the additions for the amortization of the principal will not be materially greater than in the case of the loans made by the Credit Foncier of France.

What are the safeguards thrown around the issue of bonds by the European mortgage banks? They include, in addition to the property on which the mortgages are placed, a large capital and reserve fund, which in the case of the Credit Foncier of France must equal at least one-twentieth part of the value of the bonds outstanding. Other provisions for the protection of the bondholders, in the case of the French institution, are the following:

Loans must not exceed 50 per cent. of the actual value of the property. In order to encourage building loans, however, the Crédit Foncier stands behind a subsidiary company, which loans a little more.

Loans are not granted upon theatres or mines; and they are not granted upon properties which are undivided or held only for use, unless with the consent of all the parties necessary to constitute a valid mortgage.

Loans must not exceed one-third the value of the property for vineyards, forests, and other property whose revenue is based upon renewal of productive forces.

Manufactories and similar buildings must be valued according to their intrinsic value independent of their industrial efficiency, or good will.

The annual annuity required to pay interest and amortization must not exceed the annual income of the property, thereby excluding loans upon unimproved property.

Properties susceptible of destruction by fire must be properly insured.

In case of default in one of the semi-annual payments, the whole of the loan becomes due within one month.

Upon the subject of foreclosure in case of default, European mortgage banks have large powers, but they are powers designed simply to cut red tape and avoid heavy costs, and complain of injustice to the borrower is rare. In this country a central institution lending upon mortgage, even if incorporated by Federal law, would be subject to the laws of the States in which its loans were made. It would, however, be an easy method of securing comparative uniformity and simplicity in such laws for the new corporation to lay down the rules under which it would make loans and to refuse to make them in those States which did not enact laws conforming to such rules.

What is the cost of loans to the borrower? The rate of interest to the borrower is rigidly limited by the French law to the actual rate at which bonds are sold to the public, plus an allowance of six-tenths of one per cent. for administration and the profits of the company. This would mean that if money were borrowed in New York by the sale of 4½ per cent. bonds at par, the lending rate to the farmer could not exceed 5.10 per cent. It might not be desirable to fix restrictions so rigid for an American bank, because they might in some cases interfere with the flotation of bonds or the making of loans at convenient fractions. With government supervision of such an institution, however, and with a limitation perhaps upon the dividends to be paid to shareholders, it ought to be possible to keep the lending rate to the farmer at a point much lower than he pays under the existing system of disposing of mortgages to individual investors. According to the statements made at a recent conference in New York of dealers in mortgage loans, rates of 8, 9 and 10 per cent. are the usual rates for such loans in North and South Carolina, Georgia, Texas, Mississippi, Louisiana and in the Canadian Northwest.

The average rate of interest shown by the Federal census of 1890 upon mortgages on farm lands was 7.07 per cent.; but it must be remembered that this is only an average, pulled down by such rates as 5.66 in New York, 5.43 in Pennsylvania and 5.58 in Massachusetts, while the average rate (and not the maximum) rises as high as 8.18 per cent. in Minnesota, 8.38 in Texas, 9.79 in Mississippi, 9.87 in Washington, 10.55 in Idaho and 10.97 in Montana.

Would a wide market be found for American mortgage bonds? The mortgage bond has advantages which make it a much sought investment in Europe and are likely to make it a favorite in this country. If issued near par, it has less tendency to fluctuate in market value than other classes of securities. It rests upon the land and the guarantee of the issuing company. It would be issued usually for a long fixed term, but issues would be made for different terms, in order to retire bonds when mortgages were paid off and to make new issues at market rates for the purpose of new loans. In France, the bonds of the Crédit Foncier, while they can be called at will, which prevents the long maturity being capitalized in the price, have a special speculative feature in the prizes which are attached to certain numbers. As this system of lottery bonds is contrary to public policy in this country, the bonds issued by a mortgage bank in America would have to be issued at approximately the market rate for money. Their fluctuations in price would be influenced in a moderate degree by the demand for money and would be influenced very little by other factors. The exact form in which they should be issued, including perhaps the right to call them at a small premium, after certain dates, involves details of calculation which cannot be entered upon at this time.

The essential advantage of the mortgage bond, however, is in drawing into the field of mortgage investments the great mass of saved capital which now tends toward the market for industrial and railway securities because mortgage investments are so difficult to examine and negotiate. If the rate of interest on mortgage bonds is reasonably attractive—say 4½ per cent.—the market for their sale would prove almost without limit. If it were not sufficiently wide in America, it would find indefinite expansion in Europe, where the average rate upon money is lower than in the United States.

How can a mortgage bank be kept within the limits of safety on the one hand and justice to the borrower on the other? It is necessary, if there is to be a great central institution for mortgage loans, holding a special charter from the Federal Government, that it should have the double advantages of the supervision of the State and the efficiency of management of the man of business. To this end, it would probably be necessary that the selection of the head of the bank should have the approval of the President of the United States, that government directors should sit on the board, and that there should be visitation and inspection by representatives of the Comptroller of the Currency or other officers of the government. There should naturally also be many restrictions imposed upon the manner of doing business—limitation of the rate of interest for loans, minimum ratio of capital to obligations, equitable distribution of the loans by territory, limitation of profits, and required additions to surplus.

Would a land mortgage bank accomplish the desired object of affording cheaper and more accessible credit to the farmer? It is of the highest importance, if a land mortgage bank is to be established in America, that it should avoid the tendency towards centralization which has hampered the usefulness of the Crédit Foncier of France to the farming community. The Crédit Foncier has in a measure failed in its original objects by making a larger percentage of loans in cities than on rural property. It also makes loans to municipalities, which might or might not be desirable in this country, but is a field upon which I cannot enter now. Of its loans upon private property from the beginning up to the close of the year 1911, there were 121,976 loans upon city property, representing an amount of about $935,000,000, and only 48,568 loans upon rural property, representing a value of about $246,000,000. While the urban loans are eminently proper and the issue of bonds against such loans forms a convenient manner of converting city property into a negotiable form, the primary aim of a new company in America should be to aid the farmer rather than the dweller in the city. To this end, the proportion of loans to be made by a new institution in cities of a certain size could be limited to a certain amount of its total loans. This, however, would be in the nature of a mechanical limit, which would not go to the root of the difficulty which exists in France. This difficulty is the concentration of all power at the center. France lacks that steadying element which is the characteristic of our government—the sovereign powers of the States, to which it might be necessary to appeal in order to ensure a wide diffusion of agricultural mortgage credit.

In Germany this factor of local control is realized in the Landschaften, or co-operative land credit societies. These organizations are made up of the larger land owners, grouped together to guarantee the bonds which the society issues. The society, having obtained the necessary funds by sale of the bonds to capitalists, lends to its members at a rate about 1 per cent. higher than that at which the money is obtained, in order to pay the costs of administration and constitute reserve funds. In order to render the sale of the bonds easier, special banks have been created under control of the societies themselves. The bonds have been well received on the German money market and during the period of easy money which prevailed from about 1894 to 1900 were placed at rates of from 3 to 3½ per cent. The amount of bonds outstanding in 1909 was about $835,000,000, of which more than three-fourths were issued by societies in Prussia.

But the subject of long-time loans upon mortgages is, after all, only one side of the subject of agricultural credit, and in many cases not its most important side. The mortgage loan system tends to enlarge the area of cultivated land, because much of the work thus done has a continuing value and the interest on the loan and the amortization can be paid from the newly created annual product. There is force, however, in the distinction made by Mr. David Lubin of the International Institute of Agriculture, that for many purposes, what the farmer needs is dynamic money more than static money—a current account upon which he can draw for short periods and special needs, as for the growing and moving of his crops, and upon which he need pay interest only for the money actually in use. As Mr. Lubin declares in a recent discussion of the subject:

"With the ordinary commercial account, every dollar may be placed on the active line of engagement and the dollar not so engaged may be immediately returned to the bank and ceases to pay interest for the time it is not wanted. A mortgage, on the other hand, gives a fixed amount for a fixed period, and this is contrary to the commercial usage which permits the free engagement of every dollar in current business."

It is this department of the field of agricultural credit which has been most fully developed in Germany, and which was so defective in France that the subject was taken up seriously by the government as recently as 1899. In France loans upon goods stored on the farm were long prevented by the civil law, which required that the pledge for a loan should be in the custody of the lender. Even when it was sought to rectify this difficulty by a law of 1898, the fiscal charges were more than twenty times those for realizing an ordinary loan upon hypothecated securities.

To escape these difficulties and promote short-term credit among the farmers, laws were passed on November 5, 1894, and March 31, 1899—the former instituting the local mutual credit banks and the latter the so-called regional banks, which group together the local banks of a given district. The State has placed at the disposal of the regional banks, for the purpose of making advances to the local banks, two sums—one fixed and the other annual—derived from the resources of the Bank of France. As the Bank of France is compelled about every twenty years to seek the extension of its charter, the opportunity was seized in the law of November 17, 1897, which made such an extension to demand that the bank should make to the government a loan without interest of 40,000,000 francs ($7,720,040), which the government in turn was to lend to the regional banks. This sum was increased in 1911 to 80,000,000 francs ($15,440,080). In addition to these capital sums, the bank pays into the public treasury annually for the same purposes a tax equal to one-eighth of the rate of discount upon that portion of the circulation which exceeds the metallic reserve. It is provided that this annual payment shall not in any case be less than 2,000,000 francs ($386,000), but the actual proceeds have reached each year between 3,000,000 and 5,000,000 francs.

The local agricultural banks which are authorized to avail themselves of these sums may be composed of the whole or a part of the members of one or more agricultural syndicates or mutual insurance societies. Their initial capital is formed by shares, subscribed exclusively by the members, but only one-fourth need be paid up. The liability of the members is limited in some cases, but there has been manifested a tendency in France to adopt unlimited liability as the best safeguard for healthy co-operation. These societies are affiliated with the regional bank of their department. They are required to subscribe for a certain number of shares in the regional bank and are then admitted to the credit facilities afforded by this bank, which discounts the bills of the local society or grants loans directly to the society to constitute its working capital. The method generally employed is the discount by the regional bank of a bill signed by a member of a local society, which has been approved and endorsed by the local committee. The bill thus bears three signatures, which makes it available for rediscount by the Bank of France. The interest rate of the regional bank is usually 3 per cent., to which 1 per cent., or a little less, is added by the local bank for the expenses of management and the formation of a reserve fund. The size of the loans is in some cases proportionate to the shares which members have subscribed, but in other cases the amount is limited to 1,000 or 2,000 francs, according to the kind of cultivation in the district and the financial strength of the applicant. The form of guarantee may be a surety, or the deposit of securities, but special guarantees, beyond the liability of the local bank, are not required by some associations except when the loan exceeds a certain amount. Many regional banks allow only bills for three months, with the privilege of two, three, or four renewals, according to the by-laws of the bank. At some banks the loan is granted for as long as a year, but installments are required at shorter intervals.

The regional banks are regulated by the law of March 31, 1899, and are the institutions which receive from the Mutual Agricultural Credit Bureau (Crédit Agricole Mutuel) the money which has been advanced by the Bank of France. A special committee nominated by the Minister of Agriculture distributes these public funds among the regional banks, and a body of government inspectors supervises their work. These banks receive loans without interest up to four times their paid-up capital, for a period of five years, subject to renewal. If, for example, there are in a department ten local banks which have each subscribed 5,000 francs, their shares form an initial capital of 50,000 francs for the regional bank, and the government will make an advance of four times this amount, or 200,000 francs. The regional banks have the privilege, moreover, in case they need additional resources, of having their bills rediscounted by the Bank of France or other banking institutions.

The number of regional banks increased from 9 in 1901 to 66 in 1905 and 96 in 1910. Their loans during the year 1910 in the form of discounts of new bills were 66,957,353 francs; loans outstanding at the end of the previous year, 40,971,508 francs; making a total of 109,180,081 francs, against which repayments were received during the year of 59,887,572 francs, leaving net loans outstanding at the close of the year at 49,292,509 francs ($9,500,000).

France possesses several types of credit banks, formed voluntarily and without State aid, among them being the rural banks promoted by Louis Durand, similar in organization to the Raiffeisen banks of Germany, but having a semi-religious character in their connection with the Roman Catholic Church. The number of these banks reported at the close of 1910 was 672, with total assets of 12,569,915 francs ($2,450,000).

It is in Germany, however, that the system of co-operative popular banks has obtained the widest extension. Germany possesses several types of popular banks, some being intended to aid the laborer on the farm and in the mills, as well as the owner of agricultural property. They are all worthy of serious study in this country, but the limited time at my command will restrict my discussion chiefly to the rural banks, organized under the so-called Raiffeisen system, founded by Herr Raiffeisen, a philosophical thinker of the last century. The Raiffeisen system is built up on the principle of co-operation among farmers, usually peasant proprietors. There were in Germany in 1909 12,614 rural banks, numbering 1,163,186 members, or an average of 92 members for each bank. The principle upon which these are established is that of the unlimited joint and several liability of the members; but as limited liability has been found to afford adequate protection, about 8 per cent. of the German banks are now based upon limited liability rather than unlimited.

The credit extended by these banks is chiefly personal rather than by way of mortgage security, the united guarantee of the members of a society being adequate protection to the lender for the repayment of the money borrowed. The working capital is derived from the shares which are paid up by the members, the reserve fund, savings deposits and deposits on current account, and finally the sums which the bank procures by means of loans from central co-operative banks, other types of banks, or private individuals.

The business of the rural bank consists for the most part in making advances to the members. Surplus cash on hand is deposited with the central banks or invested in banking operations with third parties. The loans to members consisted at the end of 1909 of loans on current account to the amount of 425,995,403 marks ($101,250,000), or 28.3 per cent. of the total, and loans for fixed periods to the amount of 1,082,446,388 marks ($258,000,000), or 71.7 per cent. The members guarantee the fulfilment of their obligations to the bank by finding sureties, by the deposit of valuables, including stock certificates, by giving a mortgage, or merely by their personal promises. The finding of sureties is the form of security usually preferred. The period of the loans varies from six months to two or three years, and in exceptional cases for a longer term. The principal safeguard, however, for the success of the rural banks lies in the limited area of their operation and the nature of rural life, which enables the member of a local institution to observe, from day to day, the manner in which his neighbor is utilizing the money which he has borrowed.

The total liabilities of the rural banks in 1909 for the whole of the German Empire amounted to about 1,900,000,000 marks ($455,000,000), being an average of 153,000 marks per bank, or 1,664 marks ($400) per member. The resources held against these liabilities were made up chiefly of 1,650,000,000 marks in savings deposits and deposits on current account, indicating that practically 85 per cent. of the funds advanced by the associations to their members were derived from their own depositors. Liabilities to others, apart from share capital and reserve, were 217,487,465 marks ($51,750,000), constituting only 11.2 per cent. of total liabilities.

The need of combination was felt at an early stage by the rural banks. Such a combination was brought about for propaganda, education and mutual defense by the so-called federations. Entirely independent from them, however, are the central banks, which undertake the provision of capital for the rural banks and the employment of their surplus funds. There are provincial central banks and general central banks, most of them being co-operative societies with limited liability. Speaking broadly, the central banks fulfil for the rural banks the same functions which the rural banks fulfil for their members. Into the tills of the central banks go the surplus deposits of the rural banks and from these resources loans are made to the local banks which have need for them. Of the available resources of the central banks reporting for 1909, amounting to $62,600,000, the proportion provided by deposits of members was $44,500,000, or 71.3 per cent., and 9.8 per cent. more was derived from capital and surplus. The central banks make loans to the rural banks either in the form of advances on current account or loans for fixed periods. Contrary to the rule prevailing in the loans of the rural banks to their members, the preponderance in the loans of the central banks is on the side of current accounts. Out of about $43,300,000 in loans outstanding in 1909, practically 95 per cent. were on current account. Through the central banks the farmer is given access to the general money market, and is able to obtain funds for temporary purposes without the formalities, expense, and locking up of capital incident to mortgaging his land for long terms.

Having outlined briefly the various systems in operation in Europe for extending credit to the farmer, the important question arises how far these systems and methods are adaptable to the needs and conditions of this country. We may very well ask:

> Can we maintain a successful mortgage land bank, whose assets will always be sound and whose securities will always stand near par in the market?
> Can we escape the diversion of the loans of such an institution from the country to the city, which has detracted from the value of the Crédit Foncier of France as a help to the farmer?
> Can we apply public funds, as in France, to the extension of agricultural credit?
> Can we utilize the priciple of self-help among agriculturists in combining their resources through a co-operative society for granting loans to meet temporary needs?

These questions cannot be answered hastily or dogmatically. They are only the primary questions, whose answer depends upon many secondary questions of method, of management, of national temperament and of local conditions. It has been possible, in my brief remarks to-day, only to skim the surface of the development of agricultural credit in Europe—to draw the outlines of the picture, whose details can be painted in accurately only after prolonged and expert study. For this reason, I believe that the farmers' associations which have been demanding the appointment of a special commission of inquiry by the Federal Government are following the right road. To legislate hastily and unwisely might prove worse than not to legislate at all. Another collapse like that of 1893 would postpone sane agricultural banking for another generation. The farmer has the right, however, to demand the same facilities and opportunities for obtaining credit as the manufacturer, the merchant and the banker, with the important limitation, to which they also are subject, that the facilities afforded him must be adapted to the character of the assets he has to pledge, in accordance with those sound principles of banking which have been worked out through many errors and much travail and tribulation of spirit during the past two centuries.

A central organization for the issue of mortgage bonds, recognized by the Federal Government, like the Crédit Foncier, would probably be required in order to give the bonds a sufficient guarantee and a wide market. Organizations under State law, especially if they lacked the guarantee of the State government, would defeat the principle of a broad reform in mortgage banking, because the bonds issued in the poorer States could not be sold at home or abroad at the same rate as those issued in the richer States, where there was less need for such institutions. Without committing myself at this time to a definite plan, it is probable that it would be found advantageous to establish State organizations, charged with making local loans, under rules laid down by the central organization, and that the latter should be able to issue its bonds under its own guarantee, secured to it by the deposit of mortgages or bonds guaranteed by the State associations. In other words, it might be found advisable to build up a co-operative democracy of State mortgage loan banks, united into a powerful central organism, similar to that proposed in the plan of the Monetary Commission for strengthening commercial banking credit.

It is not impossible—though here again I wish to be understood as speaking only tentatively—that the three great branches of banking, the commercial credit banks, the mortgage banks, and the postal savings bank, might be linked together in a system which would give greater flexibility to credit than it has ever enjoyed in our banking history, by the aid which each, without violating sound banking principles, would be able to extend to the others in time of need.

If the funds of the postal savings bank could be invested in a certain proportion in mortgage bonds, the interests of the saving masses would be linked with the interests of the farmer in a way which would keep local savings at home and encourage the co-operation of the two great producing classes of the country. Such an investment—probably not advisable in excess of one-half of the assets of the savings banks—would increase their earnings and permit a higher rate of interest to be paid to depositors than is contemplated under the existing system of investment in government bonds and deposit of savings funds in national banks. It is probable that within five or ten years the deposits in the postal savings bank, if it duplicates the experience of European banks, will amount to several hundreds of millions, and there is no obvious reason why, under proper safeguards, this great fund should not be applied, at least in part, to the encouragement of agriculture. The workingman who laid up his savings in the postal savings bank would then be directly aiding the owner of the soil, who would be sowing the crops and raising the cattle for the daily food of both.

While the proposal to create a central reserve association for the co-operative organization of the commercial banks should in itself be considered independently of the form and structure of the central mortgage bank and the postal savings bank, it is possible that if Congress showed a disposition to deal with all these topics broadly and intelligently in their relations with each other, they would arouse a deeper interest and a warmer support in every class of the community.

Bankers in Their Relation to the People.

By Hon. Charles E. Townsend, United States Senator from Michigan.

Mr. President, Members of the American Bankers' Association, Ladies and Gentlemen:

It was not our disappointment, but mine rather, that I was not with you on Tuesday. The President has stated that there was a misunderstanding. Of course, I am bound to believe that it was not a misunderstanding on my part, but when I read in the newspapers on Wednesday morning that I had not even responded to the invitation that had been extended to me, I felt that at least I had not been courteous to the guests of Michigan, who were here from most of the States in the Union. The invitation as it came to me was to speak to-day. Later I was called on the telephone and, as I understood it, requested to speak the day before. I did not understand that I was to be here on the 10th. I could have been here just as well. Knowing your President so well as I do, I am bound to believe that I must have misunderstood him.

Now, Mr. President, as I said to you over the telephone, and as I say to the Convention now, I have no particular message to deliver to the bankers.

I am deeply sensible of the honor you have conferred upon me through your invitation to address the Convention, and also of the importance of this occasion. Ordinarily very little attention would be paid to what I might say to an Association of bankers—and this would be most proper, for I am in no sense an authority in banking, and it would seem almost presumptuous for me to participate prominently in the deliberations of men who, through long experience and close study, are familiar with every phase of finance, its history, its present condition and its pressing future needs—but in this age of politics, when no matter of business or personal conduct and life are exempt as collateral from the demand of partisan politics and political necessities, a national legislator and especially a United States Senator speaks under the presumption of talking for political effect, and his statements are suppressed or exploited, according as they are conservative or sensational.

I have no great, new scheme of finance to reveal to you, nor have I any magic cure for existing evils in our currency system, but I propose, during the few minutes which I shall occupy, to discuss some influences and conditions which affect banking as a necessary part of our industrial life, and which affect also every other industry of the country, indeed, which go to the peace, progress and prosperity of the nation itself.

At the outset permit me to say that I am not a pessimist. My stomach is usually in good order and my ambitions are not so overmastering as to compel me to create issues for my personal use. Whatever intellect I may possess, whatever patriotism resides within my breast, permit me to see the certain steady progress of the past, and to view with hope and courage the years ahead. I do, however, recognize the great fact that this is a government of men, of men who are good and of men who are bad; of men who are selfish and of men who are more altruistic; of men who view organized government as a means for protecting themselves in their efforts to exploit other and weaker men for personal profit and favor. Of men also who believe that government, popular representative government, is instituted for the general welfare, for the weak as well as the strong, for the small as well as the great, for the masses as well as the classes. Out of the contest between these different kinds of men there has been evolved a sure and steady progress in popular government, and human rights and opportunities have been enlarged and safeguarded. If these assumptions are begging the question then must it be so, for it seems to me they are so axiomatic that I shall not attempt to prove them.

I am not complaining very bitterly at the work of the of government and that that government was established and is maintained for the general welfare and any wrong which is inflicted by the fortunate upon the unfortunate, by the successful upon the unsuccessful, however philanthropic the professed motive may be, is as certainly wrong and quite as responsible as the mistaken efforts of the unsuccessful to take by force from the successful.

I cannot agree with the proposition that it matters little that a few people acquire the wealth if these few keep the money in circulation; that the means of acquisition are not so important as the method of distribution. Wealth is a most useful agent or instrumentality in the work, growth and development of a man or nation, but it is not an absolute necessary factor. Men and nations have grown great and strong in poverty and adversity. Indeed, the qualities which make for real progress and enduring greatness, individual and national, are character and stability, and these are not the natural offsprings of wealth.

Real wealth is the product of intelligence and labor. Intelligence or mental insight catches glimpses of engines and automobiles, and canals, and mines and factories, and newspapers and banks, and of the million other things which together make up material life, and then it directs labor to unfold them. This insight may, I repeat, be the result of genius or circumstances, and it must be properly indulged. But the labor which unfolds them and the consumers or users who make them valuable by furnishing a market for them, are factors in the governmental problem thus presented which must be considered. Government has to do with the relations of production and consumption, which comprehend, necessarily, transportation and financing. Can we say that the business or material opportunities of our republic exist either in connection with the country's natural resources, which includes of necessity the service of the public with those resources, or else in relation to that broad, limitless and intangible field wherein energy, genius and enterprise may find the elements for ministering to the desires of men and women? One includes the necessities, the other the luxuries of life. It is true, of course, that these classes of resources are relative, for gradually, yet surely, the luxuries of yesterday are becoming the necessities of to-day, but to my mind there is a difference and one that government can recognize. Coal, iron, copper, the precious metals, water, power, natural gas, oil, timber, irrigation possibilities, transportation facilities, all necessary means of communication, agricultural lands, especially those on the public domain, food products, banking—all of these, and others which may suggest themselves to you, are in their nature vital to the very life, security and progress of the people, and therefore it is important that there should not be monopoly of them or of any of them. It does not make a difference to the masses, and therefore to the republic, whether a few shall acquire by any means, no matter how benevolent their intentions, these necessaries. They should be acquired lawfully and should be controlled so as to contribute to the general welfare. There is a test which can, with some degree of exactness, be relied upon to determine whether individual or corporate unrestricted control is dangerous or not, and that is this: Is it possible for such control to impose unnatural burdens upon the people? Can it produce a business panic? Is it possible to destroy business by stopping the financial circulating medium at its will or fancy? Can it control or stop production of a necessity of life? Can it arbitrarily impose artificial burdens upon the people which they must bear? If such control can be so exercised, then surely the public is not being protected in those inalienable rights of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness which are supposed to attach to membership in the republic.

On the other hand, greater latitude should be and can be given to individual and collective effort in matters which naturally contribute to the whims and fancies of the people and which are not necessities of life. But even in this realm the operation should be honest. Our strength and perpetuity as a nation depends upon the patriotism and loyalty of our citizens to the government. Patriotism and loyalty are founded on respect and no intelligent people will respect a government which tolerates unfairness or dishonesty. The equipage and livery of unworthy opulence are quite as discouraging to national loyalty as the flaunting of the red rag of anarchy.

Business, big business, should ask for no special favors. It should ask only its rights and it should never forget that with its rights go duties which are quite as imperative as are the privileges which it demands.

The other class of our people who are retarding true progress are the professional reformers. They are found in almost every position in life. They frequently own a newspaper, or a magazine, and nothing in the publisher's line is more profitable at this time than sensationalities. Sometimes the professional reformer is found on the lecture platform, for his responsibilities rest lightly upon him and he believes that the people want the unusual rather than facts. Generally he is a politician and wants office and power. He creates issues, uncovers imperfections and condemns real and imaginary wrongs. He is always short on definite and specific remedies, but long on denunciations. Not infrequently he is a political blackmailer and demands tribute from those he threatens. These professional reformers discourage the real progressive, for his zone and practical methods are overlooked in the gyrations of the spectacular faker, and the things of value which could and ought to be done are passed by as immaterial. But I am not hopeless, nor am I despondent. I believe that good will be the final goal of all these attacks. They are, as I have said, generally based upon some foundation of truth, and while the demands of the professional reformer are out of all proportion to the real evil, and sometimes more disastrous in their effects than the thing sought to be remedied, still the particular wrong is cured. When a boy I was sent into the wheat fields in the springtime to pull the red root from the grain. It was a noxious weed and should have been destroyed. In the spring when the wheat was small I could go over the field and remove the weed without injuring the grain. That was reforming the wheatfield. Another way to have destroyed the red root, seed and branch, would have been to have waited until harvest time and then to have set fire to the grain. The weeds would have been destroyed and the fire and smoke would have attracted wide attention and the farmer would have been notorious as a radical reformer. He might have burned up his fences and set fire to the neighbors' grain. The destruction of wheat might have brought poverty and hunger to himself and family, but he would surely have destroyed the red root. The professional reformer is playing with fire. He plies the torch and in some places the fire wardens are insufficient to check the flames and the good as well as the bad is destroyed, but in time the fire sufferers organize for safety and out of disaster finally comes better and surer protection.

You gentlemen are prominent and influential in the financial affairs of your country; you are identified with business in such a way that its success depends to no insignificant extent upon you. A responsibility far in excess of that which devolves upon men in other walks of life rests upon you. For some years in the world's history banking was not considered the most honorable calling, but now the people generally, and especially the most thoughtful and intelligent of them, recognize the great service which the honest banker renders to the commercial and industrial world. More and more he is coming to be the confidential, safe and indispensable adviser of the business man, and though now and then a banker goes wrong and defrauds his creditors and causes people to lose faith in the bank and the banker, yet the total loss from banker's faithfulness and corruption is infinitesimal, compared with the whole confidence imposed, and the real service he has rendered the public is immeasurable.

Your great Association has it within its power to exert an uplifting influence on business generally which will do much to check the trend toward socialism and the disposition to turn to Government ownership. That our currency system should be reformed there can be no doubt. That the bankers of the country are the best informed as to what our needs actually are and as to what reforms should be adopted is equally clear to me. But I do not lose sight of the fact that the professional politician for a long time has found it seemingly popular to attack the banks, and while he has usually been a financial failure and has known nothing worth while of banking, yet he has condemned every scheme of reform which has been advanced, and his eloquence has been more potent with the people than his character and ability would seem to warrant. But you are not entirely blameless. You have been so busy making money for your stockholders that you have at times got out of touch with the great masses who never can own stock in banks, but who are interested in the general welfare and who help to create that public sentiment which is at the foundation of all law and all government.

Mr. President, I reiterate, your organization represents a mighty influence which can be and ought to be used for the good of our country. You are in touch with its enterprises and can in a measure shape and direct them. Your power is great, and it should be, and I believe it generally is exerted for good. We have heard much of late of a Money Trust, and it has been charged that the great banking interests are organizing to control arbitrarily the business of the country. As a member of the Senate Committee which had hearings on this subject, I am compelled to admit that I was unable to discover any tangible evidence of such a condition, although I have no doubt of your necessary relation to business. It is close, confidential and comprehensive, but I cannot bring myself to believe that bankers as a whole or through their organizations have lost sight of their great calling, viz.: the conservations of the country's finances for the protection and good of the people who make the deposits. It is of great importance that the banker shall be able to pay his depositors, and to that end he must reinvest his deposits at a profit, but he must play no favorites, neither has he any right to speculate, as we commonly use the term, with the trust fund entrusted to his keeping. If I could have my way no man should be connected with any bank in charge of the bank's funds who could not live upon his salary or who felt that it was right for him to "play the market." And I would not permit a bank to engage in any business not connected with banking, excepting, of course, the temporary conduct of such business as the incident of forfeited securities placed upon it. Banking is a business in itself and it should be restricted to its objects of incorporation.

There are two kinds of business men who, I believe, should be of exceptionally high character and ability: bankers and newspaper publishers. The former exercise a great influence on the business of the country, the latter on the intellectual, moral and political life of the nation. No incompetent, unworthy, dishonest, vicious or ignorant man should be connected with either. We are approaching the time, indeed we have now reached it, when fitness in all its broad qualities is being required of the banker. The time will come when he who edits and publishes a newspaper or magazine shall be morally and intelectually fit for that great responsibility.

Gentlemen, I realize this talk to experienced bankers will seem academic, and such no doubt it is, but I did not engage to talk technically to you. The practical business man would hesitate to embark in the aeroplane, but I have suggested to you the general idea which has come to me, viz.: the necessity for bankers in particular, and for business men generally to recognize the obligation which rests upon them to serve the general welfare while serving themselves.

What the Government is Doing for Agriculture.

By Bradford Knapp, Special Agent in Charge of the Farmers' Co-operative Administration Work in the Department of Agriculture.

Mr. President and Gentlemen of the Convention:

My speech will be a little more elastic than the usual one, as it is all contained in my head, and is, therefore, subject to be extended or reduced according to the necessities of the occasion. I will endeavor to condense it as much as possible.

The great necessity of the present day for the agricultural class may be divided into three important things. First, there is the necessity of a wider dissemination of knowledge already in existence on agricultural subjects; I would have common and every-day knowledge regarding scientific methods of agriculture. Secondly, a better system of finance for the farmer, about which you have just heard a very able presentation of the foreign system. And third, the doing away as much as possible of the wasteful system that we now have in this country in distributing the output of the common family.

I wish that time were available this morning for me to discuss the first and the last of these three propositions, but not having the time I will discuss for a little while some things that have been done toward the solution of the first of these important propositions.

I believe that the greatest question regarding production to-day in this country is the question of the dissemination of knowledge. If the knowledge that is in existence in the hands of our agricultural colleges, in the hands of our experimental stations, in the hands of the Department of Agriculture at Washington, and in the hands of the best and most successfud farmers everywhere, could become the common practice of farmers universally, it would revolutionize the agricultural production of this country. You ask the different farmers of the great State of Iowa—those farmers who are producing from 65 to 75 and 80 bushels of corn to the acre—what is the average production of corn in that great State, and they will tell you that they produce from 75 to 80 bushels an acre. Whereas, as matter of fact, the production is only between 30 and 40 bushels to the acre. That means that a large number of farmers are producing much less than that number of bushels to the acre. Now, if you could take every man who is cultivating the soil in that great State and make him produce, by modern scientific methods, as much as the best farmer produces, you would multiply the production of corn in that State many, many times. The same is true in almost any other State in the Union.

Methods have been devised of recent years for disseminating knowledge among the average farmer. Half a century ago a programme was started upon which organized colleges and experimental stations for teaching agriculture. To-day in this country less than 2 per cent. of the boys and girls can actually attend an agricultural college and get an agricultural training. Take the State of North Carolina, for example. There are 185,000 white farmers in that State. If 1 per cent. of them could attend an agricultural college and take the course they would be enabled to double, indeed, to multiply almost by ten, the capacity of that institution in order to educate them. We see that it is not feasible to send all of the boys to the agricultural college. At least, that is true of the present time. These agricultural colleges are doing splendid work. Our experiment stations and the agricultural colleges are necessary adjuncts to our agricultural plan of education. They have garnered a great deal of the most valuable knowledge, and it will always be necessary for us to have men who are delving into the realm of science and finding out new things and experimenting with them, and reducing them to a practical proposition that can be taken to the farmer for his benefit. We have been writing textbooks and bulletins, and we have been having lectures in numerous institutes throughout the country. All of these have helped and advanced the cause of better agriculture.

I wish to cast no reflection whatever upon other means of taking the information to the farmer, but just simply to talk about a system that fits into the machinery that we already have in existence and complete the problem. If you were going to hire a man to construct a building on your land, would you hire a carpenter who had taken a correspondence school course in architecture and carpentry? If you were going to employ an expert in any line, would you take a man who simply had a reading knowledge of the things to which he was to devote his time in your employ? As I say, I do not wish to cast any reflections upon a correspondence school or upon a method of reading in order to get knowledge, but what we need is personal contact. Our very educational system itself is founded upon personal contact between the instructor and the one being instructed. We have designed and have had in operation in the Department a system of instruction to take to the farmer knowledge with reference to the several things that he has to do upon the farm, and to help him solve the problem that he meets there. It is about that system that I want to talk to you.

In this country for years we have been pursuing a plan of each farmer being left to his own resources. He cultivates the way his father did or the way his grandfather did, it may be; and no opportunity has been given him to get out and get the knowledge necessary to change his methods. The farmer is a conservative. Methods with him must be changed slowly. It takes actual occular demonstration to prove to him that the method that you are advocating, which is new and strange to him, will actually do the things that you claim for it. In 1904, when the Mexican Cotton Boll Weevil was threatening that great industry in the South it was found that former methods must be radically changed in order to prevent the going out of existence of that crop, which is second only to corn in this country; that crop which largely goes to give this country the balance in trade, the greatest single cash crop of the United States. Farmers were lying idle, many of the farms were abandoned, and the crop production in the cotton States amounted to practically nothing, and it was necessary to take heroic measures to reestablish the cotton industry on a firm and sound basis in the face of that pest. To do that it was thought best by the founder of this work to get in personal contact with the farmers, to teach them through a system of experts going to them and actually teaching them by demonstration on the farm. What they needed was expert and scientific knowledge with reference to the things that they must do in order to raise a crop of cotton under boll weevil conditions. That knowledge was taken to them, and they demonstrated it with their own hands, under the instruction of agents of the department, which resulted in their being able to produce as much cotton under boll weevil conditions as they had produced before when that pest did not exist.

Sometimes the average farmer thinks that conditions are untoward, and that it is Providence that is to blame for the things which he fails to do himself. It reminds me of the old preacher who was a good farmer as well as a preacher, and, when his congregation asked him to pray for rain, as they had not had much rain in that section for a long time and they were suffering for the lack of moisture, his prayer was: "Oh, Lord, in accordance with the petition of the people we pray Thee to send rain upon the land. But Thou knowest, Oh Lord, that what they need is not more rain, but more sense and more manure." (Laughter.)

If we get a mixture of sound sense in farming, with good practice in the converting of the knowledge we have already got in common universal practice, as I said before, we will change conditions. And so, through this agency system, the agent went not to one farmer in the county, not to one farmer in the community, but to a large number of farmers, taking from 40 to 100 farmers into the county and getting them to cultivate at first, because they were doubters, a small part of their farm, one acre, under their instructions, the agent always having the plan of convincing the farmer that this method was a better method than the old method that he had practiced. And so would introduce on this new acre a deeper plowing, better preparations of the soil, the value of better seed, carefully selected and carefully preserved, and the testing of the seed before planting to see that it had germminating power. He knew he could not use the fertilizer. The shallow cultivation of the property for the purpose of retaining the moisture in the soil was necessary to promote growth, resulting in 999 cases out of a thousand in the doubter being able with his own hands to raise twice as much on the acre he planted under our instructions as he did on the common acre on his ordinary property.

Last year in the State of Louisiana, for example, we had reports from over fifteen hundred—definite reports from over fifteen hundred of the men in that State so instructed through a system of agencies. The average production of corn of those fifteen hundred men on over five thousand acres of ground was 46 bushels of corn to the acre. The average of that State is 18 bushels. The average production of those farmers in cotton was nearly 1500 pounds of seed cotton to the acre, where the average of the ordinary farmer of that State is 500 and some odd pounds of seed cotton to the acre.

With a little beginning this work has extended all over the Southern States, and efforts, as I said before, to meet that great problem of enabling the farmer there to combat the boll weevil has now extended to the House of Congress, so they are able to conduct a modern scientific agriculture along all lines to the solving of the better agriculture of the State.

In these eight years this work has extended until we have now in the employ of the Department practically 850 field agents working in county communities, one man to a county, an expert, broad-minded, practical farmer who can go to the other farmers and show them how to raise crops and do a better system of work upon their farm than they have ever done heretofore.

This system is susceptible of development. When the farmer is once convinced by the simple demonstration other steps of progress suggest themselves. The planting of the numerous crops for the purpose of building up the soil fertility, the getting into rotation of crops, the growing of more of the home supplies, the diversifying of the agriculture, naturally come from the suggestions of the agent, and each of these things is worked out through a demonstration which the man sees with his own eyes.

As the years progress with each farmer, as we work along with him, he develops wonderfully. I remember a circumstance last year when in the northern part of Mississippi. It was the town of Winona. When we were holding a meeting there a farmer in the crowd came and brought a stick of cotton and corn he had raised on his demonstration farm, and he had about all of his land under the instructions of the Government by that time, and he told how he used to raise three bales of cotton on his farm and about 450 bushels of corn, and never had corn enough to feed his stock through the winter, and that now he was raising 1,500 bushels of corn and 11 to 12 bales of cotton on his farm, that he was out of debt and that he felt doubly thankful to the Department for its service in educating him to what he called "beginning to be a farmer." A merchant standing near by said that is a fact. He said "Three years ago there was not a man that would trust Varner with a chew of tobacco, and now we run after him when he comes to town to sell him anything he wants on credit."

Another farmer in another State in the South undertook some five years ago to demonstrate he didn't believe that there was anything in this "book farming," but a very wide-awake capable agent of ours got in touch with him and got him to raise an acre of cotton. He got a bale for that acre. His average before had been about 200 pounds of cotton, or 2-5 of a bale. He next put in his whole farm under the instruction of that agent, and commenced to raise corn enough for his own use and through the planting of cowpeas and beans to improve his soil, and the result is that from being a bankrupt with $800 of debt that man owns to-day 123 acres of land which is all paid for, has money in the bank, he is considered one of the best farmers in that section of the country, and best of all, whereas formerly he never took an agricultural paper or bulletin, he now takes six agricultural papers and all the bulletins he can get hold of. He used to think he could not send his children to school, that they must stay home and hoe cotton; now, every one of them is attending school—his eldest son being in attendance upon the Agricultural College of that State.

We have worked along this line until to-day, if you will examine the statistics, you will find in every Southern State except Texxas and Oklahoma, the average production in corn is more than it has ever been in 40 years. The ten years' average of Alabama before the last three years was 13½ bushels of corn to the acre; their average to-day is 18 bushels. The average of the farmers instructed by us, as said before, 46 bushels. The average production of corn in Georgia, in the ten years prior to 1909, was 12½ bushels as I recall the figures, per acre; the average production in that State last year was 16½ bushels. From the year 1900 to 1910, the total production of corn in the Southern States was increased 150 million bushels in a country where they thought they could not raise corn. And it was this force of men in the field with the co-operation of the agricultural colleges and all other forces working in there which are responsible for that great increase in production. And best of all, in the season of 1911, when we had a protracted drought, while ordinarily under former conditions ten or fifteen years ago in the South, the production of corn would have gone down to less than ten bushels to the acre, the general production was held up and the total production of corn did not go back to the figures of 1909, but kept as I recall the figures, over $8,000,000 business more than 1909 even in an adverse season.

For these lines of instruction we want for an agent in each county a bright, capable man who understands the business and who knows about the agricultural products in the particular community. Of course we do not expect him to be an expert along all lines. Let me give you an illustration. In South Carolina, where our work is carried on in co-operation with the Agricultural College, we have sent some men from the Department. If hog cholera happens to break out in one of the counties, of course, we do not expect that man to be an expert and to solve that problem, but we do expect him to communicate with the Department expert at Washington instantly and he will attend to it. This gives you a little idea of how a corps of men in the field, practical men, can help the farmers.

Then, too, we have not neglected the boys. Six years ago, when we found that it was sometimes impossible to teach the adult farmer and that he would not be made to understand what we taught him, we thought we would try and get the boy to bring the old man in. So the organization of Boys' Corn Clubs was formed. We now have in the South 75,000 boys that are being directly instructed by the Department, with the co-operation of the Agricultural Colleges, and 10,000 farmers. The boy undertakes not to produce haphazard a corn crop, but to produce an acre of corn, a man's job, and to do it after the best modern methods. Why, last year, in Virginia, the boys averaged 62 bushels of corn to the acre while their fathers only averaged about 25 bushels to the acre. We had one boy in the South who produced 100 bushels of corn to the acre right alongside of his father who was only producing about 15 bushels to the acre. The prize is not given to the boy who produces the most corn, but it is given to the boy who produces the most corn at the least cost, to show him that it is a business proposition that he is engaged in. Then to tie it up with the schools, he must write an account of how he produced that corn. He is judged on the writing of that account, and then, because we want him to produce good corn, he must exhibit ten ears so that we can see that it is good modern corn and well selected. He is rated on all of those propositions, and it makes him keep a book account of what he is doing and has done. Our experience is that nine times out of ten it is the first thing that happens, that the old gentleman comes in to the plan because he sees that there is a way of calculating profit and loss in farming.

I remember last year in South Carolina a little red headed boy that wanted to go into one of our Corn Clubs. His father would not let him; he said that he needed every acre of land that he owned, but the other boys that were in the school were going into the Club and this boy begged his father so hard that the old man finally said, "If you want to go in the Club you can go up on the hillside there and grub you an acre. It was a rough timber country—that is, the big timber had been cut off and it was covered with brush. The boy was not to be daunted, so he took his axe and his hoe and went to work and grubbed an acre. His father was mean enough after he had grubbed that acre to say that he wanted it himself and that if the boy still wanted to join the Club he would have to grub another acre. So he grubbed a second acre. Our agent was helping him all the time, and when he had the land prepared he showed him how to plough it and to make a good deep seed bed, and helped him to get hold of some improved seed corn. To make a long story short, the little fellow raised 80 bushels of corn on that acre against 8 bushels of corn that his father raised to the acre. The next winter the old man went to the Farmers Institute with his boy, and now whenever any one gets talking about corn production to them he will say, "Just look at me and John, what we went and done."

We expect for every boy that we get in these Corn Clubs to get in the father eventually and secure his co-operation, because we find that every time a boy cultivates corn he generally beats his father because he follows instructions implicitly and has no pre-existing ideas about how a thing ought to be done.

What we need is more teachers in the country that understand about country life. We do not want a teacher such as I heard of not long ago who asked a boy in school: "If a farmer had 12 sheep in a pasture and 5 of them jumped over the fence how many would there be left?" The boy replied "None." "You are wrong," said the teacher, there would be 7 left, wouldn't there?" "No," said the boy; "you may know a whole lot about arithmetic, teacher, but you don't know much about sheep."

In the Southern States now they are rewriting the arithmetics for the country schools and putting in problems based upon the work done by these boys in the Corn Clubs. They are also helping the girls, because they are educating them about the work that is done in the canning factories in the South, and prizes are given to them, too. Prizes are given to the children for their best efforts in these various respects. The champion prize in each State is a trip to Washington, where the children are introduced to the President of the United States, who always receives them with distinction, and they are taken before the Agricultural Committees of the Senate and the House and are given diplomas by the Secretary of Agriculture, who always speaks to them in fatherly terms. The object of that is to give the children an idea that there is something dignified in being a farmer; that there is more honor to be attached to the thing that they have done, that they have accomplished some real object in life that means better for them in the future.

Two weeks ago I was in Mississippi. We had two boys from the Corn Clubs there in a meeting of 600 farmers. Those boys told how they grew their corn, and the audience was informed that they might ask any questions they pleased of the boys. One farmer got up and asked a boy this: "You say that you have been growing corn for three years under the instructions of these agents. Have you grown the corn on the same land every year?" "No," replied the boy; "my father and I don't farm that way any more. We grow cotton on that land one year and corn on it another year and the next winter we put in oats; we rotate our crops so as to improve the land."

I had the pleasure a year ago of going to Minneapolis at the invitation of your Committee on Agriculture to attend the Conference there. There was organized at that meeting a movement in the State of North Dakota to inaugurate farm demonstration, and I have been in touch with work, and I am sure you will hear a report here of the success that has attended it.

I feel a very great interest in that work because of the fact that they asked me point blank whether it would work in that State, and I assured them that it would. I assured them that not only would it work there, but I told them that we have accomplished in the South where our work is supported one-half by the people and the other half by Congress, and the work is under the supervision of another officer in our Department, because the responsibilities of the work are so large and the work has grown so that more than one man has had to take over its direction. Under Professor Stillman we are undertaking to extend similar work in the Northern States. Before the last session of Congress there were a number of bills introduced looking towards the improvement in vocational and agricultural education for those people who could not attend Agricultural Colleges, and I doubt not that many of you are familiar with the provisions of those various bills. It was a source of congratulation to us who had been working on the land in the South to realize that the inspiration for those bills came from the hard work that we have done to bring about a better agricultural condition in that section. Through a force of this sort in the field it is possible to materially change conditions, to institute new methods of farming, to study farm management in such a way as to establish a better system of farming to meet the needs of the people, to do it gradually and without any sudden revolution in general farming, and ultimately to establish such a system of agriculture as will maintain fertility of soil indefinitely and lead to better prosperity among the human family. The most precious heritage that we have is the soil and its fertility. I believe that the time is coming when, with a system of education of this sort, the common understanding generally will be that the man who owns an acre of land has not the absolute right to do with that land as he pleases; that he holds it in trust as a sort of food supply for the future, and, if he leaves that land at the end of his tenure, be it by death or otherwise, poorer than when he took it he will be an enemy of society. But he who takes an acre of land and holds it in trust, as it were, builds up its fertility and leaves it a priceless heritage to his family or to the people generally, that man will be blessed.

Committee Reports—Banking Section.

To the American Bankers' Association.

GENTLEMEN: I respectfully submit my report as General Secretary of the American Bankers' Association for the fiscal year ending August 31, 1912.

Before entering upon a detailed statement of the business affairs of the Association, it seems appropriate to advert briefly to the part performed in connection with Bankers' Organizations in this country by the State and City in which we assemble for our Thirty-eighth Annual Convention.

Michigan and Detroit have been important factors in the early history and development of the American Bankers' Association and conspicuously identified with its achievements in recent years. The American Bankers' Association was formed in 1875, but it was preceded by an organization in Michigan, which entitles that State to the distinction of having been one of the pioneers in that line. A convention to organize the Michigan National Bank Association was held at the Russell House, in Detroit, December 4, 1867, and was largely attended by eminent bankers of the State, and the association then established was represented at a convention of the National Banks of the United States which was held at the St. Nicholas Hotel, in the City of New York, on the 23d of June, 1869.

Michigan was among the first States to organize a State Bankers' Association. This action was taken at the Russell House, Detroit, October 26, 1887, and that association is now one of the live, working bodies in the great galaxy of forty-six kindred State associations actively operating to-day throughout our land.

The State has been particularly prominent in the councils of the American Bankers' Association from the very inception of this organization. The late J. D. Hayes, of Detroit, Vice-president of the Merchants and Manufacturers National Bank, was the first Secretary, chosen at the preliminary organization at Saratoga in July, 1875, and attended many conventions, making several speeches on important subjects; and at the Saratoga Convention ten Michigan bankers were present and participated in its deliberations.

When the organization of this Association was perfected at Philadelphia, in 1876, a number of bankers from the State attended the session. All have since passed to the Great Beyond, with the single exception of C. J. Monroe, of Kalamazoo, who last year honored the office of President of the Bankers' Association of his State. Many of the leading men of the State were among those in evidence at national conventions, making addresses and joining in the debates. Senator and Governor Henry P. Baldwin, of Detroit, served as Vice-President for Michigan for eight years. T. H. Hinchman, of the same city, served in the same office for seven years. Frederick W. Hayes, also of Detroit, was Vice-President for his State and also a member of the Executive Council in 1893.

Among the older members of the Council from Michigan were J. D. Hayes, of Detroit, 1876, four years; Governor John J. Bagley, of Detroit, in 1880; Emory Wendell, one of the early bankers of Detroit and who is with us at our convention this year, was a member in 1889; Professor W. J. Cocker, of the University of Michigan, 1896, and H. J. Hollister, of Grand Rapids, in 1895. Other prominent citizens of the State who have taken part in the national conventions have been such men as O'Brien F. Atkinson, of Port Huron; Hon. Thomas M. Cooley, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Michigan; Hon. T. D. Gilbert, of Grand Rapids; Hon. E. S. Lacey, ex-Comptroller of the Currency; Hon. T. C. Sherwood, Bank Commissioner of Michigan, and Hon. J. S. Farrand, of Detroit. At a later period came George H. Russel, President of this Association in 1898; the present President, William Livingstone, and the General Secretary, who was elected in 1907.

Members of the Council from Michigan since the early days of the Association have been William Livingstone, of Detroit; Clay H. Hollister, of Grand Rapids; Fred. E. Farnsworth, of Detroit; John H. Johnson, of Detroit; L. G. Kaufman, of Marquette, and Emory W. Clark, of Detroit.

The Twenty-third Annual Convention of the Association was held at Detroit, August 17, 18, and 19, 1897, and was presided over by Colonel Robert J. Lowry, who responded to the addresses of welcome. The addresses of welcome were delivered by Hon. H. S. Pingree, Governor of Michigan, and Hon. W. C. Maybury, Mayor of Detroit, both of whom have passed away, and by George H. Russel, speaking for the Detroit Clearing-House. It seems peculiarly fitting and a pleasant coincidence that Mr. Russel, at this our convention of 1912, should make one of the addresses of welcome, as President of the Detroit Clearing-House, and that the response should be made by his friend Colonel Lowry. It is gratifying that these fifteen years have dealt gently with these two chums, and that they are spared to be with us on this occasion.

It will not be inappropriate at this time to call your attention to some facts in connection with the American Bankers' Association and the City of Detroit, by way of comparison, during the period of fifteen years that have elapsed between the Twenty-third Annual Convention and the present, the Thirty-eighth.

Detroit, in 1900, occupied the sixteenth place in the population of the cities of the country; in 1910 it ranked ninth. In 1897, the totals of all the banks of Detroit were about $72,000,000; in 1912, the totals of the banks of that city are about $212,000,000, and it is unnecessary to add that the banks are on a sound basis.

Michigan was among the first States of the Union to organize a banking department. This department was established many yeared ago, modeled somewhat after the National Banking System, and it can now be pointed to as one of the best banking departments in the country. Before that time, Michigan had distinguished itself in its banking system, but in a different way. In an address made by Mr. H. H. Camp, before the American Bankers' Association at Saratoga, in 1879, on the history of the Western banks, Mr. Camp says, in speaking of Michigan:

> In this State, as in Kentucky, loose or wicked legislation in the earlier years taught the people the necessity of caution. In 1837 a general banking law was enacted under the provisions of which circulating notes were issued to the amount of two and one-half times the amount of capital. And real estate, bonds and mortgages, and bonds of directors were accounted to be such capital. The Legislature also chartered several railroads at about this time, to whom it gave the right to issue currency, large amounts of which were issued under this authority, and ultimately proved worthless. Banks were required to have twenty-five per cent of their issues on hand in coin.
> There were sixty to seventy banks organized under this law, which put out five million or more of their notes. There was a form of examination carried on by a State officer, who traveled about from bank to bank to count their coin; and I have been told recently by a veteran Michigan banker that in many cases the requisite amount of coin was raised by several associate banks and carried from place to place to be counted for each of the contributing banks. From all I can learn of the unwritten history of loose banking, I think Michigan could bear away the palm; it was in this State where "Wild Cat" banks were first known, and here also was the home of the "Red Dog." This latter term was descriptive of notes of banks which had changed their location, and, instead of issuing new notes—their new location was stamped with red printing on the faces of the notes originally issued.
> These banks all very soon failed, and it is supposed that not over twenty-five per cent of their issues were finally redeemed.

At the convention at Detroit in 1897 there was an attendance of about 1,100, as the records show, and there is also a tradition that it was the most successful convention ever held by the Association up to that time. We estimate the attendance at this convention of 1912 to be from 3,000 to 3,500.

In 1897 our membership was 2,813. On the 31st of August, 1912, at the close of our fiscal year, the membership amounted tot 13,323.

The total assets of the banks comprising the Association in 1897 were $4,200,000,000. The total assets of the members of the Association to-day are estimated at $15,000,000,000.

The Association receipts from all sources for the year ending August 31, 1897, amounted to $86,000. For the year ending August 31, 1912, they aggregated more than $215,000.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL.

The Spring meeting of the Council was held at Briarcliff Lodge, Briarcliff Manor, New York, on May 6, 7 and 8, 1912. One day was given to the meeting of the Committees of the Association and the Sections, and two days to the Council. There were a few absentees from these meetings, and the members of the Council who could not be present were prevented from attending by illness or important business engagements. The attendance on the whole was eminently satisfactory. There was a marked interest and unanimity in the proceedings and a large amount of business was transacted. The entertainments furnished the visiting bankers and their ladies by Mr. Frank A. Vanderlip and his wife were lavish, and this meeting will long be remembered as one of the most successful in the history of the Council.

SECTIONS.

The work of the various Sections during the past year has shown activity and efficiency excelling their previous record in this respect. This was but responsive to and in harmony with the general energy displayed all along the line in other branches of Association effort. The annual subscription dinner of the Trust Company Section held at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York on May 9, 1912, was an enjoyable affair. It is interesting to note that the first annual convention of that Section was held in the City of Detroit at the time of the Association Convention in 1897, which was well attended and pronounced a great success. At that convention a Michigan man was elected Secretary of the Executive Committee—Mr. Anton G. Hodenpyl, then Secretary of the Michigan Trust Company, of Grand Rapids, Michigan, and now a resident of New York City.

Mr. W. H. Kniffin, Jr., who succeeded the lately deceased Mr. William Hanhart, who was many years Secretary of the Savings Bank Section, in February last accepted an important banking position in Syracuse. Mr. Kniffin was succeeded by Mr. E. G. McWilliam. Mr. McWilliam has already proved his adaptability to this work, and has satisfied the officers of the Section that in selecting him for this office no mistake was made. Commencing with May 1, Mr. McWilliam has devoted all of his time to Section work.

The Clearing House Section has been active in following up the task outlined the previous year in the introduction of the numerical system and also in new fields of work pertaining to this Section's usefulness.

The American Institute of Banking Section held its annual convention in Salt Lake City the week of August 19, 1912. It was very largely attended and is credited with being the best convention the Institute has ever held. The Institute is developing more and more into what it was designed to be—an educational association. Mr. George E. Allen, the Educational Director, is insistent upon pushing this feature. He is frequently called from his office in New York to visit the Chapters, and has also willingly responded to the calls of several State Bankers' Associations to make addresses.

The Journal-Bulletin.

Our monthly publication increases with each year, in popularity and favor with the members of the Association and the Institute, and from time to time we have been obliged to issue a larger edition and of increased size to fill the demand. Correspondeence and personal contact with our members reveal the fact that it is considered one of the most valuable adjuncts of the Association. Its usefulness is enhanced by the various departments who contribute monthly to its pages.

The intrinsic worth to the Association of its own official publication and the advantages and benefits which accrue to a periodical of this nature were set forth by Professor Sidney Sherwood, Ph.D., of Johns Hopkins University, in an address at the 1893 convention, when he advocated the establishment of an official organ by the Association. Among other things, he said:

"What is needed is a systematic, persistent attempt to educate the whole people to understand what real services the banks render and are capable of rendering. It will then appear likewise how far short the banks are of realizing their potential efficiency. No better agency for this purpose can be suggested than an official organ of the American Bankers' Association. A weekly paper, ably edited, published avowedly in the interests of the Association, but free as air to the expression of all opinions, welcoming controversy and opposing views, and restricted to banking and monetary subjects, would be of great benefit tot the Association and the country. It would give assured and lasting vitality to the Association. It would make the Association an aggressive force, compelling the attention of the people."

Currency Commission.

The Currency Commission has not convened during the year, except when it met at Briarcliff Manor for a consultation, but it has kept closely in touch with the work of the National Monetary Commission, it being deemed best not to be active until the measure now pending in Congress shall be up for hearings before the committees of the House and Senate. Most of the State Associations, however, at their annual meetings, have had addresses on banking and currency legislation, and during the sessions of 1911 a majority of the States passed resolutions favoring the plan of the National Monetary Commission. At the conventions of 1912 as many as thirteen States passed resolutions advocating the bill of that Commission or other advanced banking and currency legislation, and other State conventions of this year are yet to be heard from as to their action in this matter.

Standing Protective Committee.

The reports of the Standing Protective Committee, of the W. J. Burns National Detective Agency, Inc., and Department Manager L. W. Gammon, cover fully the year's operations of the Protective Department, which produced the most satisfactory results, and it gives me much pleasure again to testify to the earnest consideration of the business of this department which has been given by the Standing Protective Committee, who have now served three years. The members of this committee have been painstaking and conscientious in the performance of their duties and are entitled to the full appreciation of the Association.

Committees.

The Administrative Committee has met frequently with the General Secretary in New York City and thoroughly considered the affairs of the Association under the powers given to them to act in the interim between Council meetings, and have been of great assistance and encouragement to me in the performeance of my duties.

The standing and special committees of the Association have been alive to the interests entrusted to them, have been active and faithful, and earnest in their desire to aid in the important work assigned to them.

State Associations.

There are forty-six State Bankers' Associations—Delaware, New Hampshire and Rhode Island not having yet organized. Every State Association is a member of the State Secretaries' Section, one having joined since my last report, thus completing the list.

The State Associations have been unusually prosperous and successful during the year and all report most excellent conventions, with unusually good attendances, and fraught with much benefit to their interests. As far as practicable, I have attended State conventions in various parts of the country, and have now visited substantially all of the State Associations since my election as General Secretary.

Legal Department.

The report of the General Counsel, Mr. Thomas B. Paton deals comprehensively with the intricacies of the work in his charge. The demands upon his time and the legal opinions required have been more exacting and numerous than in former years. Mr. Paton has also given considerable attention to the requirements of the Sections and Committees. His opinions, published in the Journal-Bulletin, and which, as stated, have been greater in extent than ever before, are read by our large membership, and the favorable comments received by this office show the high valuation placed on Mr. Paton's efforts to serve the Association.

The Association Offices.

In accordance with my recommdations of a year ago, which received the approval of the Administrative Committee and the Executive Council, a suite of offices was secured on the twelfth floor of the Hanover Bank Building, which building the Association has occupied for ten years. These offices were fitted up by the building corporation in conformity with our wishes and are eminently adapted to our purposes. The alterations were made without expense to the Association, and a lease was entered into for five years at an exceedingly reasonable rental. The offices were thrown open for inspection on July 10, and were visited by a host of bankers, their ladies, and their friends. They are in all respects in keeping with the dignity of the Association and its importance, and are a source of unqualified satisfaction to all visitors and especially to the large force now employed. It is gratifying to report the number of visitors to the Association offices grows with each succeeding year. The register shows that during the last fiscal year there were 884 visitors as against 535 for the previous year.

Our Library.

In the past year, the establishment of a permanent library was begun and a competent librarian was placed in charge. Its usefulness has exceeded our most sanguine expectations and without question, it will be a feature strongly appealing to our extensive membership. It seems somewhat strange that with an Association thirty-eight years old, a library had not been before established, and that up to five years ago the valuable material which came to its offices was not preserved. Hon. Lyman J. Gage, President of the Association in 1884, in his address at the convention held that year at Saratoga, had this to say about the importance of a library:

It must be recognized that an important practical view of the work of our Association is educational in character. Educational to many of us who feel a sense of incompleteness in much that is essential for us to know, and not to us only, but to that great body of untried men who will assume our responsibilities when we lay them aside. Thus we shall reduce abstract theories to rational practice, and out of wise practice we shall develop in turn broad and rational theories.

How can this practical object be best accomplished? I venture to suggest as a powerful auxiliary thereto a complete financial library. It would be a worthy work, quite within the scope of our direct aims and efforts, to establish at the proper point a grand library, which should contain all the valuable literature upon banking, general finance and political economy, and in which should be collected the published statistics of all the governments of the civilized world. Such a library would be a standing invitation to scholars from all countries to explore its hidden treasure, and would inspire the humblest of us all with new zeal in acquiring the information such a storehouse would contain. This accomplished, other branches of Membership.

At no time in the history of the Association has there been so substantial an increase in the membership as is shown in the tabulated statements which follow, these statements being completed to the end of the fiscal year, August 31, 1912. Our membership at that date was 13,323 banks—an increase of 1,251 over the membership of the year before and an increase of 4,072 within five years, the period that your General Secretary has served you. The increase for the month of August was 433. A number of States desiring to add to their membership on the Executive Council made a campaign for this purpose. Seven of these States were successful in their efforts. Tennessee was the banner State in this respect, and increased its membership for the year 157, bringing it to a total of 300, as against a membership last year of 143. Next in order comes Missouri, with an increase of 91 and a total of 506, compared with 415 in 1911; and the remaining five States added to their membership as follows:

[illegible] .....increase 58, total 513, membership last year 455
Washington .....increase 47, total 309, membership last year 262
[illegible] increase 42, total 304, membership last year 262
[illegible] increase 36, total 300, membership last year 264
[illegible] increase 8, total 100, membership last year 92

To accomplish this result has meant loyal, systematic and hard work on the part of our Vice Presidents and the members of our Executive Council, State Secretaries and their friends in [illegible] States, and to them unstinted credit should be paid. It has been the opinion of some that our Executive Council, as now organized and on its basis of representation, is too large. I do not believe this argument was ever good in an organization of the size of the American Bankers' Association. The increase in membership of over two-fifths would indicate that a representative council, on a basis of legislative bodies, like Congress and the Legislatures of our States, tends to and perpetuates a genuine spirit and interest that could not be secured in any other way. And, after all, part of Settlers' and Committees' business can be completed and questions may be more fully analyzed and reported to our Council than legislative bodies can act. The increase in membership in the various States mentioned will enlarge the Executive Council by seven members.

APPRECIATION.

To Hon. William Livingstone, our distinguished President; to Mr. Charles H. Huttig, our First Vice-President, and to Mr Arthur Reynolds, the Chairman of our Executive Council; to Treasurer J. Fletcher Farrell, to the members of the Executive Council, to the various State Vice-Presidents and the Secretaries of the respective State Associations; to Assistant Secretary Fitzwilson and the entire and able force in our general offices in the City of New York—to each and all, individually and collectively, I wish to express my obligations for the most thoughtful consideration and friendly assistance along all the paths of executive action and official duty and endeavor, and my heartfelt acknowledgment of courtesies and kindnesses too many and varied to be recited but as appreciatively received and as gratefully remembered as they have been spontaneous and sincere in the spirit of their bestowal.

PROSPECTIVE.

We are beginning the deliberations of our Thirty-Eighth Annual Convention in the City of Detroit, famous as a convention city, for the hospitality of its citizens, and for the beauty of its location and environments, and we may feel well assured that our deliberations here will be completed with the prestige of the most successful convention in our annals. In order that the most generous preparations should be made for this meeting, the Detroit Clearing House, early in the year, called a conference of its banks and associated banks and outlined the details of Convention week. The local committees have been working assiduously and harmoniously with the general officers of this Association in fulfilling the duties devolved upon them, and have met every requirement, and they will be entitled to our warmest thanks for their untiring efforts in our behalf.

Detroit is my home, and I am confident you will agree with me that, in common with my fellow-citizens of this fair city and of the great State of Michigan, we have just reasons to be proud. It is with the utmost satisfaction, also, that, as I am rounding out my fifth year as your General Secretary, our Convention should be held in the city of my home and the home of your President, and that we may both point with pride to a year replete with deeds accomplished—achievements made possible by the unselfish and unbounded zeal and devotion of our official associates, our Executive Council, our Vice-Presidents and State Secretaries, Sections and Committees, and a loyal membership.

Respectfully submitted,

FRED E. FARNSWORTH,
General Secretary.

Report of the Treasurer, J. Fletcher Farrell.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE EXECUTIVE COUNCIL AND AMERICAN BANKERS' ASSOCIATION.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, September 3, 1912.

Mr. President:

The report of your Treasurer, covering in detail the receipts and expenditures from all sources, has been filed with your General Secretary. The report is somewhat lengthy, and, for the convenience of the members, the General Secretary has had it printed, and a copy will be found in the pamphlet which has been distributed throughout the hall:

I assume that each and every member of the Association is more or less interested in its financial affairs, and I should, therefore, be pleased if you would give the report your careful perusal. It is not my purpose to occupy the time of the Convention by reading the detailed statement, but I desire very briefly to bring to your attention a few of the most important items:

The Cash Balance on hand September 1, 1911, was $1 433.43. The total Receipts for the current year were $215,719.11, and the total Expenses for the year was $213,159.66, leaving a credit balance, September 1, 1912, of $3 992 88.

In August your Treasurer received from the General Secretary 12,520 Drafts on account of the current membership dues aggregating $205,592.50, all of which have been forwarded for collection. Owing to the fact that these drafts are dated September 1, 1912, which is in accordance with our Constitution, and which is one week prior to the date of this Convention, only a small percentage have been collected. However, we hope by October 1 to receive remittances from all.

The Association has its surplus funds invested in stocks and bonds, which are deposited with the Bankers' Trust Company, of New York, under control of the Executive Committee.

The Trust Company collects the interest on these securities and remits to your Treasurer for the credit of the Association account. The securities are as follows:

$11,000 C., B. & Q. Joint 4's of 1921.
$30,000 Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe 4 per cent. Bonds of 1995.
$50,000 Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, Illinois Division, 4 per cent. Bonds of 1949.
$30,000 New York City Registered Corporation Stock, 3½ per cent., due 1940.

Under the authority delegated to it in the interim of meetings of the Executive Council, the Administrative Committee authorized the sale of $10,000 Government 4 per cent. Bonds of 1925, the proceeds of which were to be converted into Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Joint 4's. The sale of the Government Bonds was made, and out of the proceeds on July 18, 1912, the $11,000 C., B. & Q. Bonds to which I have already referred in the list of securities held for the account of the Association, were purchased and the same was confirmed by the Executive Council. There is a balance of $769.10 on account of this transaction, which is on deposit with the Bankers' Trust Company, and upon which the Association receives 2 per cent interest.

I hope that each member of this Association will carefully analyze the Treasurer's Report, and particularly the financial statement showing the appropriation and expenditures of the various sections and committees. To some who have not been closely identified with Association work these figures may perhaps seem large, but a careful perusal of the pamphlet referred to will, no doubt, convince you of the necessity of these expenditures.

It should also be remembered that the American Bankers' Association is a great and growing organization, accomplishing much good for all its members. This has been brought about by the hearty co-operation and active support of its members, for such an organization could never have been built up except through the loyalty and devotion of its members, and upon that its future depends very largely.

In submitting this, my first report, as your Treasurer, I desire to express my sincere thanks to General Secretary Farnsworth and Assistants in his office for the aid given me and the many courtesies they have extended. It has been a real pleasure to be associated with such competent and efficient men.

Respectfully submitted,

J. FLETCHER FARRELL,
Treasurer.

Report of General Counsel, Thomas B. Paton.

A survey of the year's work will be attempted.

BILLS OF LADING.

The progress made in the movement for State and national legislation to better safeguard bills of lading will be shown in the report of the Chairman of the Committee on that subject. General Counsel's part in connection with that movement will be briefly told. At a meeting of the Committee in New York in January which was attended by representatives of a number of commercial organizations, the Committee delegated to your Counsel the matter of arranging for hearings of the Clapp-Stevens bill pending in Senate and House, with power to use such steps and adopt such methods for the full presentation of the case as in his judgment were best. Early in February interviews were had at Washington with Senator Clapp and Congressman Stevens. The consideration by the Senate Committee on Panama tolls and the Pure Food bill rendered [illegible] attention to the subject of bills of lading impossible at this session. In the Senate a hearing was set for February 16. Briefs were prepared and the attendance of a delegation arranged and an exhaustive presentation of the entire subject from the standpoint of banks, shippers and railroads was made to the Senate Committee on February 16, 17, March 1 and 2 and March 10. In addition to the Clapp Stevens bill, the Uniform Bill of Lading Act introduced by Senator Pomerene with certain provisions of doubtful constitutionality as a Federal law omitted, was urged by the shippers' organizations as better suiting their needs. The bankers who have been urging the Uniform Bill for State enactment favored either measure, but were advised the shorter bill was the most practicable to be passed. On May 10 the Senate Committee reported out the Clapp-Stevens bill in modified form, but also reported the opinion of a number of their members that the Uniform Act was a better regulation of the entire subject. Within the last month, namely, on August 22, the Senate has unanimously passed the Pomerene bill, which is most gratifying, and the measure now goes to the House, where our efforts will be renewed at the short session next Winter.

The Uniform Bill of Lading Act, of which the Pomerene bill is an adaptation for Federal enactment, was drafted by Professor Williston of Harvard Law School for, and approved and recommended by, the Commissioners on Uniform State Laws. Professor Williston was associated with your General Counsel in behalf of the bankers at all the Senate hearings and bore the main brunt of the technical presentation of the subject. Chairman Hollister and Mr. Ingle were also in attendance and Mr. Sol. Wexler of our Committee made a most able and convincing argument in support of remedial legislation. The shippers' organizations were ably represented by Francis B. James, of Washington, formerly Chairman of the Committee on Commercial Law of the Commissioners on Uniform State Laws.

In aid of this legislation in Congress, your Counsel has conducted an active correspondence with bankers, representatives of commercial organizations and other interested persons, prepared a number of briefs and documents to be used at the hearings, as well as participating therein. He has also made a number of addresses in behalf of the proposed legislation.

In connection with the promotion of the Uniform Bills of Lading Act through the State Legislatures, your Counsel attended two hearings on February 3 and February 10 before the Committee on Courts of Justice of the House of Delegates in Virginia, and presented arguments in favor of the Act, being opposed by the attorneys for the Southern Railroad and the Atlantic Coast Line. This effort was successful to the extent of a favorable report of the measure by the Committee to the House of Delegates, but owing to the shortness of the session it was not reached on the calendar. Efforts have been made to procure this legislation in all the States which held sessions this year, excepting those where the law is already in force. The law has been passed this year by the State of Louisiana.

False Statements for Credit.

Acting under the auspices of the Law Committee, efforts in behalf of the "False Statements for Credit" law have resulted this year in its passage in four additional States, namely, New York, New Jersey, Rhode Island and Louisiana. This law is especially valuable as a protection to banks in the larger cities of the country where a variety of forms in which credit is extended in reliance upon statements of condition, afterwards found to be false, do not subject the fraudulent borrower to criminal liability under the ordinary False Pretense statutes. The draft of this law is the joint production of Mr. Julius Henry Cohen, Counsel for the National Association of Credit Men, and of your General Counsel; it is equally valuable for the merchant as for the banker, and the Credit Men's Association have actively cooperated with this Association and with State Bankers' Associations in promoting its passage.

In connection with the enactment of this law in the State of New York, a draft of law amending the Forgery statute of that State was also specially prepared jointly by the above Counsel to meet the situation created by the decisions of the New York Court of Appeals in People v. Isaacson, 202 N. Y. 456, and of the Appellate Division in People v. Brown, 140 App. Div. 591. The statute as it formerly existed punished as forgery in the third degree the alteration or making of false entries or wilful omission of true entries in the books of account and other writings, with intent to defraud, but the New York courts held in these cases that the act was aimed merely at internal treachery, to punish the employee who falsified his employer's books, and did not make it criminal for an employer to falsify his own books. Books of account form the basis upon which statements of condition are made and where an accountant goes over the books and certifies, as was done in one of the above cases, that an attached statement of condition is true and correct "as shown by the books," such certificate is valueless and the statement, of course, misleading, where the books have been falsified. The proposed amendment drafted by Counsel was designed to cure the defect in the law by making the Forgery statute apply to employers, as well as employees, who falsify books with intent to defraud. It was passed by the Legislature and signed by Governor Dix.

Your Counsel has aided in the promotion of the False Statement Law in the different States by an active correspondence urging its enactment and explaining its provisions and by the preparation of a number of special arguments designed to answer objections for use at critical stages in its passage through State Legislatures. The law has now been passed in thirteen States and will be actively urged during 1913 in a number of additional legislatures.

Derogatory Statements Affecting Banks.

A successful effort was made this year to procure the enactment by the New York Legislature of our Association measure aimed to safeguard banks from unwarranted and malicious attacks upon their standing and credit by the circulation of defamatory statements or rumors affecting their solvency. It so happened that early in the year advices were received from three banks in different parts of the State complaining of malicious circulation of reports by particular individuals designed to place such institutions in a bad light. This evidence was gathered and with the co-operation of Mr. Ledyard Cogswell, Jr., of Albany, Chairman of the Committee on Legislation of the New York State Bankers' Association, was placed before the appropriate Committees of the Legislature and resulted in the passage of the law by both Houses and its signature by Governor Dix to take effect September 1. New York is the only State in which we succeeded in passing this law during the present year.

General Legislative Work.

All the measures recommended by this Association have been actively urged this year in the comparatively small number of States whose Legislatures met during 1912. Special pamphlets were prepared early in December, containing proposed laws and annotations, and these were forwarded in due season to legislative committeemen and secretaries of State Bankers' Associations. The Louisiana Legislature, in addition to passing the Uniform Bills of Lading Act and the False Statement for Credit law, passed our Association measure limiting the liability of a bank for payment of forged or raised checks to a period of one year. The Massachusetts Legislature also passed this last-named measure, broadening its scope by including bills of exchange drawn upon a bank and extending it beyond forgery of signature and raising of amount, to cover all payments by banks of negotiable instruments "made, drawn, accepted or indorsed without authority" or "materially altered." The Virginia Legislature passed the act relating to the payment of deposits in two names. Mr. George Bryan, Attorney for the Virginia Bankers' Association, rendered effective aid in this connection. General Counsel recenttly addressed the Vermont Bankers' Association upon the Negotiable Instruments law and the bankers of that State will make a determined effort to have the law passed at the forthcoming session of their Legislature. The report of the Law Committee will show more in detail the subjects of legislation in 1912.

General Counsel has been in correspondence with legislative committeemen of Bankers' Associations in a number of States, arranging for the vigorous promotion of bank legislation during 1913 and has supplied information relative to proposed general banking laws in certain of the States, as well as concerning other matters of legislation.

Standard Burglary Policy.

During the year a revised Standard Form of Bank Burglary and Robbery Policy has been perfected and was copyrighted in the name of the Association in December last and is now in general use by the companies writing bank burglary insurance. Prior to its final completion your Counsel, representing the Committee having charge of the subject, had a number of interviews and conducted negotiations with a Committee representing the companies relative to the final settlement of the terms and provisions of the proposed policy and also went over and discussed its provisions with members of the Bankers' Committee. At its Spring meeting the Executive Council adopted a report of the Committee recommending that the companies "should be granted the privilege of writing this policy for all bankers after the companies have signed an agreement that they will show upon their policy in bold type that it is the copyrighted form of the American Bankers' Association and agree not to in any manner change the provisions of the policy without the authority of the Executive Council or any Committee specially appointed to safeguard the interests of the Association." The first stated condition is being lived up to by the companies, but they object to the last-named condition for the reason that changes are frequently called for to fit the needs and conditions of particular banks, most of which are favorable to and desired by the banks themselves, and that it is impracticable to first obtain in every instance the consent as proposed. The matter has been discussed in several interviews between your General Counsel and the Chairman of a Committee representing the companies and will be presented to the proper Committee of this Association for adjustment.

A. B. A. Fidelity Bond.

In 1899 the Association copyrighted a standard form of Fidelity Bond which has since been issued by the Companies, under license, to members. At its Spring meeting, the Executive Council adopted a recommendation of the Committee on Fidelity Bonds and Burglary Insurance that General Counsel of the Association be authorized to make such changes in the form of Fidelity Bond as he finds necessary and to have a new form copyrighted in the name of the Association. In the last few years, due to competition between the Companies and other reasons, improvements and more liberal provisions have from time to time been made in their forms of Fidelity Bond and a few Companies are now issuing a very short form, containing but from three to four hundred words and eliminating most of the technical provisions and conditions formerly contained in such class of bonds. There have also in the last few years been a number of decisions rendered by the courts wherein suits for losses covered by Fidelity Bonds have been contested not alone because of some technical provision in the bond itself, but also because of alleged misrepresentations in the application and again in the certificates which have been required by many of the Companies as a basis of issuing a renewal bond. It is proposed before completing the revised form of bond to make a thorough examination of all the latest forms, as well as of all the decided cases on the subject. This work has been commenced, but is not yet finished and this report is simply one of progress. It may be found desirable to prepare not only a revised form of bond, but also a standard form of application and of any other blanks necessary to the issue and renewal of Fidelity Bonds, to the end that the interests of members may be safeguarded throughout.

The Sections

There has been co-operation with officials of the Sections of the Association in connection with their respective lines of work. Last Spring your General Counsel prepared, at the request and for the use of the Executive Committee of the Trust Company Section, a preliminary draft of a general Trust Company law with a view of providing ultimately, after discussion and revision, a standard or model for use in States needing that form of legislation. For the Executive Committee of the Clearing House Section, he has looked into the law as to the legality of banks of a clearing house forming a corporation for clearing purposes. Legal questions of especial interest to the Sections have been discussed with their respective Secretaries.

The Protective Committee.

Your General Counsel is called upon by this Committee for advice when occasion requires and is in constant touch with its representative, Mr. Gammon. There are many cases where members are victimized by fraud and false pretense, which are on the border line of criminality, and it becomes necessary to determine whether or not the offender has violated the criminal law of a particular State so that in case of violation, detective agents may be set immediately at work. These cases are referred to your General Counsel for advice. There are also many cass of forgery where it becomes necessary to determine upon which of several banks or parties involved the loss will fall, that the proper one to make the necessary affidavits to procure arrest may be known. Opinions are sometimes called for upon questions of jurisdiction for prosecution as between courts of different States, as for example, where a forged paper is issued in one State and paid in another. Considerable service is rendered the Committee on various matters of this kind.

Opinion Work for Members.

The opinion work for members of the Association has grown to be very extensive. During the ten months since the November Convention, 247 written opinions requested by members in all parts of the country have been forwarded, covering a wide range of practical questions arising in the conduct of the banking business. Some of these questions have been of a hypothetical nature, but a majority have related to actual transactions in which some question of procedure, recourse, or liability for loss, has been involved. Many of the questions thus answered, relative to matters more especially of private concern and are not published, but the majority of opinions given are published in the monthly Journal of the Association that the entire membership may derive the benefit of the opinion given. Many of such questions are readily answerable and some are repeated from different sources, but many more involve a considerable amount of time for research. To give some idea of the nature and extent of subjects covered by these opinions space will be taken in this report for the following summary:

A number of questions have related to matters connected with the payment and certification of checks, notes and other instruments. For example: the right of a bank to pay or certify a check after banking hours; the position of a bank which pays a check after the depositor's death, including payment of checks signed under power of attorney without notice of death of principal; payment of certificate of deposit after payee's death; payment of certificate of deposit payable to husband and wife after death of wife; the legal way of opening and carrying joint accounts to protect bank in paying survivor; payment of ambiguous checks; of checks indorsed by drawer but not by payee; consequences of premature payment of post-dated checks; right to refuse payment where signature does not conform to book; where statement of consideration altered; where check lacks payee's indorsement; payment of overdraft by mistake and bank's right of recovery; liability of bank to customer for refusing payment through error; payment of notes payable at bank; right of customer to stop payment; right of bank to stamp check "payment stopped"; payment of checks on blank forms of another bank; whether rule allowing 24 hours to accept applies to checks; cases where banks are and are not bound by oral acceptances, according to State laws, including certification over telephone; cases where checks and drafts are accepted by wire and where telegrams are or are not sufficient to constitute acceptance; non-obligation of banks to certify checks; payment of savings deposits where book claimed to be lost and the right to require indemnity.

Many other questions have related to the collection of paper, including questions involving presentment, protest and notice. Among these, the presentment of checks at branch banks; the proper place of presentment of note where makers have removd before maturity from addrss where payable; presentment of paper falling due on Saturday in certain States; questions of validity and necessity of protest and right to protest fees; liability of collecting banks in different States for defaults of correspondents; for sending checks direct to drawee and various other acts of negligence in connection with collection items; preference in assets of failed collecting bank; procedure as to protest where letter of instruction conflicts with draft; duty of collecting bank to send notices of protest to all prior indorsers or only to immediate principal; validity of clause on credit advice card that collecting bank may send items direct to payor; questions arising out of loss of checks in the mail, including upon whom the burden rests to procure duplicate and to give bond of indemnity therefor.

A number of opinions have been given in bill of lading transactions involving the degree of security afforded by bills of lading as well as the duty and liability of banks as collectors of B/L drafts. Among these are a bank's right to make claim for loss of goods where it has discounted a draft with only a straight bill of lading attached; the recourse of a bank whose messenger has lost a bill of lading which has afterwards found its way to the consignee who has obtained goods without paying for same; the rights of a bank as remote tranferee of a false bill of lading against the indorsing shipper; the right of a purchasing bank to proceeds of B/L draft as against attaching creditor of shipper; the liability of an acceptor of a bill of lading draft; the duty of a collecting bank where the bill of lading allows inspection; the liability of a collecting bank forwarding a B/L draft through error to the consignee; for negligence in improperly surrendering goods; the rights of banks under special forms of bills of lading.

Numerous questions which have been made the subject of opinions grow out of transactions where the paper involved is in some form tainted by forgery. Among these are the recourse of a bank paying checks on which drawer's signature is forged as governed by the conflicting laws of different States; questions of right and liability growing out of payment of raised checks and of checks bearing forged indorsements; whether a person passing a forged check with Sunday date can be indicted; the liability of a person inducing a bank to cash a forged check for an alleged payee; the liability of a telegraph company for receiving and transmitting a forged order on which payment of money is procured; the payment of savings deposits on forged orders.

Numerous questions have been answered involving indorsements: the meaning of "prior indorsements guaranteed" and the nature and extent of liability under such a contract; whether indorsement "without recourse" applies to subsequent indorsers; responsibility of indorser "without recourse" upon forged instrument; the liability of an accommodation indorser before the payee for the capacity of the maker where infant, married woman or corporation; the propriety of sending a check back for payee's indorsement before forwarding for payment when indorsement guaranteed; the title of a bank to a note transferred by rubber stamp indorsement of payee's name and credited to payee where payee repudiates indorsement.

Banks are frequently garnished because of deposits or funds in their hands. The opinions on this subject include the garnishment of an account in the name of John Smith "agent" by a creditor of Smith; the validity of garnishment against bank of property in its safe deposit boxes and the liability of a bank where the proceeds of a collection have been garnished before remittance to its principal.

Other opinions have been rendered upon questions which have arisen between bank and customer. The payment of checks on firm accounts where there are differences between the partners; the liability of a bank to a depositor where it has given him cash for a deposited item and the depositor denies receipt of the cash; the right to possession of a certified check methods not sanctioned by legal decisions, as well as the attempts of banks to secure relief from responsibility by means of clauses in pass books, deposit slips and credit advice cards, suggested to General Counsel some time ago, the desirability of framing for the approval of the Association a uniform code governing collection of commercial paper which, if enacted in the different States, would establish, first, that a bank receiving on deposit paper payable at a distance took the same as agent and not as owner or debtor, and would also limit the responsibility of the bank for correspondents to the selection of suitable agents and further provide rules as to methods of forwarding in harmony with reasonable banking customs. The benefits of such a code would be uniformity and simplicity in the law and relief of the first bank from risk and responsibility to its depositor for paper lost in the mail and for losses caused by the neglect or bankruptcy of subsequent collecting agents, as well as the legalizing of proper banking customs in the forwarding of paper for collection. A draft of such law was commenced several months ago, but has not yet been completed, owing to press of other duties. When the first rough draft is completed, it is proposed that its provisions be thoroughly discussed before it is finally submitted for approval.

The many disputed questions and the conflict and uncertainty of State laws relating to forged paper and also the uncertainty in the law concerning the position of a bank which receives on deposit or pays checks signed by an official agent or fiduciary to his individual order, further suggest the desirability of framing statutes which would regulate and simplify the rules of law governing these subjects. It is proposed to take up this work at the earliest practicable moment.

A further suggestion which has occurred to General Counsel as the result of his correspondence with members, is the establishment under the auspices of the Association of a Court of Arbitration, governed by proper rules and regulations, to which disputes between members over matters of small amount might be submitted for decision or adjustment. There are many cases where differences arise between banks as to which is responsible for protest fees or should bear the loss growing out of mistake, fraud or forgery in connection with the collection of commercial paper or some other transaction, in which the amount is comparatively small and does not justify the expense of taking the matter into court. Each contestant believes its own side of the case to be right, fruitless correspondence often results and ill-feeling is sometimes engendered. Several cases of this kind have been submitted to your General Counsel by agreement of the parties. The suggestion would seem worthy of consideration whether the establishment of a Court of Arbitration, such as proposed, would be practicable and beneficial.

Report of the Executive Council, by Arthur Reynolds, Chairman.

To the American Bankers' Association.

GENTLEMEN: While all proceedings of meetings of the Executive Council have been published in considerable detail in the JOURNAL and can readily be referred to by members of the Association, yet for the purpose of making our records complete, a formal and abbreviated report of that body's proceedings is customary, and I now take pleasure in presenting the same.

The very full attendance at the two meetings that have been held since our last Annual Convention testifies to the continued great interest felt by the members, not only in its own work, but in that of the Association as well.

Following the meeting of the Convention at New Orleans, the Executive Council met and was organized by the election of the following officers:

Chairman	ARTHUR REYNOLDS
General Secretary	FRED. E. FARNSWORTH
Treasurer	J. FLETCHER FARRELL
Assistant Secretary	WM. G. UTZINGER
General Counsel	THOS. B. PAYON

At this meeting there were present sixty-five members, which was regarded quite a large attendance for a meeting following a long Convention.

At this meeting the Finance Committee presented the Budget, recommending the annual appropriations, covering the expenditures of the Association for the then ensuing year, which was approved.

The Finance Committee also reported the following which was duly approved by the Council:

"The Committee has been confronted in its deliberations with an impression that there may be some unnecessary expenses by reason of different committees working practically on the same topic and with the same object in view, and have recommended the incoming Finance Committee to consider carefully the subject of effecting such consolidations or eliminations as may be practicable to avoid the unnecessary expenditure of money and to place the whole finances of the Association on what would seem to be a better business basis, and to report at the Spring Meeting of the Executive Council."

The following resolution was also adopted:

Resolved, That the Chairman of the Trust Company Section, the Chairman of the Savings Bank Section, and the Chairman of the Clearing House Section, appoint a committee of seven—six each from the Trust Company Savings Bank and Clearing House Sections and four from the membership at large, exclusive of secretary of the Council, to consider and report to the Spring Meeting of the Council any amendments to the Constitution which in their judgment may be desirable as well as any other amendments which may be submitted to them. And the following Committee was appointed and approved:

Representing Savings Bank Section: E. L. Robbins, Vice-President Eutaw Savings Bank, Baltimore, Md.

Representing Trust Company Section: E. Elmer Leyc, Vice-President Old Colony Trust Co., Boston, Mass.

Representing Clearing House Section: Frances B. Sears, Vice-President The National Shawmut Bank, Boston, Mass.

From Membership at Large: C. H. McNider, President First National Bank, Mason City, Iowa; E. C. McDougal, President Bank of Buffalo, Buffalo, N. Y.; Lucius Teter, President Chicago Savings Bank and Trust Co., Chicago, Ill.; Montgomery Evans, President Norristown Trust Company, Norristown, Pa.

The matter of an Investment Bankers' Section which was referred to the Executive Council by the Convention was laid over until the Spring Meeting of the Council.

The matter of the report of the Committee on Fidelity Bonds and Burglary Insurance, after being thoroughly discussed, was referred back to the Committee, with the understanding that a report would be made to the May Meeting of the Council.

At the second meeting of the Executive Council, held at Briarcliff Manor, May 7 and 8, the roll call showed seventy-two members present, being representatives from every section of the country. There were three sessions of the Council at this time and all were productive of excellent results.

While many profitable meetings of the Council have been held in the past, at no meeting was greater interest manifested in the various topics under discussion, or more business transacted, than at the one held at Briarcliff Manor. At that meeting there were presented over twenty reports of various officers, committees and Sections representing all branches of business to which the Association is devoted. Some of these were very lengthy and exhaustive in relation to the subjects to which they referred, and all of these have been published in full in the JOURNAL, and none of the officers, standing committees or sections failed to make proper and interesting report of their work.

The discussions of the various reports presented were debated at length, and the individual members of the Council were keenly alive to the importance of the work at hand. At no time in the history of our great Association has more conscientious and valuable effort been exerted. A continuation of such unselfish labor must result in bringing about a better understanding between bankers themselves and elevate the business to a plane of action never before attained.

In line with the many expressions from various members that the expenses of the Association were becoming very large and should be carefully considered in connection with all work undertaken by the Council or Association the Finance Committee introduced a resolution which was adopted, providing for the selection of members of various Committees, in so far as practicable, from members of the Council, thereby saving expenses of additional members to the meeting of the Council.

Your Chairman is in hearty sympathy with this and all other movements looking toward the conservative handling of the finances of the Association, and is of the opinion that all resolutions, introduced either in the Council or before the Convention, looking toward the creation of new committees for the handling of new undertakings, should not be entered into hastily, but should be given very careful consideration in order that the finances of the Association may not be unnecessarily dissipated, and that the greatest good may be accomplished with the means at hand.

All sections of the Association will, I am sure, be glad to cooperate, thereby placing the Association on an equal plane of efficiency with a reduced expense.

The Finance Committee made other recommendations for increasing the income and the curtailment of expenses which were adopted.

The Committee on Amendments appointed at New Orleans, as per resolution adopted at that meeting, reported at the Briarcliff meeting for favorable action the following changes:

1. The creation of a membership committee whose duty it shall be to pass upon the qualifications of candidates for admission to our Association. (Approved by the Council.)

2. A constitutional recognition of the office of General Counsel. (Approved by the Council.)

3. The formation of a new section to care for the interests of Investment Bankers. (Disapproved by the Council.)

4. A constitutional provison rendering the Chairman of the Executive Council ineligible for election to any other office within a year after his term of office shall have expired. (Approved by the Council—not to become effective until the year 1913.)

5. A provision permitting the Executive Council to group adjoining States for the purpose of selecting representatives on the Council. (Approved by the Council.)

6. By-law provision for an increase in the membership dues from private bankers and banking houses. (Approved by the Council.)

The thanks of the Council was extended to the Committee which was continued.

The matter of a section for Investment Bankers was discussed at Briarcliff and upon vote was disapproved by the Council, the feeling being that it would be unwise to create such a section at this time.

As provided in the New Orleans meeting, the Committee on Fidelity Bonds and Burglary Insurance made a report to the Council at Briarcliff in which they made a number of recommendations and asked to be discharged. Their report was adopted and the Committee was discharged, subject, of course, to the action of the Convention.

In conformity with the recommendation of this Committee the Chairman was authorized to appoint a permanent committee of three to keep in touch with the rates charged by the companies and the general situation, and from time to time make recommendations to the Council. Complying with this resolution, the following representative gentlemen were named as members of this Committee:

Mr. R. E. Jams, President Easton Trust Company, Easton, Pa.

Mr. O. E. Dunlap, President Citizens' National Bank, Waxahachie, Tex.

Mr. John J. Sherman, Cashier Citizens' National Bank, Appleton, Wis.

The reports of the various sections indicated much activity, together with a harmonious co-operation for the general good of all bankers.

The Law Committee made a very exhaustive report, indicating much time spent and labor involved, covering the conditions under which savings deposits are received throughout the country, and the character of the investments which are now being made with such deposits.

The Committee also outlined what they regarded as appropriate investment for savings deposits, and took up quite fully the question of segregation of such deposits.

No special recommendations were made except the Committee believed the question of segregation of savings deposits should be taken up at this Convention, which was not approved by the Council, it being believed that it would be impossible to reach anything like unanimous action at this time.

The Committee on Agricultural and Financial Development and Education gave a very interesting report and the following resolution was introduced and adopted:

"Whereas, At least twenty State Bankers' Associations in as many different States are appointing or have standing committees working for agricultural development and education; and

Whereas, The American Bankers' Association of 22,500 banks has shown its keen interest in agricultural and other efforts in its behalf by appointing a standing committee on agricultural development and education; and

Whereas, These committees and associations are working for the best demonstration, but now before Congress

Therefore be it resolved, By the Executive Council of the American Bankers' Association, that it urges committees of the Congress of the United States now in session the adoption of legislation and such appropriations as are of such work."

The work of the Protective Committee of the Association has continued unabated through the year in furthering the [illegible] purposes of the organization. Through the vigilance and activity of this Committee thefts from our members and friends in their various forms have become so hazardous to the perpetrators that instances of that character have materially diminished.

Their efforts are appreciated, the more so from the fact that any such item or article taken by them necessarily does not come into the thought of other members. What they only reward is the appreciation of the Association.

Without attempting to go further into detail, it may be said that every other report offered at the Briarcliff meeting was one of interest and created a deep sense of feeling on the responsibilities of all members present.

I cannot pass the report of the Currency Commission, to which I have had a deep personal interest since its creation, without commendation of their strenuous efforts and proper and necessary criticism.

It would seem, notwithstanding the large sum appropriated, expense of the Monetary Commission appointed by the Congress of the United States and the full attention the Commission to the individual bankers of the country that the political [illegible] has not yet sufficiently cleared to permit any consideration of the currency laws (so amply tested), not only to bankers, but to other great business interests. Many of us had hoped in view of the fact that the operation of the Aldrich-Vreeland measure expires in 1914 that some active steps would be taken in Congress looking to that permanent remunerative legislation to which the people are entitled. In this we have been disappointed.

The opening of the Panama Canal in the near future is certain to change the commercial geography of the world and the United States should be in a position to take rank with other great countries in banking and commerce. Without [illegible] in our laws that will be impossible. Under present conditions we may consider ourselves fortunate if we take care of our own affairs without trouble, much less take on our proper share of business under the changed conditions in commerce which must certainly intrude when the great oceans are connected.

Not only this, but the culmination of similar great enterprises in times past have been followed by seasons of depression—if not panic—what then must this country expect in the future?

Shall we be compelled to use all our efforts to care for business at home, while foreign nations absorb the commerce which by nature of the change should be ours?

I fear our legislators have not realized their responsibility in their failure to act.

It should be the prime object of the American Bankers' Association to demand and urge remedial legislation along some proper line, and the Currency Commission should be urged to continue the work even though we seem to be laboring under more adverse conditions. I believe the people will ultimately favor the situation in some proper way.

The American Bankers' Association has become a recognized factor in public affairs touching the interests of which it is the representative in this country.

Its influence is not only felt at home, but is recognized abroad. It has enrolled in its membership the broadest and brainiest business men of the country, and its policies and principles are in accord with the closest students of finance of the Nation.

It is indeed an honor, which I desire gratefully to acknowledge, to be associated as an officer in this great Association with men of such character.

We may feel assured that any work undertaken by them in the past will be pushed to the final and correct conclusion with that same spirit of unselfish devotion and disinterested effort that has marked their course to the present time.

Respectfully submitted,

ARTHUR REYNOLDS,
Chairman Executive Council.

Report of Standing Protective Committee.

NEW YORK, September 1, 1912.

To the Executive Council and Members of the American Bankers' Association.

Your Standing Protective Committee submits herewith its annual report for the fiscal year ending August 31, 1912.

FINANCIAL STATEMENT.

The financial statement covers the cost of the Protective Features for twelve months, and will be published in detail in the pamphlet containing financial statements.

ARRESTS, ETC.

For the period covered from September 1, 1911, up to and including August 30, 1912, your Committee begs to report as to its operations against criminals, as follows:

Total cases not disposed of arrested prior to Sept. 1, 1911.		79
Total arrests since Sept. 1, 1911		249
Convicted	145
Released, escaped, killed and died	58	203
August 30, 1912, awaiting trial		125

Since the beginning of the fiscal year, September 1, 1911, up to and including August 30, 1912, there have been 39 burglaries, attempted burglaries, hold-ups and sneak thefts reported on members, and 96 similar crimes on non-members, as follows:

	Members.	Non-Members.		Members.	Non-Members.
Arkansas	1	1	Nebraska	1	3
Arizona	1		New Hampshire	1
Alabama	3	3	New Jersey	1
California	2	1	New York	2	1
Colorado	1	1	North Carolina		3
Georgia	5	2	North Dakota		1
Idaho		1	Ohio	3	5
Illinois	2	11	Oklahoma	3	19
Indiana	1	2	Pennsylvania		1
Iowa	1	9	South Carolina	1
Kansas	1		Tennessee	1	1
Kentucky	1	1	Texas		11
Maryland		2	Utah		1
Massachusetts	1		Virginia	1	2
Michigan	1		Washington	3	2
Minnesota		4	Wisconsin		1
Missouri		3	Wyoming	1
Montana		1

It can be seen from the above table that the "yegg" burglar and hold-up man (professional) has been most active in the States of Arkansas, Illinois, Oklahoma and Texas against non-members, as there have been very few attacks in those States on members.

Of the 39 attacks on members, 3 were successful burglaries, 27 unsuccessful burglaries, 7 hold-ups, and 2 sneak thefts. In some of these attempted burglaries entrance was not even gained to the bank, and in most of them no explosives were used.

Of the 96 attacks on non-members 78 were burglaries or attempted burglaries, 16 hold-ups, and 2 sneak thefts. They were practically all made by professionals, amateur attacks as a rule not being reported to this Department.

The loss by attacks on members by burglars amounts to $3,375.36, while the loss from attacks on non-members by burglars amounts to $147,422.99.

The above figures do not accurately represent the number of attacks upon non-members, nor do they give the actual losses sustained by such banks as the result of the depredations enumerated. These statistics are necessarily incomplete because of the difficulty encountered in gaining information from the banks in question. We submit, however, that a careful comparison of the above two statements tells its own significant story.

The following figures are given for your information of reported and attempted burglaries on banks since the inauguration of the Protective Feature, such as are known:

Non-Members	1,352	Loss	$1,917,300.47
Members	284	Loss	197,789.90
Difference	1,069		$1,719,510.57

On September 1, 1909, when the Protective Department was established and the present Protective Committee accepted their appointment, the records of the General Secretary's Office showed a membership of 10,682, and at the close of the present fiscal year ending August 31, 1912, the records showed a membership of 13,323, making a net gain of 2,641. This gain in membership as reported by the General Secretary's Office is very gratifying to this Committee, as it shows that the banks of the country realize more than ever the benefits to be derived from the Protective Feature of the Association.

Relative to forgers and bogus check operators, but very few of our members have been defrauded during the past year by professionals, and practically two-thirds of the cases reported were the operations of amateurs.

CORRESPONDENCE.

The Proective Department has received during the past year 15,972 reports and other communications from our Detective Agents; they have also received 1,260 letters and telegrams, and have written 3,365 letters and telegrams. These figures do not include circular letters and similar communications.

PHOTOGRAPHS.

The Department now has 1,912 photographs of "yegg" burglars, hold-up men, sneak thieves, forgers and bogus check operators, with a complete record of each one.

OFFICERS OF OUR DETECTIVE AGENTS.

When our Detective Agents—the Wm. J. Burns National Detective Agency—less than three years ago undertook the contract to handle our criminal work, they did not have any offices of their own. They now have nineteen offices, located at Los Angeles, and San Francisco, Cal.; Denver, Colo.; Atlanta, Ga.; Chicago, Ill.; New Orleans, La.; Baltimore, Md.; Boston, Mass.; Detroit, Mich.; Minenapolis, Minn.; Kansas City and St. Louis, Mo.; New York, N. Y.; Cleveland, Ohio; Portland, Ore.; Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, Pa.; Houston, Tex.; and Seattle, Wash. They also have the following correspondents:

Iowa, Des Moines	Gust J. Patek Detective Agency.
England, London	Arrow's Detective Agency.
France, Paris	Calchas & Debisschop.

With what has been accomplished by this Agency in three years, it is evident that the operators against banks stand in fear of the sign and the policy of the Association to pursue relentlessly depredations against their members. We feel that the Wm. J. Burns National Detective Agency, Inc., is entitled to much credit for the satisfactory results from their work, and commendation is due them.

Mr. L. W. Gammon, Manager, will read his report to the Executive Council, which covers matters pertaining to the Protective Department other than those contained in this Committee's report.

Mr. Gammon's administration of the work of the Protective Department has now extended over three years, and again we wish to commend his valuable services. He is indefatigable in his labors and thoroughly interested in every phase of his duties, earnest and painstaking, experienced and resourceful, and we believe that in the inauguration of his department a long step was taken in the right direction.

The William J. Burns National Detective Agency, Inc., will make a detailed report of the work accomplished by them during the past fiscal year. This report will be published in the Annual Proceedings, and also printed in pamphlet form for distribution at this Convention.

For more detailed information as to particular cases referred to, we respectfully refer you to the monthly JOURNAL.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

THE STANDING PROTECTIVE COMMITTEE,
FRED. E. FARNSWORTH,
Secretary.

Report of the Committee on Bills of Lading, by Clay H. Hollister, Chairman.

At the last Annual Convention of the Association, held at New Orleans in November, your Committee on Bills of Lading reported among other things the introduction of the Clapp-Stevens bill relating to bills of lading in the first special session of the 62d Congress—in the Senate by Senator Clapp (S. 957) and referred to the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce, and in the House by Congressman Stevens (H. R. 4726) and referred to the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. This is the measure which was originally drafted by the Counsel of the Association and which we were successful in having passed by the House of Representatives in the 61st Congress in June, 1910. This bill was confined to correcting the common law in certain vital particulars in which it failed to make the bill of lading in many cases a reliable security in the hands of the banker or merchant who advances value upon faith of the statements therein contained. The most serious of the defects of the common law proposed to be remedied by this bill is the doctrine which prevails in all the Federal courts and in a number of State courts, that although a bill of lading acknowledging the receipt of prescribed goods is issued by the authorized agent of a carrier and passes to a bona fide holder for value who takes it relying upon the truth of the statements which it contains, the carrier is at liberty to show the fact, whenever it is a fact, that the agent never received the goods but issued the false bill through mistake or fraud or as an accommodation to a shipper, and upon such showing free himself from responsibility on the ground that the agent had no authority to issue the bill of lading before the goods were received.

We also reported at the last Convention our success in urging the Uniform Bill of Lading Act before State Legislatures and that such Uniform Act had already been passed in that year and the preceding year in nine of the States. The Uniform Bill of Lading Act was drafted by Professor Williston, of Harvard University, and is one of a series of five uniform commercial acts which have been drafted for, and approved and recommended by, the Commissioners of Uniform State Laws. It is in effect an entire code of the main rules of law relating to the issue, transfer and redemption of bills of lading, including in its provisions in substance, though in different terms, all the provisions of the Clapp-Stevens bill.

The efforts of your Committee during the present year have been devoted to urging these bills of lading reform laws before Congress and State Legislatures.

A meeting of the Committee was called in New York on January 16. Several members of the Committee and several representatives of shippers' organizations also were present. Plans were discussed for urging the proposed legislation and the duty of carrying out such plans, the arranging for legislative hearings and the collecting and presentation of evidence at such hearings was delegated to our Counsel, Mr. Paton. At this meeting a suggestion was made to your Committee that it might be possible to obtain the co-operation of the railroad interests to a Bill-of-Lading Measure fashioned along the line of our request, which also permitted the railroads to make a charge for the extra service which they claimed would thus be rendered to the shipper. This suggestion was made in such way that it seemed advisable to submit it to all members of the Committee by mail, and this was done. The reasons for and against the proposition were outlined and the whole matter was submitted in detail to each member of the Committee. The consensus of opinion seemed to be that it was not wise to undertake the treatment of that important phase of the question in our bill; that the question of rates was one which might be properly settled by the Interstate Commerce Commission; and that if the railroads could show that there was an extra service, that they had their recourse through this Commission.

The next meeting of the Committee was held in Washington on the evening of February 15. This was preliminary to the first hearing before the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce. Three hearings were held, consuming five days, on February 16 and 17 and on March 1, 2 and 15. The bills under discussion were Senate Bill 957, the Clapp-Stevens bill; and there were also before the body Senate Bill No. 4713, which had been introduced by Senator Pomerene, of Ohio, being a copy of the Uniform Bills of Lading Act approved by the Commissioners on Uniform State Laws for State enactment, modified in certain respects to adapt it for Federal legislation. The hearings were in charge of the attorneys for the bankers and shippers. Professor Williston conducted the case for the bankers; Mr. Paton was associated with him. There were present other attorneys representing shippers' organizations. Mr. James of Cincinnati presented the case of the shippers, who were urging the passage of the Pomerene bill. The discussion went on at great length, very many witnesses for shipper, banker and railroad being called. The result of this hearing, as far as our Committee is concerned, was the final modification of the Clapp-Stevens bill by a short draft presented by Messrs. Williston and Paton to Senator Clapp, the Chairman of the Committee. This short bill was drawn because of the apparent willingness on the part of the Senators to report some short measure, which was not complicated and seemed to meet the necessities of the situation. This modified draft provided responsibility of the railroad for the act of his agent in issuing false bills; liability on order bills not taken up when goods delivered, and took care of duplicate bills.

During the course of the hearings the bankers were asked to state their preference as between the Pomerene and the Clapp-Stevens bill. They stated that the Pomerene bill was perfectly satisfactory to them, being the same law the bankers were advocating in the different States, but that their advices from members of the House were that the shorter measure was the only one practicable to be passed; therefore they favored the latter.

While these measures were pending in the Senate our Committee made earnest efforts to have the Clapp-Stevens bill taken up by the House Committee, but owing to conditions of business in that Committee this was found impossible.

On May 10 the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce reported out the Clapp-Stevens bill (S. 957), in a modified form different in certain respects from the modified draft submitted by our Counsel, but yet satisfactory to the bankers. Accompanying the bill, the Committee made the following report:

"It is not considered necessary to make an elaborate report on this bill. For several years complaints have been numerous, and growing more so, based upon the fact that the agents of railroad companies would issue bills of lading when the company had not, in fact, received the goods. These bills of lading, attached to drafts, would ofttimes be used as a basis of credit, and their use in this manner forms a very large factor in our commercial transactions. In fact, some of the greater products could hardly be handled without the use of the bill of lading. The Supreme Court of the United States in Friedlander v. Texas & Pacific Railroad (130 U. S. 416) held that the carrier was not liable for the act of the agent in issuing the bill of lading where the carrier had not, in fact, received the goods.

"Considerable testimony was taken upon this subject, which will be found in Senate Document No. 650 present session.

"Two bills were pending before the committee, one being the one herewith reported, designed to simply establish a rule of evidence making the carrier liable for the recitals in the bill when issued by an agent authorized to issue a bill of lading, the other covering that point and also relating to the obligations and rights of the transferers and transferees of bills of lading.

"While several members of the committee, including the member making this report, favor the latter plan, yet it was felt that it might be better at this time and be more likely to result in present remedial legislation to report the bill dealing only with the rule of evidence, and therefore the committee has directed the chairman to report S. 957, with certain amendments set forth in the report."

It developed that the shippers' organizations were not satisfied with the reported bill because it was said to omit certain things necessary to safeguard the interests of shippers and receivers of goods, especially because it contained an unsatisfactory "shippers' load and count" provision. By arrangement with the shippers' organizations a conference was held in Washington, on May 21 and 22, at which our Committee was represented by Mr. Ingle and by Messrs. Williston and Paton. The shippers announced that they would oppose the short bill which had been reported and urge the enactment by the Senate of the Pomerene bill. The bankers' attitude was stated to be thus: that we favored remedial legislation on bills of lading, preferably the Pomerene bill if it could be passed but without abandoning our advocacy of the Clapp-Stevens bill as a measure which would sufficiently satisfy the bankers in the event it should develop that the latter would receive the most votes in either House or Senate.

A week before final adjournment of the Senate on August 21 our Committee were much gratified to receive advices that the Senate had on that day passed the Pomerene bill by unanimous vote. The measure now goes to the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, where it will be urged by our Committee at the short session of the 62d Congress next Winter. Our latest advices from members of the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce are that that Committee is not favorably inclined toward the Pomerene bill, while they do favor the Clapp-Stevens bill, and that the House will not consider the Pomerene bill without additional hearings before the Committee, which would not have been necessary had the Clapp-Stevens bill come to them from the Senate. It is to the interest of every member of this Association to do all in their power to urge the passage of the Pomerene bill by the House at at the next session in order that the banking and commercial interests of the country may have placed on the Federal statute books before the close of the present Congress a measure so long sought for and so much needed.

With regard to the promotion of the Uniform Bill of Lading Act in the different States our Committee would report that we have made active efforts this year on behalf of this law before

Report of the Currency Commission.

To the American Bankers' Association:

GENTLEMEN: It has seemed wise to the Currency Commission of the American Bankers' Association to follow in its activities the lead of the Congressional Currency Commission, which has had for its general subject of currency and monetary reform under consideration for several years past, and which has made an exhaustive investigation and research of conditions both in our own country and the other leading commercial nations, all of which data has been reported to Congress and been made accessible to the general public. This Congressional Commission has also formulated a general scheme of financial reform embodied in proposed legislation now pending before Congress.

We had confidently hoped that some tangible results might be obtained from the session of Congress recently closed; in this, however, we were disappointed. It has seemed to us wiser to work for the desired change in our laws through the various local commercial and civic bodies with which we are connected—the National Citizens' League, chambers of commerce, etc.—believing that we were more likely to obtain results by supplementing the efforts being made by Congress itself, rather than undertake separate or independent work.

It is not to be hoped for general legislation of such an important character in a short session of Congress. We may, therefore, fairly conclude that there is no hope for the accomplishment of results except at the hands of the Congress and administration to be elected this Fall. We can proceed more intelligently and efficiently after the result of the election is known and we have an opportunity to confer with and become acquainted with the resulting "powers that be" and learn their purpose and intention.

We make this report in accordance of our standing instructions that the American Bankers' Association may know that we appreciate the importance of the subject and the responsibility resting upon ourselves as members of its Currency Commission. We are satisfied that we have pursued a policy of action and we trust the judgment of the Convention will approve the same.

Respectfully submitted,

A. BARTON HEPBURN, Chairman

Report of the Library and Reference Department.

The Library and Reference Department was created to provide a central place for the systematic collecting, preserving and making available of that information relative to banking subjects for which the National Association of American Bankers is naturally considered the source of supply to its own members, the press, students of finance or the general inquirer The work of development began November, 1911, and the technical details of organization during these first ten months of its existence have, of necessity, occupied time and attention which can later be devoted to the broadening of that usefulness which seems to have already justified its establishment.

The original collection of less than 400 volumes has been increased to 1,500. Of these additions 6 have been made by purchase, 50 by binding, and the remainder by gifts and exchange including two valuable sets of financial periodicals loaned by the Bankers' Publishing Company. The present collection consists chiefly of A. B. A. and State Bankers' Association Proceedings, State bank reports, Government documents, bound financial journals, and general reference books. More general books on banking will be added as occasion requires, and as seems consistent with the belief that, at least in the initial stages of the Department's development, expensive duplication of the ample resources of the large college and city libraries should be avoided and efforts concentrated on those functions peculiar to a specialized library relating to banking practice.

In making a library of this type a selection of banking information rather than a collection covering the broad field of finance, the acquisition of material most pertinent to live subjects of current interest has been considered of prime importance. As such subjects are seldom covered in book form until their period of timeliness to the banker has passed, it follows that pamphlets, press comment, addresses, magazine articles or the personal opinion of individuals in correspondence etc., constitute the form in which desirable material must be sought Securing the material in various ways from widely scattered sources, and the general routine of caring for it when received need be only alluded to as requiring considerable time and technique

Six thousand, six hundred and twenty-six pamphlets, clippings, magazine articles, etc., have been mounted and filed in the Library in such form that they can be loaned through the mail to any banker requesting their use in the preparation of addresses, papers, or other reference. This material is in such demand that the records show it has been loaned from Canada to California and from Alabama to Australia. When the original material cannot be sent, typewritten copies are made or supplementary reference lists compiled.

After books etc., are received they are classified by a system adapted to the needs of a banking library, and cataloged on cards by author and subject. A single article or address may contain facts and figures of reference value on several subjects and the aim in general to make this information available is indicated by the fact that four thousand entries were necessary to adequately catalogue merely the A. B. A. and State Bankers' Association proceedings. An index of valuable articles on banking in the standard financial magazines will be added to the general catalogue, as well as a record of the statistical data on such subjects in the Comptroller's reports since 1876.

Among the library's other resources are included pictures of bankers with such biographical data as it has been possible to secure; representative examples of bank advertising and interior and exterior pictures of banks for the use of bankers in designing or remodeling buildings. As time permits this growing collection will be supplemented by bank plans, studies of lighting, equipment, etc. Material of any kind is at all times available at all times to the needs of Sections and the existing bank clipping files have recently been consolidated with the general collection through co-operation with the Secretary of that Section

But as much valuable information relative to the development of banking in the United States is not available in printed form, efforts are being made to secure from original sources personal reminiscences of bankers, anecdotes, contents of summaries of local and national phases of banking history while the opportunity exists. In this way the Association should eventually possess an unusual fund of interesting facts scattered to be assembled elsewhere

So little has been published on the detail of banking practice that one of the library's most important efforts is the getting of a comprehensive collection of such information as will be otherwise unobtainable from a central source, and will be useful to bankers for comparison of methods and results.

But the Library Department must be both a collecting center and an active agency for the distribution of its resources. The answering of daily inquiries at the library or by correspondence involves research work, making of reference lists, compilation of statistics, and the sending out of material through the mail or by messenger. The demand for information on certain subjects is anticipated as far as possible, and special collections prepared and called to the attention of members through press or personal notices. As a public clearing house for publications of current interest, the Department has sent out over five hundred pamphlets on currency reform and similar subjects to bankers, libraries and individuals upon request, and has recently arranged to distribute the publications of the International Agriculture at Rome on foreign agricultural credit system. Press articles on the work of the Association have been prepared by the librarian, who is also interested in co-operating with existing agencies for the extension of certain of the Association activities.

With many details omitted, the work of these first few months thus briefly outlined should be regarded as merely preliminary and the results accomplished as only suggestive of the broader opportunities for service to the members of the Association which time and increased resources will develop.

Respectfully submitted,

MARIAN R. GLENN,
Librarian.

Report of Committee on Agricultural and Financial Development and Education.

Your Committee begs to report progress during the past year. On February 29 we appeared before the House Committee on Agriculture and on March 1 before the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, urging federal aid in bettering the farming conditions in this country. The bill under discussion was the Lever Bill, appropriating money from the federal treasury to aid the several States in demonstration work upon the farms. The government has been doing this work in the cotton States for several years, and the results obtained have been remarkable. We feel that all the States in the Union should receive the benefit of this kind of work and while we were greatly pleased that the government was doing this work for some of the States we see no reason why it should limit its activities to the cotton States when all sections of the country are sadly in need of additional work of this character. We were accompanied by several gentlemen representing the State Bankers' Committee on Agricultural Development and Education and were pleased every courtesy by both the House and Senate Committees, and feel that we accomplished the object of our visit which was to impress upon Congress the fact that the business men of this country as well as the farmers were vitally interested in this subject and wanted Congress to do this early this

During the year just passed, your Committee has been instrumental in securing the appointment of standing committees from twenty State Bankers Associations which in addition to the committees already existing last year gives us standing committees on Agricultural Development and Education from thirty State Bankers Associations representing the States of Alabama, Arkansas, Colorado, Florida, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South, Carolina

South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia, Washington, West Virginia and Wisconsin.

On August 7 and 8 of this year the second annual conference of these Committees was held in Minneapolis and St. Paul, and twenty-three States were present in the conference by Committees representing 17,000 banks. It was a most enthusiastic and instructive meeting, the addresses, which were delivered by the best authorities in this country, covered the better part of two days. You will be impressed by the way the delegates attended to business from the fact that the first day's session opened at 10 o'clock, with one hour for luncheon, and adjourned at 5 o'clock, when the delegates were taken by cars to Minnetonka, given a dinner, and returned to their hotels about 12 o'clock that night. The second day's session opened at 9 o'clock in St. Paul, with one hour for luncheon, and adjourned at 7 o'clock in the evening.

The proceedings of this conference, making a book of 368 pages, is just from the press and 25,000 copies were ordered by the delegates present for the use of the bankers of their respective States and others interested. As an educational meeting nothing like it has ever been held in this country, and we expect the report of the conference will become a text book for bankers and others who wish to become useful in their own community in spreading the doctrine of practical education along agricultural and industrial lines.

Speakers were provided by your Committee for some twelve Bankers' Associations' Conventions and throughout the country the Bankers' Associations were urged to devote considerable of the time of their Conventions to the discussion of agricultural problems in their own States. This has made the meetings interesting and instructive and will bear much fruit.

One State held its annual Convention in an Agricultural College and the entire proceedings, with the exception of one address on the Currency Commission Report, was devoted to the subject of agricultural development and education.

Our principal work, up to date, has been in arousing public sentiment on this question, and so thoroughly has this been done in one State where a Committee has been at work for three years, that during that time eighty-five high schools have put in courses in agriculture, domestic science and vocational training, and forty-six consolidated rural schools have put the elements of agriculture and industrial training into their courses. This work was done in Minnesota, where the people are thoroughly in favor of a system of education that will fit the needs of the people, and the changes would come still more rapidly were it possible to get competent teachers to give instruction in these subjects.

A very much more comprehensive bill than the Lever Bill is the Page Bill, which not only makes provision for demonstration work on the farms, but provides for the training of teachers in the science of agriculture, industrial training and domestic science. The absolute scarcity of teachers in these practical subjects is the greatest drawback to our introducing these subjects into our schools and colleges. The Page Bill received the unanimous endorsement of the delegates present at the second annual conference.

The Committees from North Dakota and Illinois have done excellent work in their States, the Committee from North Dakota being awarded the first prize at the conference for the most effective work done during the past year. Their work has been largely accomplished through aiding in the passage of laws in the Legislature and in furthering the better farming movement of that State, which is described at length in the proceedings of the conference.

In addition to the work carried on in this country by the Committee, we beg leave to report that two of the members of our Committee, Honorable Myron T. Herrick, of Ohio, and Edwin Chamberlain, of Texas, have spent considerable time in Europe, at their own expense, studying the great land banks in Germany, France and other countries, with the idea of informing this Association, and, through them, the people of this country, of the benefits derived by the people of those countries from a scientific system of farm financing.

Your Committee wishes to thak the officers of this Association for their co-operation during the past year, an evidence of which is seen by the fact that Friday morning is to be devoted entirely to the discussion of this problem.

We feel that our work is only fairly started and expect, before the close of next year, that every State Bankers' Association will have a standing committee on this subject, and your Committee expects to co-operate to the best of its ability with these several Committees, to the end that our people will realize that our much-vaunted public school system is sadly lacking in its equipment to give our boys and girls the kind of education most suited to our day and age, and that through some such measure as the Page Bill we may prepare our teachers and our schools to turn out efficient, self-reliant young men and women, fitted to fill their place in life.

JOSEPH CHAPMAN, Chairman.

Report of the Law Committee.

The Law Committee has been engaged in promoting the passage in the various States of laws protecting banks and banking transactions approved by the Association.

These laws have been printed in separate pamphlets, with annotations prepared by the General Counsel and statement of the reasons for their enactment. Copies have been forwarded, briefs and arguments prepared, and much correspondence carried on with Bankers' Associations in the eleven States, where Legislatures were in session in 1912, and nine of our laws were enacted, as follows:

An act to punish the making or use of false statements to obtain property or credit: Louisiana, New Jersey, New York, Rhode Island.

An act to punish derogatory statements affecting banks: New York.

An act fixing liability of a bank to its depositor for payment of forged or raised checks: Louisiana, Massachusetts.

The uniform Warehouse Receipts Act: Louisiana.

Appended to this report (appendix I.) is a summary prepared by the General Counsel, which gives the text of the above Association measures as recommended, and as passed in different States, and (appendix II.) a summary of State legislation in 1912 affecting banks, other than that recommended by this Association.

In addition to its regular duties under the constitution as above, this Committee in May, 1911, was instructed by the Executive Council to investigate fully the subject of special investment for savings deposits. This investigation covered nearly a year and entailed a large amount of correspondence. The Committee also gave nine hearings, each attended by from ten to fifty bankers, in Detroit, Cleveland, Chicago, St. Paul, Des Moines, St. Louis, Louisville, New Orleans and New York, at which the subject of the investment of savings deposits and their segregation from commercial deposits was thoroughly discussed. A pamphlet summarizing the points there brought out at their hearings was prepared and sent to every member of the Association, with a request for expressions of opinion on various phases of the subject; 3,119 of the members replied, and a tabulation of their views showed 1,447 to be in favor of the segregation of savings deposits and 1,489 to be opposed to it.

The Committee reported fully and finally on the subject to the Executive Council in May, 1912, and their report was ordered to be printed in pamphlet form.

Respectfully submitted,

PIERRE JAY, Chairman.

Report of Committee on Forms for National and State Banks.

Your Committee on Forms for National and State Banks begs leave to submit its report, as follows:

As reported to the Council at the Spring Meeting, the remaining work of assorting and compiling the forms from among the many thousands submitted by members of the Association has been undertaken by Secretary Wolfe, of the Clearing House Section, since it was found impractical to call a meeting of the members of the Committee together and expect that the vast amount of mechanical work could be accomplished in a short time. The result has been not only a greater degree of economy, but also greater progress in the matter of eliminating duplications and undesirable specimen forms.

The forms are now ready for a final selection, which will consume but a short time, so that the completed work will be ready for the press in the near future. While the book is in the hands of the compositors, the members of the Association will be canvassed to determine the number of subscriptions which may be expected. As has been done in the case of Trust Company and Savings Bank Forms, non-members will be able to secure the book at an additional cost.

At New Orleans the Executive Council appropriated the sum of $4,500, with authority vested in the executive officers to increase this if necessary by not exceeding $3,000 to carry the work of this Committee to a completion. Of this appropriation there has been expended on account of traveling expenses of the Committee during the year, $233. We would respectfully recommend that a like sum, $4,500, be appropriated, together with authority to increase this if necessary by not exceeding $2,000. This appropriation would be in the nature of working capital, since it is proposed to sell the book of forms at a price that will reimburse the Association for its expenditure.

The Committee had hoped to be able to present a final report at this meeting, but the work has proved to be of such magnitude that this was found to be impossible. However, with the new arangement mentioned for completing the task, more definite results may be expected shortly.

Detailed Report of Proceedings.

THIRTY-EIGHTH ANNUAL CONVENTION HELD AT DETROIT, SEPT. 10 TO SEPT. 13, 1912.

FIRST DAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

MORNING SESSION.

Tuesday, September 10, 1912.

WILLIAM LIVINGSTONE, President, presiding.

The President: The convention will please come to order. The blessing will be invoked by Bishop Frederick D. Leete. Please stand.

Invocation by Bishop Frederick D. Leete:

Oh Lord, our God, we thank Thee that we are permitted to gather together for the functions of this great occasion. We thank Thee for this body of distinguished men gathered from all sections of a great country to transact business of supreme importance to the commercial safety of the Nation, and of great importance to business and welfare. We would not venture to assume the duties of this occasion without first stopping to lift our minds to God, the Giver of all good things, and we desire to offer all praise for that land in which we live, for the age in which our lives have been cast, and for the great prosperity which attends those sections of the country which are represented here to-day. Thou art the giver, Oh God, of every good and perfect gift, and those material blessings which have come to us in such showers have come to us not simply because we have might of hand and might of mind, but because we have a God of infinite wisdom, love and power, and we would return to Thee the thanks for all good things, and we would pray to Thee, our Father, that Thy blessing may attend all this session of this great and important convention, and that Thou grant, Oh God, Thy wisdom to the world, we pray that for the nations of the earth they may be ruled by righteousness and truth, and by those wise laws of commercial living which shall bring prosperity to all men. We would especially pray for the land we love, and for those who guide these great and important interests. May wisdom be given to the President of the United States and all his counselors, and to all those who have authority over us in the nation. And, our Father, we would not forget to pray for this great commonwealth in which we are gathered at this time, and we would ask Thy grace to rest upon the commonwealth of the State, upon the Governor of the State of Michigan and upon those who are his coadjutors in office, that they may be guided by the wisdom which cometh from above, and we would ask Thy grace, our Father, for this beautiful city which we love and in which there have occurred so many important gatherings in the past, and none more important, perhaps, in many years, than the one which is meeting here to-day. Grant Thy blessing to Detroit and give to it in the years to come great wisdom and great advantage in all good things. And, our Father, we pray Thee now for this meeting and for the president of this great body, this man of pride and honor and truth, may he be attended wtih Thy grace, may all of his assistants in this responsible task feel that God is with them in the discharge of their functions and duties. Now, our Father, we pray Thee that during this meeting we may be given wisdom and insight into the great problems which shall be presented here, and we pray Thee that the men constituting this body, whose lives represents so much intelligence, receive Thy guidance, and we pray Thee that in the midst of all the affairs which are secular and sordid, even in our great duties, we may realize that there are things spiritual; we pray Thee, oh God, that in the midst of all things worldly we may preserve our idealism. We pray that during the time of the stay of this convention these men of great importance in our national affairs may so conduct themselves while in this city that they may impress the young men of the city of Detroit and the State of Michigan with those high moral principles which we find so largely inspired this body in all the transactions of its business. Now, our heavenly Father, we ask that this body may be granted favorable weather, that there may be great hospitality, and that when the days of this session shall be ended all the men composing this body may return to their great duties at home with a new inspiration for truth and honor and righteousness, may they go back in such health, also, of mind and soul, as they hope to find in the dear ones whom they have left at home. And these things we ask in the name which is above every name—in the name of Jesus Christ, our Lord and Savior. Amen.

The President: Gentlemen of the Convention: It affords me great pleasure to introduce to you the chief executive of the State, the Honorable Chase S. Osborn, Governor of the State of Michigan.

Address of Welcome, by Hon. Chase S. Osborn, Governor of Michigan.

Mr. President, Bishop Leete and Members of the American Bankers Association, Ladies and Gentlemen:

I do not know what is in your hearts exactly at this moment, but I am going to tell you what is in mine. It is a feeling of gratefulness to the good Bishop who has delivered such a masterly invocation. It did me good, and I am sure it will do you good, and I even have an idea it will do the Bishop good, as well. Now, before I get away—and I am not going to get very far away—I want to tell you that here in Detroit and in Michigan we think just as much of your charming president, your most potent president, your most excellent business president, as you do, and all of us thank you for the honor you have conferred upon this city and State (applause). It is a good thing for a man once in a while, no matter in what walks of life he may be engaged, to stop and take an account of himself. It is mighty good for men to understand each other and to give some thought to their business—in other words, it is a good thing to look at the genesis of things. It is a good thing to remember the caveman. It is a great thing to know whether you and I have kept pace with the evolution that has taken place. Do you bankers ever stop to consider away back 700 years B. C. in the days of 35 per cent. interest! There has been a great improvement since those days. I wonder if any of you have visited the British Museum and have seen the contracts and notes and bond drawn up on pieces of baked clay? Surely a great advance has been made in those respects. You know there was a time when the great Master scored usurers and drove the money changers out of the temple. Now, we are glad to get the bankers to take an interest in temples, and very many of them do, I am happy to say. So you see what a great improvement has been made in that regard. To-day the banker is a man of soul and of heart and of happiness. Why, many of you here can remember the time when the banker was referred to as a "Shylock" or a "Skinflint." But those times happily have passed away.

I don't know anything about the monetary systems, but I do think that we need some different monetary system. I think we need some canons of ethics and equity; some economic revolution or evolution—I don't mean any socialistic panacea, but I mean some system by which the financial affairs of this country shall be conducted on an equitable business plane.

Gentlemen, in the name of the State of Michigan, whom I have the honor to represent, I bid you welcome. I hope each wakening morning that you will be girded for the day of endeavor, for the day of work and of happiness, and that when majestic night casts her mantle over your slumbering brows you will rejoice that you have been in Michigan, and you will have sweet dreams that will refresh you so that when you arise it will be with a resolve to again come back to Michigan. (Applause.)

The President: Owing to the fact that the Mayor, Honorable William B. Thompson, was called from the city, the greetings of the city of Detroit will be extended to the Convention by Honorable John C. Lodge, one of the members of the Common Council, whom I now have the pleasure of introducing to you.

Address of Welcome, by Hon. John C. Lodge.

Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen and Members of the American Bankers' Association:

I have known men to approach the banker with fear and trembling. So it need not be strange if a plain business man unaccustomed to public speaking should show a little embarrassment and self-consciousness in looking into the faces of hundreds of bankers. It is my pleasure, in the absence of the Mayor, to tender to you all that the word Welcome means. I cannot say anything—and I never knew anybody, after 25 years of experience with the gentleman, who could add anything to a speech made by Governor Osborn (applause), so I am not going to make the attempt. I am going to say to you that the city of Detroit feels the honor you have conferred upon her by meeting within her gates. I am going to tell you, sincerely, that we feel more than honored by the selection you have made in the person of your presiding officer. We appreciate our bankers. We know that they have kept pace with the marvelous growth of our city. Indeed, some of us believe that they have been the pacemakers. And we know that you appreciate our bankers, too, for fifteen years ago you chose one of our best known and best loved citizens to preside over your organization; I speak now of George H. Russel. (Applause.) Again, you made our city the place from which you selected a secretary, and he is with you to-day. I am sure every one in Detroit knew that if there was such a thing as a heaven-born secretary, Fred Farnsworth was that man. (Applause.) Still, again, you honored us by selecting our friend, a man whom all Detroit loves, as your president, William Livingstone. (Applause.)

The Governor has said that the State welcomes you. I am here to say that the city welcomes you, and if this were a walled city I would give the keys to your president, but I am thankful to say that we have no walls; our doors are wide open, and I wish you all to understand and to sense to the full the meaning of that fine old word, Hospitality. Detroit welcomes you, and we hope you will come here often, with no such a long interval between your visits. I thank you, and on the [part of the city, most cordially welcome you to everything that is ours. (Applause.)]

[The President: I have to introduce to you now a gentleman who has long been associated with the American Bankers' Association. Even if he does belong within our borders, I think I may say that most know him best to love him. I have known him from boyhood, and I think he is very nice and big. Fifteen years ago, in this same auditorium, he was elected vice president of the American Bankers' Association, later on he was elected president of the association at its convention in Denver. Multiplicity of words will add nothing to his standing in this or in any other community, and I therefore take great pleasure in now presenting to you Mr. George H. Russel. (Applause.)]

Address of Welcome, by George H. Russel, President of the Detroit Clearing House.

Mr. President, Members of the American Bankers' Association, Ladies and Gentlemen:

Fifteen years ago I was fortunate in being chosen to make the address of welcome to the American bankers on behalf of the Clearing House in the absence of its then chairman. This year it is again my pleasure and privilege to appear before you, and this time as the chairman of our Clearing House Association, and on behalf of the bankers, the business men, the manufacturers of our community, to bid you a hearty welcome. We have had a long, cold summer (laughter)—well, we have held in store for you the warmest welcome that Detroit could possibly tender you (renewed laughter). This, I think, is the hottest day we have ever experienced, but our motto is: In Detroit life is worth the living, and I could not apologize for this day.

It was on this platform, fifteen years ago, that I made my maiden speech from off the floor. At that time you put me in line for the greatest honor in life that has ever come to me, and I want to say to you now, to the friends that were with us then, and the new friends that I have made since, that I and my family feel very proud of the distinction that the Association put upon me. The Association then numbered about 2,800. We had for that time a very large representation. In the fifteen years that have elapsed we have attained a membership approaching 14,000. From among that number you have again honored our city in placing a deserved honor upon our chief citizen—our good friend, our strong banker, our civic champion, Honorable William Livingstone. (Applause.) And on behalf of the bankers who hold him in high esteem I thank you for that.

Fifteen years ago—that is, in 1897—we had begun to forget the troublous times of '93. Your advent at that time seemed to give Detroit a new impetus, to start us on a stronger industrial growth than we had before experienced; and I may say that, in anticipation of your return at this time, the last two years have been marked with the most marvelous growth. In 1897 we had a population of 260,000. To-day we have a population of something over 550,000. Then we were the sixteenth city in the United States. To-day we rank as the ninth city. Possibly I ought to apologize to the representatives of other cities that are here and which cities we have passed in population in those years, but I want to give notice that there are at least two other cities that we will rank in population in the next decade. Our manufactures then were developing. In 1897 our manufacturing product was about $55,000,000. This year it will exceed $265,000,000. Building permits were issued in that year for structures costing $4,500,000. This year they will exceed $25,000,000, and they would have been even more if the materials for building could have been obtained. Our banking capital then was $7,500,000. To-day it is $22,000,000. Our deposits then were $56,000,000. To-day they are $164,000,000. Our clearings then were $203,000,000. This year, on the corresponding estimate of prior years, they will be over $1,100,000,000. We do not rank quite as well in our Clearing House business as other cities, for the reason that Chicago and Cleveland have largely take our clearings from us. The figures of the Detroit Post office are also astonishing. Then they were about $824,000, to-day they are approaching $3,000,000. So you see that we have grown some, and now you have come to us again and undoubtedly we shall take a fresh start from this day forward.

I will not bore you further, except to say that, on behalf of the citizens of Detroit, the Governor has given you the State, the Vice Mayor has given you the city, and I offer you our banks—but not all of our funds, because they are in very active use just now, but our hearts and our homes and a real welcome, and I need not say, because I know you all appreciate the fact, that we are making the weather warm enough for you. (Applause.)

The President: We have with us a gentleman than whom perhaps no man in Detroit or in the State is better known—our Postmaster—who is also the president of the Board of Commerce, which comprises over 3,000 members, and which has done wonderful work in promoting the welfare, growth and prosperity of our city. It affords me great pleasure to introduce to you Mr. Homer Warren. (Applause.)

Address of Welcome, by Hon. Homer Warren, Postmaster of Detroit and President of the Board of Commerce.

Mr. President, Members of the American Bankers' Association, Ladies and Gentlemen:

My friend, Alderman Lodge, said that he had never known anyone to add anything to a speech of Governor Osborn. I fully agreed with him until this morning. I was delighted to hear the Governor tell you that by a process of evolution you had become human. I want to go even further and say that you have become humane, because I have observed many instances of bankers' humanity. Now I think I have added something to the Governor's speech. (Applause.)

Like Alderman Lodge, I feel a sense of timidity almost in venturing before a banker, but looking at this distinguished gathering, and especially at the ladies in the gallery, I feel quite at home. It gives me a great deal of pleasure to welcome you, because you are men in close touch with all great business operations, not only in your own particular communities, but also in the great marts of commerce throughout the country at large. It is astonishing and almost uncanny to the laymen to think how the business of this country, which is conducted so largely on confidence, is done, and to reflect that your judgment of men is so seldom misplaced. I think it is a great tribute to the character of the banker that such vast sums are placed in your care, and that through the culpability or even the negligence of bankers so very little is lost.

On behalf of the really great organization of which your president has spoken, the Detroit Board of Commerce, composed of alert wide-awake business men, I tender you a most hearty welcome. Allusion has been made to the weather. This heat is most unusual, and I can only account for it on the theory that the warmth of our feelings toward you has even invaded the atmosphere.

I observed a suggestion in one of the morning papers that this convention should become an annual feature to this city. I think that is a splendid idea, and I hope you will make this your annual Mecca and come to Detroit.

We thank you for the distinguished honor you have paid us in the persons of these two gentlemen, George H. Russel and William Livingstone. Mr. Livingstone used to claim that he brought me up, and I was always delighted to have him acknowledge it, but, like the old song, "My Face is Well Written, But Time Alone is the Pen," and I have noticed that, as time has been making ravages on my face and figure, Mr. Livingstone does not so often speak of having brought me up. But all of the younger men and the middle-aged men of Detroit think of Mr. Russel and Mr. Livingstone as brothers. They retain their youth, and I hope they always will until they reach the land of eternal youth, and that while they are here they will always be boys with us. (Applause.)

We have great industries here in Detroit. I see that you visited one of them yesterday—the works of the Burroughs Adding Machine. Not alone in the automobile industry have we made great strides, but we have big stove works here, car and shipbuilding plants, brass and copper rolling mills, the largest pharmaceutical manufacturing establishment in the world, and very many other large enterprises. Those of you who were here fifteen years ago have doubtless observed great changes. Detroit, too, is a most beautiful city. We have a magnificent Island Park, where, on any holiday and on many other days, you will find thousands of persons, families with their children, enjoying the most healthful, innocent and inexpensive amusements that perhaps any city in the world can offer. That makes Detroit a splendid residential place for the workingman. Our inhabitants very largely own their own homes, and our people are happy, prosperous and contented.

To this fair city, then, I welcome you, on behalf of the Board of Commerce as representing, not only individuals, but as representing the business organization of our people. What a wonderful country we live in! I was in Plymouth, Mass., the other day and a sudden realization came over me of the fact that it is less than three hundred years since a devoted band of Pilgrims landed there. Those stalwart souls, the memory of those men will march on and on through the pages of history for all time to come. They made mistakes, it is true. Why, if we did some of the things that the Pilgrim fathers did we would be lynched. But they were honest mistakes, and a just God has forgiven them, and, looking back and considering the mistakes, let us call to mind the words of the great Book: "Still abideth these three, Faith, Hope and Charity, and the greatest of these is Charity." (Applause.)

I hope your stay here will be pleasant, and that you may derive as much pleasure from your deliberations as the country will derive profit.

I thank you for the fact that you have brought the ladies with you. You have shown good sense, and it is a compliment to Detroit. They say that man is mighty, that he governs land and sea, and that he wields a mighty sceptre, but the hand that rocks the cradle is the hand that rules the world, gentlemen.

(Applause.) So I offer you this toast, an old army toast, to the ladies:

"Lovely woman. Our arms for her defence. Her arms our recompense. Fall in." (Applause.)

I thank you.

The President: Fifteen years ago, in this same place, a distinguished gentleman from the State of Georgia responded to the address of welcome. That gentleman is with us again today, and we are not only proud, but glad to have him here. Every member of the American Bankers' Association knows him. Indeed, among bankers, his name is a household word. To write the history of the American Bankers' Association without including his name would be impossible. It affords me more than usual pleasure to introduce to you—and I should have said, by the way—that he is one of the former presidents of the American Bankers' Association, although it is unnecessary to say that to the members—Col. Robert J. Lowry, the grand old man of the American Bankers' Association. (Applause.)

Response to Address of Welcome, by Col. Robert J. Lowry

Your Excellency the Governor of Michigan, Your Honor the Mayor of the City of Detroit, Mr. President of the Detroit Clearing House, Mr. President of the Detroit Board of Commerce, Mr. President and Members of the American Bankers' Association, Ladies and Gentlemen:

It has been with great pleasure that I have listened to the words of welcome of these gentlemen, and I know that I voice the sentiment of all the members of our Association and visitors, when I say that we appreciate them. Indeed, we appreciate these words of cordial welcome more than I have words at my command to express. However, we expected this before we came here—that is, those of us who have enjoyed your hospitality in years past, and those of us who have not been here before—will know hereafter what Detroit hospitality means.

Looking back through memories I, not bedimmed by the fifteen years which have elapsed, I see two magnificent steamboats linked together, filled with the most tasteful viands to eat, the most exhilarating liquids to drink and the most beautiful and attractive ladies to admire, for all of which your great city enjoys a merited fame, which was a most enjoyable treat to all of us who had the opportunity and pleasure to attend the 1897 convention of the Association here. I recall also that magnificent luncheon given by Walker Brothers across the river in Canada, on that beautiful green plot of four or five acres a most inspiring and enjoyable occasion. With that distinctly in mind, who would wonder that I say that those of us who have been here before know what Detroit can do when she gets "on the job."

In this city fifteen years ago I laid down my commission as president of this Association, to which office the Association had been good enough to elect me the previous year in St. Louis. It was indeed gratifying to see the good work that had been done, beginning to show results, for it will be remembered that our asssociation declared for sound money when we were importuned by all political parties to consider the free coinage of silver, bimetalism and other propositions. After this declaration in 1896, it was here in 1897 that good results began to show, and in the subsequent years the history of the country has vindicated the judgment of the Association on that question.

As bankers, we are patriots, and are interested in everything that interests our country. Our vocations are such that we could not be otherwise than patriots. Integrity is the corner stone on which the superstructure of our business and our association stands. We have asked for no special laws, but we favor general laws, which are applicable to the good of the people of the whole country, for we stand for the growth and uplift of the nation, and we are always successful individually when the whole country enjoys prosperity. Aside from our interest in home development and progress we stand for the betterment of our consular service abroad, for the building up of a strong American Merchant Marine and the strengthening of our navy. Much has been done along these lines, but I fear not as much as should have been done, for this great country should have all the prestige on the high seas and in foreign lands which its wonderful growth, industry and intelligence and home should want.

I will not take up more of your time, as there are other gentlemen to follow me who can entertain you better, but let me, in closing, tender to you the greetings of the beautiful Southland, the home of sentiment as well as industry, the land which cherishes its history and traditions, but is alive to the opportunities for twentieth century progress. Our crops are just now being gathered and are much better than we had expected. Our people are hopeful and happy, and extend to you all a cordial invitation to come down "South in Dixie" whenever you have the opportunity, and we will give you the best time we know how. (Applause.) I thank you.

The President: As the day is exceedingly warm and my remarks which I have to make are all in print, I will skip a portion of it, reading a little on some one or two points that I want to call your attention to specifically.

Annual Address of the President, William Livingstone, Detroit, Mich.

To the Thirty-Eighth Annual Convention of the American Bankers' Association.

Gentlemen: Fifteen years ago Detroit had the pleasure of entertaining the American Bankers' Association, and those of you who attended the convention of 1897 remember that the Association at that time was truly in its infancy; its membership numbering but 2,813, and its only adjunct the Trust Company Section which was then just one year old. It affords me the greatest pleasure to congratulate you to-day on the present organization, with its membership of over 13,300 —representing a net increase during the past year of over 1,200, the largest increase in any one year since organizing, its various Sections, Departments and Committees all working for the furtherance of the banking and business interests, and for uniformity of laws in all of the States.

Trust Company Section.

The Trust Company Section whose membership now embraces about two-thirds of the largest and most progressive Trust Companies of the United States, is on the alert at all times to improve conditions and facilities for the performing of the duties of the various institutions doing a trust company business; its book of Trust Company Forms, compiled by the Secretary, Mr. P. S. Babcock, is widely used by members of the Section.

Savings Bank Section.

The Savings Bank Section is the largest Section in point of membership in Banks in the Association. This Section was successfully launched in 1902, and has been piloted by very able officers during its entire history. Too much credit cannot be given the late William Hanhart, who, as Secretary, carefully guided its activities, and the work started by him has been carried on creditably by his successor, W. H. Kniffin, Jr., and since his resignation, by Mr. E. G. McWilliam. Not only has the Section been active in securing new members, but also along various lines from which that membership has benefited. Perhaps one of the most important features of their work has been the campaign of education among the people of the United States on saving and thrift, and a continuation of the work toward fostering school savings banks.

Clearing House Section.

The Clearing House Section, the youngest of the three larger Sections, is by no means the least important. Its growth since the first conference of Clearing Houses in St. Louis in 1896, has been rapid, indeed, and at the last convention held in New Orleans, the Section deemed it advisable to place a secretary in charge who could devote all of his time to this feature. The executive officers have been actively engaged in directing and promoting the work laid out by the Section. The Universal Numerical System has been adopted by more than seven thousand banks according to actual reports in the Secretary's office. Many other banks have been taken care of by their correspondents and no record has been furnished the office of these. Mr. Wolfe, the Secretary, is untiring in his efforts along this line, and he has been attending chapter meetings of the American Institute of Banking and establishing committees among chapter members whose duty it is to see that all checks passing through their banks bear the transit numbers, for in order to make the plan as valuable to the banks as it should be, all checks and drafts should bear these Clearing House numbers.

In the Clearing House Section seventeen cities now have a special Clearing House Examiner who is solely under the direction and control of the Clearing House Committee, and the reports from all of these cities show that the system is most satisfactory and that very beneficial resuls have been obtained, and all strongly endorse the system. Also not least in it work is the endeavor of the Section to secure uniformity in Clearing reports.

American Institute of Banking.

The American Institute of Banking Section has seventy-five chapters, including one in Cuba and one in Hawaii, with a total membership of over 12,000. With commendable conservatism, the Institute has consistently resisted the temptation to sacrifice quality to quantity in extending its membership, and any former misgivings that the organization might degenerate into a labor organization or a circle of social clubs have vanished. Sound and systematic educational work along orthodox lines seems to be the established policy of institute management, and beneficial results are manifest in the improvement of banking methods in chapter cities. In fact, the success of chapters in large cities has created the erroneous impression that the Institute is solely a city proposition, and correspondence instruction among country bankers has not thus far received the consideration that it deserves. The Journal Bulletin is not only an indispensable agency in Institute work, but serves the purpose of an interchange of information between employers and employees regarding the activities of all, and thereby promote the vocational harmony for which the banking business is justly noted. The Executive Council of the Institute in whom its government is vested is composed of young bankers of exceptional capacity and conservatism, who are creditable alike to the membership whom they represent and to the American Bankers' Association of which the Institute is an important Section. Mr. George E. Allen, Educational Director, has been indefatigable in this work and is entitled to much credit for what has been accomplished.

State Secretaries' Section.

The latest body to become affiliated with the parent organization is the various State Associations, through their Secretaries, in what is known as the State Secretaries' Section. This Section has added Association very materially in increasing its membership, in addition to many other factors which make for the good of the organization.

Each has its field of labor, officered by able, diligent, courteous and congenial men with whom it is a pleasure to associate and to work, and each conscientiously carrying on is own prescribed duties.

Committees.

It must be clearly understood, however, that while the Association is very much indebted to the work of its Sections, and without detracting in any way from the great credit to which they are entitled in their various capacities, the Association has also received very valu-

[illegible] committees, which have always been active and effective, as could be demanded.

Bill of Lading Committee.

The Bill of Lading Committee appointed seven years ago for improving the form of the bill of lading and obtaining legislation which would make these documents better security for the banker, has been one of the most active and [illegible] of the Association's committees; and while it has not met with ultimate success, results are gradually being obtained, through the investigative efforts on the part of the Committee. During its existence, the Bill of Lading Committee has seen a [illegible] bill of lading in two forms for Order and Straight shipments recommended by the Interstate Commerce Commission and adopted generally by the railroads. It has seen the uniform Bills of Lading [illegible] on the statute books of ten States; and it has seen a uniform bill of lading Statute to safeguard these documents, framed by the General Counsel of this Association, enacted in four States prior to the time when the Uniform Bill of Lading Act was drafted. Among other great benefits of these laws is the providing of responsibility in the carrier for the act of his agent in issuing a bill of lading without receipt of the goods, which responsibility does not exist under the common law.

During the entire time of the existence of the Committee the first two years under the leadership of ex-President L. E. Pierson, as Chairman, and the past three years under the able direction of Clay H. Hollister, an active campaign has been carried on for the adoption of similar legislation by Congress. In the 61st Congress, in June, 1910, the Stevens Law advocated by this Association was passed by an almost unanimous majority, but failed in the Senate. In the 62d Congress, the campaign has been vigorously urged. Three hearings were held last winter by the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce, at which was presented both the Stevens Bill and the Pomerene Bill, which is the State Uniform Bill of Lading Act adapted for Federal enactment. On August 21 the Senate passed the Pomerene Bill unanimously and it now goes to the House. As your President was a charter member of this Committee, and served on same for four years, and, therefore, fully realizing its great importance, cannot impress upon you too strongly the urgent need of every member lending his most active support to the furtherance of this legislation at the short session of Congress next winter, so that it will not be necessary to wait another Congress to obtain a Federal law governing all bills of lading used in Interstate and foreign commerce. It was the great losses to the banks and commission men which led to the appointment of this Committee. These losses, which run into the millions of dollars, have continued along through recent years.

Committee on Agricultural and Financial Development and Education.

And now we come to the newest departure of the Association—the Committee on Agricultural and Financial Development and Education, appointed at the New Orleans Convention.

Although many bankers realize that their institutions are greatly dependent on the farms for their success, it was not until Mr. Joseph Chapman, Jr., brought the matter forcibly before the Association that they had a true conception of its importance, and deemed it within their province and really their duty to take some action looking toward the improvement of agricultural conditions.

The following resolutions presented by Mr. Chapman at the New Orleans Convention gave the movement sufficient momentum in the Association, so that I believe we can look for satisfactory results in the near future:

> Resolved, That the American Bankers' Association in convention assembled hereby heartily endorses the movement started in several state Associations, looking toward improved agricultural methods, better farm life conditions, agricultural education for the farm boys and girls and Federal agricultural demonstration work;
> Resolved Further, That the President of this Association appoint a committee of seven to be known as the Committee on Agricultural and Financial Development and Education, to assist in the extension of this magnificent work.

The Association evinced still another step in this direction when it appropriated $5,000 for the use of the Committee.

It is interesting to note the progress made in this movement, by a comparison of its two annual meetings. At the first session, held last year, only seven States were represented. At the second annual meeting held at Minneapolis and St. Paul, August 7 and 8, twenty-four States were represented. At last year's meeting the banker and educators who came to address the bankers made up the conference; this year the line of education from university to common school sent its representatives and the character of the gathering rivaled the success of the first conference. Men from the Department of Agriculture at Washington and from the Agricultural and vocational schools of many States were present as listeners. At the second annual conference the best authorities in the United States addressed the delegates, and the meeting was a most enthusiastic one, the proceedings of which were to be published immediately. The bankers are just beginning to become interested and to realize the great importance of this movement, and the fact that agriculture is the basis of all wealth and have been instrumental in a number of States in bringing about an agreeable change in educational institutions.

The Committee of the American Bankers' Association and the committee from State Associations spent a week in Washington in February and March of this year, appearing before the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and before the House Committee on Agriculture, urging Congress to appropriate sufficient money so that all of the States might receive the benefit from practical demonstrators going on to farms, the same as has been enjoyed by the Southern States for the past eight or nine years.

Protective Committee.

The very able Committee handling this work has devoted a large amount of valuable time and attention to it, but as the service is of necessity secret, it is impossible to give the members of the Committee the credit to which they are entitled. I have but to call your attention to the large membership and the comparatively few depredations on members of the Association, and to the expeditious manner in which all cases are cared for to demonstrate this. This department is also constantly increasing its facilities for quick detection of criminals, and its work in connection therewith is systematically dispatched. Each successive year has also demonstrated the fact that the American Bankers' Association in its vigorous prosecution of criminals who prey on its members, is constantly becoming a greater deterrent to criminals.

Administrative Committee.

The members of your Administrative Committee in addition to holding several meetings in an advisory capacity to the General Secretary in the interim between Council meetings have attended a number of State Bankers' Associations conventions in an endeavor to impress upon the members of such associations the value of affiliation with the parent organization.

Law Committee.

Outside of its regular routine work, this Committee has spent a large amount of time and energy on the broad question of segregation of savings from commercial deposits in banks and trust companies and has held hearings in Detroit, Cleveland, Chicago, St. Paul, Des Moines, St. Louis, New Orleans, New York and Louisville on this question. Through the medium of these hearings and through investigations in other States, the Committee covered quite fully conditions in 24 States holding a majority of the entire savings deposits of the country. After making these personal investigations, the committee prepared a statement of conditions in these States, adding a summary of the argument for and against the special investment and segregation of savings deposits, which was sent to every member of the Association, together with a question-sheet designed to ascertain whether the members of the Association were in favor of the further extension of the principle. In all, 3,119 banks responded, of which 1,447 were favorable and 1,489 were adverse, from which it would appear that sentiment among the members of the Association is about evenly divided on this subject. Their report has been printed in pamphlet form and may be had from the General Secretary. As Michigan is the home of segregation, any members desiring information on the actual and practical workings of segregation can get the most complete information from the State banks of Detroit and other Michigan cities.

Currency Commission.

Your Currency Commission along with the officers of the Association were called into conference with the National Monetary Commission in Washington on March 28, 1911, to consider Senator Aldrich's suggestions for monetary legislation. At a meeting of the Commission held before the conference, it was unanimously agreed that the plan suggested by Senator Aldrich was founded on correct principles; that it is admirably adapted to present conditions, and that it will correct existing defects in our National banking system. That with further developments in some of its details it would be made thoroughly practicable. Later our Commission discussed every feature of the plan, giving their reasons for the suggestions made and conclusions arrived at. At a later date our recommendations were generally adopted in the revision of the plan reported by Senator Aldrich's Committee. On May 2, 1911, Mr. James B. Forgan, Vice-Chairman, reported to the Executive Council at their meeting held in Nashville, submitting to them Senator Aldrich's plan as revised by our own Commission. After careful examination, the Executive Council, by resolution, unanimously approved the plan thus revised. Out of forty-six State Bankers' Associations, over thirty have passed resolutions at their annual conventions also endorsing the plan. At the Annual Convention of our Association in New Orleans, November 24, 1911, the Convention adopted the following resolutions presented by the Executive Council, with one dissenting vote:

> Resolved, That the American Bankers' Association hereby gives its unqualified approval to the revised plan proposed by Hon. Nelson W. Aldrich, Chairman of the National Monetary Commission, for the establishment of a co-operative agency of all the banks, to be known as the National Reserve Association of the United States.
> We are confident that the high purposes actuating the National Monetary Commission assure the working out of the details in accordance with the sound principles stated in the plan, in such a manner as to gain the confidence and support of all classes.
> A sound banking system will benefit the entire community and is, therefore, non-partisan. We urge Congress to so regard it and to deal with it as an economic question outside the domain of party politics.
> Resolved, Further, That the officers of the Association, together with the Currency Commission of the American Bankers' Association are hereby instructed to suubmit the Association's approval of the principles of the plan to the National Monetary Commission, and to the committees of Congress to whom monetary legislation is referred.

It seems to be imperative that we should have, if possible, immediate action on this subject, and I most earnestly urge that every effort be put forth by our Association for the passage of a good banking and currency bill, and that the Currency Commission's attention should be directed to the work of urging Congress to action at their next session, and their efforts should be supplemented and aided by the Association members throughout the country, who should be asked to take the matter up with their Congressional representatives in order that prompt and favorable action may be obtained on the plan submitted by the National Monetary Commission. In other words, that the Association should "stand by its guns" in this important matter in the fullest sense of the word and should continue to support the bill as previously recommeended, and should again go on record as favoring its adoption.

Monetary Reform.

I desire particularly to call the attention of the Association to the bill recommended by the National Monetary Commission which was created by Sections 17, 18 and 19, of "An Act to Amend the National Banking Laws," approved May 30, 1908.

Legal Department.

It is hardly necessary for me to dwell on the work of our General Counsel. It speaks for itself. Many of your institutions are availing themselves of the opinions of the General Counsel on various matters pertinent to banking. He acts in an advisory capacity on legal questions submitted by the sections, committees, the Protective Department, and by members all over the country; to the legislative committees of State Bankers' Associations in aid of their efforts to improve the banking laws of their respective States.

The constructive work covers drafts of laws for the Law Committee of the Association, Mr. Paton having worked out a standard form of Bank Burglary Policy which has been copyrighted and is now being used by the different companies, and work is under way on a revision of the Fidelity Bond of the Association. Mr. Paton, in addition to all of the above, appears for the Association and its various adjuncts and Committees in all legal matters.

JOURNAL DEPARTMENT.

The Journal Department, through its publication, the Journal-Bulletin, disseminates Association news to all of its members, adhering strictly to the purpose for which it was originally installed. It is also a medium for the exchange of ideas between the employed and the employers as represented by the Institute and the Association, and it is also of great assistance to the Protective Department in sending out warnings to the banks.

LIBRARY.

During the past year the Association has added another department which was sorely needed, a library and reference department under the management of an able librarian. Though it has been in existence but ten months, the service which it has been to the membership has justified its installation. Its material comprises books, documents, statistics, proceedings, addresses, magazine articles, clippings, pamphlets, advertisements and pictures. Its methods involve the securing of this material in various ways from widely-scattered sources, classifying, mounting, preserving and circulating it in accessible form. Its results show the loaning of said material to our members all over the country. That they fully appreciate the advantage afforded by this department is evidenced by the growing demand for information which is supplied by telephone, by messenger, at the library and by correspondence. Its book collection has been increased four-fold, chiefly by gift and exchange.

NEW OFFICES.

To provide for these sections and new departments, space was taken on from time to time until the offices had grown to large proportions, but were still inadequate and inconvenient. Your Administrative Committee, after a careful investigation of the situation, decided that new quarters would have to be secured, and the General Secretary was authorized to negotiate for space which would be ample for some time to come. The new offices, on the twelfth floor of the Hanover National Bank Building, were formally opened Wednesday, July 10, at which time your President, and Chairman of the Executive Council, Mr. Arthur Reynolds, were present. There was quite a large attendance, and among others, notably the South Carolina Bankers' Association, who were guests of New York bankers at that time. Those of you who have visited the rooms, I am sure will agree with me that they are in keeping with the dignity of our great body.

GENERAL SECRETARY.

Your General Secretary has been most earnest in his work, always with the interests of the Association at heart, and has made a special endeavor to increase the membership of the Association. That his efforts in this direction have been crowned with success is borne out by the fact that the increase during the past year is the greatest in the history of the Association. His entire staff are both courteous and willing workers.

At the last Annual Convention of this Association, my predecessor, President Watts, suggested and advised that the Council dinner, which had previously really been a part of the Convention, be abolished, as only a few participated in this special entertainment. It affords me pleasure to report that the Executive Council at its meeting held at Briarcliff in May last acted on Mr. Watts' suggestion and abolished the Executive Council dinner.

While the Association has grown and added several Sections, each carefully following its various lines, and Committees, the headquarters itself has neither stood still nor retrograded. As Mr. George M. Reynolds put it some time ago, "It is a veritable beehive of industry."

The results of the activities of the Association during the past year speak for themselves. I believe we have nothing but hearty praise for all work accomplished, and I do not believe there is any need for the admonition "Let the good work go on."

As to the future, I would say to one and all of you to lend your aid to the various committees, whenever you can do so conscientiously, also to the Sections.

During my three years' official connection with the Association, I have received nothing but the most hearty support and encouragement from my fellow-associates. It has been one harmonious period of activity in the interests of this great body, and I wish to express my deep appreciation of the courteous, kindly treatment I have always received at your hands.

The President: I want to say a word about the "Protective Committee." I want to call your attention to this, that the Protective Committee, as you are aware, is necessarily a secret committee, and our association has been exceedingly fortunate, looking back through the past vista of years, in securing men, hard-headed, solid, conscientious men for that committee who have done an enormous amount of hard work which the rank and file of the American Bankers' Association hardly realize. As I have said, the work is necessarily secret, but I know from my experience that the past three years no committee has done harder and more conscientious, painstaking work than they have, and we have no means, publicly, at least, of in any way acknowledging it.

The Law Committee (continues reading).

I will say briefly that the members of your Administrative Committee have had a number of meetings. Your president, secretary and other members have visited a number of the State Institutions in the various States; it has been very gratifying, indeed, at least it was to me, to see the strong, earnest, active work done in all of these State conventions. It would seem as if they all seem to work in harmony together, and that their main effort in all directions was to see in which way they could most promote the welfare of the American bankers.

(Continues reading.)

The Monetary Commission: It seems to be imperative that we should have, if possible, immediate action on this subject, and I most earnestly urge that every effort be put forth by our association for the passage of a good banking and currency bill, and that the Currency Commission's attention should be directed to the work of urging Congress to action at their next session, and their efforts should be supplemented and aided by the Association members throughout the country, who should be asked to take the matter up with their representatives in order that prompt action may be taken on the plans of the Commission.

One new feature I will just mention and call your attention to it—the library established during the past year.

(Reading.)

We found that frequently we received letters from the Library Department, asking if we can loan them certain documents and certain books which are wanted for special occasions, and I am sure that in the future we will find this a very valuable adjunct to aid members of the association.

As probably most of you are aware, we moved into our new offices during the past year and your administrative committee has carefully investigated the situation, and we finally decided upon the twelfth floor of the Hanover National Bank Building.

And may I be pardoned, if I say just one word more, and that is this: I suppose there are moments that come to every man during his lifetime that appeal to him more than others, and I say to you, gentlemen of the American Bankers' Association, and I can say to you conscientiously, that I believe to-day that, without one bit of fly in the ointment in any form, shape or manner, that greeting you gave me here to-day in my home city as your president—the city in which I have lived since six years old and in whose growth and prosperity I take great pride—that the pleasure in greeting you here to-day, and being able to say that I am glad to meet you and that heaven's choicest blessings may follow you through life hereafter, I can truly and conscientiously say that it is the proudest and happiest moment of my life. (Applause.)

I will say to the members that the reports that are coming now will be very brief and will take up but a comparatively few minutes, and that Mr. Bonynge will talk at 12 o'clock, and I am sure all will be glad to hear his eloquence and the matter which is so germane in every sense of the word to our association, and I trust that you will remain. We will only detain you a few minutes. The next business in order is the annual report of the general secretary, Col. Frederick E. Farnsworth.

Secretary Farnsworth: I want to emphasize what the president has just said. There is a long list of reports here, but it has been customary in the past few years to put them in the pamphlet which is in your possession now. The Honorable Mr. Bonynge, ex-Congressman from Colorado, will follow at 12 o'clock on a subject in which you are all interested. Those of you who have heard Congressman Bonynge will bear me out on this subject, no doubt, as on many others, that he is one of the best speakers in this country, and I am sure you will be interested to remain and hear him. I want to take only a few minutes longer this morning than I ordinarily will take, in commenting on my report. This is my home city and my home State. With all Detroit people and Michigan people I am proud of our city and State. I am proud of its record, and I am proud of its record in the American Bankers' Association, which I have fully covered in my report, but a very brief portion of it I will read.

Annual Report of Secretary.

[The report of Secretary Farnsworth will be found on page 132.]

The President: The next business in order is the report of the treasurer, J. Fletcher Farrell, of Chicago.

Treasurer Farrell: Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen and Members of the American Bankers' Association: You will find on page 33 of the little pamphlet which has been distributed among the members the printed reports of the treasurer. I assume that all those present have had an opportunity of perusing that report, and I shall therefore not occupy the time of the Convention by reading the detailed statement. I should like to state very briefly that, since the report was prepared, September 1, all of the drafts for membership, representing some thirteen thousand-odd dollars, have been forwarded for collection, and up to this time practically 80 per cent. has been paid, and we hope within the next few days to have received remittances from all. If there are any in the Convention who have not had an opportunity of seeing this report, I shall be very glad to furnish them with one, and would like you to look it over very carefully.

Annual Report of Treasurer.

[The report of the Treasurer will be found on page 135.]

The President: Next business in order is the report of our General Counsel, Mr. Thomas B. Paton.

Mr. Eaton. The report, similar to the others, is printed in this pamphlet, and I will not read it unless there is an urgent request on the floor that I do so. I do not hear any such request, and therefore I ask that it be considered read and ask leave to print.

Report of the General Counsel.

[We print the General Counsel's report on page 135.]

The President: If there is no objection, and the Chair hears none, next will be the report of the Executive Counsel, Mr. Arthur Reynolds.

Report of the Executive Council.

[The report of the Executive Council is printed in full on page 138.]

Report of the Executive Council was, on motion, received and approved.

The Chairman: The next thing in order is the annual report of the Protective Committee. As this is printed in full and has been distributed, we will not have it read now.

Report of the Standing Protective Committee.

[The report of the Protective Committee appears on page 140.]

The address scheduled by Mr. Bonynge, a member of the National Monetary Commission is next in order, and it affords me great pleasure to introduce Honorable Robert W. Bonynge, of Denver, Colo.

"Banking and Currency Reform," by Robert W. Bonynge.

[The address of Mr. Bonynge in full will be found on page 113.]

The President: The Secretary has some announcements to make before we adjourn for luncheon.

Secretary Farnsworth: I am requested to give notice that there will be a meeting of the Kentucky members at room 1014 of the Hotel Pontchartrain, Wednesday morning, at 9 o'clock, to select a member of the Nominating Committee and the Vice-President for the State.

Owing to the desire on the part of those who were quartered on the steamboat Detroit III. during the extreme heat of the past two days, the people who were on that boat are now being provided for with rooms at the various hotels by the Hotel Committee, of which Mr. Staley is chairman.

The city of Detroit III. will remain at the foot of Third Street until noon to-day. From noon until 4 o'clock the steamer will lie at the foot of Shelby Street.

All guests are requested to remove their baggage before 4 o'clock. If baggage has not been called for by that hour the same will be removed to the office of the general manager of the Detroit & Cleveland Navigation Company. Ample accommodations will be arranged for on shore.

The President: The Convention will now take a recess until 2 o'clock.

AFTERNOON SESSION

The President: The first business in order is the Reports of Sections. Under that head the first section to be heard from is the Trust Company Section.

Mr. F. M. Goff: Mr. President and Gentlemen, owing to the lateness of the hour in convening, and the fact that the reports of the Section are printed, I beg leave to submit my report without reading.

The President: If there is no objection that may be done. The Chair, hearing no objection, it is so ordered. The report of the Savings Bank Section is the next thing in order.

Mr. J. F. Sartori, of Los Angeles, Cal.: Mr. President and Gentlemen, following the example set by Mr. Goff, I ask unanimous consent to file my report, as it is in print.

I would simply state that we have done progressive work during the past year, having increased our membership one hundred and seventy-two, and now have a total membership of 2,050. (Applause.)

The President: This will follow the same course and will be considered as read and printed in our proceedings.

The report of the Clearing House Section is next in order.

Report of Clearing House Section.

Mr. John K. Ottley: Mr. President and Members of the Association, the detailed report of what has been done by the Clearing House Section will appear in full in the published proceedings, but I take this opportunity to urge upon you a study of the report. It is not lengthy, and I believe you will find it interesting.

It will give you an idea of the definiteness with which the Section is endeavoring to bring the banks of the country into closer and more mutually advantageous relations.

To this end our attention has, during the past year, been centered on the development of the Numerical System, the appointment of Clearing House Examiners, a system of uniform reports of clearings and plans for securing uniformity in exchange charges on country checks.

The Section is also trying to interest the fraternity generally in the organization of clearing houses, believing that the benefits of such organization are very great, even in towns where there are not more than three or four banks.

Whatever strengthens local banking interests adds necessarily to the influence and usefulness of this Association. And the converse of the proposition is also true. With this in mind, your Clearing House Section believes that it can render the Association no more valuable service than to develop a spirit of active co-operation and to awaken a desire among the banks of all our towns and cities for the adoption of such forms of organization and such methods as have been successfully worked out and will secure the most harmonious and profitable results.

The President: The American Institute of Banking is next in order.

Mr. F. A. Crandall: My report was submitted to the Executive Council yesterday afternoon and is in the hands of the Secretary. I suggest that it be considered read.

The President: Unless there is objection, that will be the course pursued. Hearing no objection, it is so ordered.

Report of American Institute of Banking.

[The report of the American Institute of Banking will be found on page 142.]

The Organization of State Secretaries is next in order to report. As I do not see Mr. Hoopes present, that will be passed for the present.

We had expected United States Senator Townsend to be here at this hour, but as he has not yet arrived, and no word has been received from him, we will proceed with the rest of the programme until he comes.

AMENDMENTS TO CONSTITUTION.

This brings us up to the amendments to the constitution reported by the Executive Council.

Chairman Reynolds: Mr. President and Gentlemen of the Convention, I refer you to page 26 of the official programme to find the amendments that are reported out from the Council for your action. These amendments were approved, with the exception of the proposed amendment to Article IX, Section 1, for the creation of an Investment Bankers' Section, together with the other amendment pertaining to such a section.

As the constitution provides that all amendments presented to the General Secretary shall be submitted by him to the members, and also to the Council, and referred by the Council to the Convention, the Investment Bankers' proposed amendments are submitted herewith:

Amend Article II, Section 1, of the constitution by inserting after the word "Association," in the third line, the following:

"Upon approval and recommendation of the Membership Committee."

So that the section shall read as follows.

It is not necessary for me to read the next paragraph, as that is printed right there in the programme at the bottom of page 26.

The President: Gentlemen, what is your pleasure?

Mr. G. H. Hyde, of Jamestown, N. Y.: I move that the recommendation of the Executive Council be approved.

Mr. F. E. Roberts, of Newton, Iowa: I second the motion.

The President: All in favor of the motion will say aye; opposed, no. The ayes seem to have it, the motion is carried.

Chairman Reynolds: Amend Article IV, Section 1, of the constitution, by inserting after the words "to wit," in the third line, the following:

"A Membership Committee, consisting of five members of the Association, who shall be members of the Executive Council, and whose names shall not be made public."

Mr. Beckwith: I move the adoption of that amendment.

Mr. Robinson: I second the motion.

The President: All in favor of the motion will say aye; opposed, no. The motion was carried.

Chairman Reynolds: Add a new section of the constitution to Article IV, to read as follows:

"Sec. 7. The Membership Committee shall act upon any applications for admission to membership in the Association, and upon any charges or complaints against any member. Their action shall be reported to the Association through the Administrative Committee, and they shall make rules for facilitating admissions of new members and other matters brought before them, subject to the approval of the Administrative Committee.

Mr. F. O. Watts, of Nashville, Tenn.: I move the adoption of that.

Mr. Reading: I second the motion.

The President: All in favor of the motion will say aye; opposed, no. The motion is carried.

Chairman Reynolds: Amend Article III by adding a new section, to be known as Section 14, to read as follows:

"Sec. 14. The General Counsel shall be under the direction of and shall report to the Executive Council, and shall make a report at the Annual Convention of the Association. He shall have custody of and be responsible for the documents, records and property of the Association pertaining to his office. He shall have authority to employ such clerical and other assistants and incur such expenses as may be necessary, within the limits of the appropriation made by the Executive Council for the conduct of his office. His duties shall include

In addition to the performance of specific services which may from time to time be devolved upon him by the Executive Council the rendering of legal advice and assistance to the various sections, committees and officers of the Association and the giving of legal advice to the members of the Association as may be practicable. In case of doubt whether specific services called for by members come within the scope of his duties, he shall obtain the decision thereon of the Executive Council or of the Administrative Committee."

Mr. Robinson: I move that we adopt that amendment.

Mr. Pierson: I second the motion.

The President: All in favor of the motion will say aye; opposed, no. The motion is carried and the amendment is adopted.

Chairman Reynolds: Amend Section 2, Article III, of the constitution by prefixing thereto the following:

"During the period of one Association year after his term shall have expired, the chairman of the Executive Council shall not be eligible for election by the Association to any other office; provided, however, that this shall not be effective until the year 1913."

Mr. C. H. McNider, of Macon City, Iowa: I move the adoption of that amendment.

Mr. H. A. Rhoades, of Boston, Mass.: I second the motion.

The President: All in favor of the motion will say aye; opposed, no. It is carried, and the amendment is adopted.

Chairman Reynolds: Insert at the end of Article III, Section 2, paragraph (a) the following:

"Provided, further, that any group of two or more adjoining States or territories having in all one hundred or more members of the Association, but no single one of such States or territories having one hundred members, may apply to the Executive Council for representation, and the Executive Council may, in its discretion, admit one delegate from such group."

Mr. Chapman: I move that that be adopted.

Mr. Hyde: I second the motion.

The President: All in favor of the motion will say aye; opposed, no. It is carried.

Chairman Reynolds: In paragraph B of Section 2 of Article III, insert after the word "borders," in the third line, the words:

"Not provided for under paragraph (a)."

Mr. Robinson: If I am not mistaken that refers to the preceding amendment that we have just made.

Chairman Reynolds: That is so. Evidently there has been a mistake made in the printing of it, because it has been put in here under the proposed amendment that the Council disapproved of.

Mr. Reading, of Pennsylvania: In order to correct that error, I mhove that the Association adopt the amendment to insert in Article III, as stated, the words "Not provided for under paragraph (a)." That is absolutely needed in order to make the previous amendment effective.

Mr. Robinson: I second that motion.

The President: All in favor of the motion will say aye; opposed, no. The motion is carried and the amendment adopted.

Chairman Reynolds: Now we come to the question of the Investment Section, which was adversely reported upon by the conference:

Amend Article IX., Section 1, by adding a new paragraph (c), to read as follows:

An Investment Bankers' Section, whose scope shall embrace all matters relating to Investment Securities.

Change present paragraphs (c), (d) and (e) to (d), (e) and (f), respectively.

Omit from the seventh line of old paragraph (e), Section 1, Article IX., the words "Trust Company and Savings Bank."

Mr. Goldwater, of New Mexico: I move that that amendment be laid on the table.

Mr. Dinkins, of Louisiana: I second the motion.

The President: All in favor of the motion will say aye; opposed, no. The motion prevailed and the amendment was laid on the table.

Chairman Reynolds: The next is to amend Article II, Section 2.

Mr. Reading (interposing): I move that the balance of the amendments printed on page 28 of the official programme be laid on the table.

The motion was variously seconded.

The President: Are you ready for the question? If so, all in favor of the motion will say aye; opposed, no. The motion prevailed.

Chairman Reynolds: The next amendment is one proposed by Mr. Andrew J. Frame, president of the Waukesha National Bank, of Waukesha, Wis. It is printed on page 29.

I beg to say that, in the discussion over this amendment in the Executive Council, the resolution was somewhat amended and the committee recommended certain changes to be made in the constitution. A resolution was then adopted to the effect that the Executive Council recommend that the Convention authorize the appointment of a committee to revise the constitution, and on behalf of the Executive Council I make that recommendation.

Mr. Frame: In view of the decision of the Executive Council to recommend the appointment of a committee to revise the constitution, and with the proviso that such a committee is appointed, I move that further consideration of the matter that I presented be deferred.

The President: If there is no objection that may be done.

Mr. Creer: If I have listened correctly, the insert creating a Membership Committee was adopted, but the new section, numbered 7, defining the duties of that Membership Committee, has not been read or adopted.

The President: The chairman of the Executive Council will explain about that.

Chairman Reynolds: I beg to say that these revisions made by the various committees were reported upon by the Council and the import of what the resolution was supposed to contain with all the amendments was read and explained in the Council meeting, but not having anything to do with that committee or its work, I do not know what particular lines are referred to in connection with an individual resolution to carry out the wishes of that committee, and hence some confusion has arisen.

Section 7 appears on page 27 of the official programme, and it has already been acted upon.

Mr. W. R. Creer, of Ohio: We did not vote upon this section.

The President: I am informed by the official reporter that we did, and that was my recollection.

Mr. Reading: Well, to save any question about it, I move that we adopt it now.

Mr. Creer: I second the motion.

The President: All in favor of the motion will say aye; opposed, no. The motion is carried. Is there anything else from the Executive Council?

Chairman Reynolds: Yes, sir, a resolution offered by Mr. James in the Executive Council yesterday:

Resolved, That there be presented to the Convention a resolution, endorsed and having the approval of this Council, providing for the appointment by the President of the Association of a committee for the general revision of the constitution, such committee to report at the spring meeting of the Council, and then to the Convention following.

Mr. R. E. James, of Pennsylvania: I move the adoption of the resolution.

The motion was seconded.

The President: Are you ready for the question?

Mr. Frame: I will support the resolution, with the amendment, that the following gentlemen be appointed on that committee. They are men who are entirely free from any influence, and I have no doubt that they will not be bulldozed, and because of their ability I believe we will have the constitution revised in an intelligent manner. The gentlemen whom I wish to suggest are:

R. E. James, as chairman, of Pennsylvania; W. J. Bailey, of Kansas; O. E. Dunlap, of Texas; C. H. McNider, of Iowa; and Gordon Jones, of Colorado.

That is one man from the East, one from the West, and three from the middle section of the country. If this suggestion meets the approval of the Association, I withdraw the amendment that I had offered.

Mr. J. T. Dismukes, of Florida: The gentleman has left off the South from that committee, and I would suggest that he add the name of Mr. Sol Wexler, of New Orleans.

The President: Mr. Frame, will you accept that?

Mr. Frame: Yes, sir; with pleasure. I think Mr. Wexler will be eminently satisfactory.

The President: You have heard the amendment proposed by Mr. Frame. Is it supported?

Mr. Reading: I second the amendment.

The President: All in favor of the amendment will say aye; opposed, no. The amendment offered by Mr. Frame is carried, and the question is now on the adoption of Mr. James' resolution as thus amended. All in favor of the adoption of the resolution as amended will say aye; opposed, no. The motion prevails and the resolution is adopted.

Report of Currency Commission.

[The report of the Currency Commission will be found on page 142.]

Next in order is the report of the Currency Commission.

Mr. F. J. Wade, of St. Louis, Mo.: I ask that this report be deferred for the present.

Mr. W. J. Bailey, of Kansas: I rise for information. At the Briarcliff meeting the Finance Committee offered a resolution, which was adopted that so far as practicable members of committees should be appointed from the membership of the Executive Council. Now in all my listening I have not heard anything about that.

The President: That was embraced in the report of the Executive Council.

Mr. Bailey: Then that becomes the law of the Association, does it?

The President: Yes, sir. I will call upon the Law Committee now for its report.

Mr. James Dinkins, of Louisiana: Mr. President and Gentlemen, the Law Committee, through its chairman, have asked me to present the following report:

Report of Law Committee.

[The report of the Law Committee is printed on page 144.]

Mr. James: I move that the report be received and placed on file.

Seconded.

The President: The motion prevails. Next in order is the report of the Bills of Lading Committee.

Report of Bills of Lading Committee.

[The report of the Bills of Lading Committee will be found on page 141.]

The President: Without objection, the report will be received and placed on file. There being no objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. Joseph Chapman, of Minnesota: I rise for information. Is there or not two classes of committees in this association—that is, committees of the Convention and committees appointed by the Executive Council?

The President: Yes, sir; there is.

Mr. Chapman: Then, referring to the remarks made by Governor Bailey in respect to the action taken by the Executive Council, what is the standing of this Bill of Lading Committee, it being a committee of the Convention? Is it discharged, or is the appointment for the continuation of the committee from now on in the hands of the Executive Council?

The President: If my recollection is correct the Bill of Lading Committee, which has been continued and of which Mr. Hollister is chairman and of which the first chairman was Mr. Lewis E. Pierson, was appointed by the then president of the Association, Mr. John L. Hamilton.

Mr. Chapman: It was a committee of the Convention then?

The President: Yes.

Mr. Chapman: Then as no motion was made to continue that committee, is the committee in existence from now on?

The President: I will ask Secretary Farnsworth to explain that.

Secretary Farnsworth: Under amendments to the constitution which were made, I think a year ago, there were certain standing committees created and certain other committees created. In the event of the continuance of these committees the appointment is vested in the Administrative Committee, unless the Convention sees fit to take the matter into its own hands and appoint the committees.

The President: I think Mr. Pierson is in the Convention; he was up here on the platform a while ago, and I would suggest, Mr. Chapman, if you call upon Mr. Pierson he will be able to give you information about the matter.

Mr. James: I do not think there is any difficulty about understanding the constitution of the committees under our organization. This Convention has power to make any committee that it sees fit. All committees appointed during the period of a convention which are to report during the Convention are appointed by the presiding officer. If, however, a committee is constituted whose duties run beyond the term of the Convention, that committee is appointed by the Administrative Committee, but it is a Convention Committee. Both classes of committees die with the Convention. The Committee appointed by the presiding officer of a Convention dies with that Convention. A committee appointed by the Administrative Committee dies with the next Convention. All so-called standing committees die with the end of the year, but they may be reappointed, either in whole or in part, by the Administrative Committee. The Executive Council appoints its own committees, and they have nothing to do with the Convention committees and the latter committees have nothing to do with the Executive Council, except in so far as they are directed by resolution or otherwise to report to the Executive Council. So there is really no conflict. The committees appointed by this body are the committees of this body, and the committees appointed by the Executive Council are their committee. Neither conflict with the other. But recently for the purposes of economy it was suggested that, in the appointment of committees it would be well to appoint members of the Executive Council for the reason that they must assemble between the annual conventions, and it would be a very material saving of expense to the Association; but there is no conflict between the committees of this body and the committees of the Executive Council; they all expire annually and must be reappointed, or the entire membership of any committee be appointed and a new body appointed each year.

Mr. Bailey: In order that there may be no controversy, as I was the author of the resolution that, in the interest of economy, the committees should be made up as far as practicable from the membership of the Executive Council, here is one case where there should be an exception. Mr. Hollister and Mr. Wexler and the other men who have been on that committee should be retained on the committee as long as there is any work for the committee to do; and I move you, sir, that the personnel of this committee be continued.

Mr. Chapman: I second the motion.

The President: All in favor of the motion will say aye; opposed, no. The motion is carried.

Next in order is the report of the Committee on Express Companies and Money Orders.

Report of the Committee on Express Companies and Money Orders.

[The report was read by Mr. Thornton Cooke, chairman of the committee.]

The President: The report will be received and placed on file.

Mr. F. J. Wade, of Missouri: Mr. President, with your permission I am ready now to present the report of the Currency Commission.

Report of the Currency Commission.

[The report of the Currency Commission was then read by Mr. Festus J. Wade, of St. Louis, Mo. It will be found on page 142.]

ASSOCIATION TO CO-OPERATE WITH OTHER BODIES IN BANKING REFORM.

Mr. Wade: In submitting this report I offer the following resolution:

In order that the position of the American Bankers' Association as to a reformation of our financial and banking system may be fairly understood and correctly placed before the public.

Be It Resolved, That this Association will co-operate with any and all people in devising a financial system for this country which shall place us on a par with the other great commercial and competing nations—a system which shall give to the American people of all classes and conditions the financial facilities and industrial advantages to which they are entitled.

I move the adoption of this resolution.

Mr. George M. Reynolds, of Chicago: I second it.

The President: Gentlemen, you have heard the resolution presented by the Currency Commission. Are you ready for the question? All in favor of the resolution will say aye; opposed, no. It is carried and the resolution is adopted.

Is there any report from the Insurance Committee, of which Mr. Robert E. James is chairman?

Mr. James: I desire to report that the committee is gathering data and at this time simply reports progress, in anticipation of being able to report more fully later on.

The President: You have heard the verbal report of the chairman of the Insurance Committee and it will be received.

Next in order is the report of the Committee on Forms for National and State Banks. I believe there is no report to be made.

Mr. John F. Seeley, of Caro, Mich.: Mr. President and Gentlemen, as a high private in the ranks of this Association for over twenty-five years I have had pleasure in studying the physiognomies of these great captains of finance. We are living in a very practical age and of time saving devices. Note the typewriter, the adding machine, the fast printing presses, the automobiles, and what not. But in the matter of our paper money we are still plodding along in the old-time consuming way, not up-to-date. When I was a younger man and the cashier of a large commission house in New York City I used to stand in line to make our deposits in the Irving National Bank. Occasionally the receiving teller would say to me, "Fix up your currency," handing me back the pass book and deposit. What would he say to-day if that same teller could be in all the 26,000 smaller banks of our country, where much of the money is brought in all mixed up, part face up and part back up?

With an estimate of a million men in the United States handling currency every day, would it not expedite business and save time, energy and patience if the new currency or bank notes proposed to be issued by the Government and the National banks could be printed with large denominational numbers on the four corners and on the face only? And then let the printing on the back be in fine script.

When the formation of a new currency for the American people is under serious consideration as an economic proposition and convenience as to size, why not advise the elimination of the every-day objections to the old currency now in use? Is not the present the opportune and psychological time in which we would use our influence for the improvement of the money for a lifetime?

The conservation of our national resources is much discussed. Why not pay some attention to the conservation of our time?

If this meets your approval I trust that this National Association of Bankers will instruct the General Secretary to so communicate its desire by recommending to the Secretary of the Treasury at Washington that the large denomination numbers be printed on the face only.

After thirty-four years' experience in the banking business I feel that this matter is of very great importance to the future comfort, not only of bankers, but of the tens of thousands of cashiers in stores, post offices, corporations and ticket sellers throughout the land—all of whom will hail with delight the public announcement through the press of your action at this time if in the affirmative.

The President: Does the gentleman make any motion in connection with his remarks?

Mr. Seeley: Yes, I will make a motion. I move that the General Secretary of the American Bankers' Association be authorized to communicate to the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, expressing the desire of this Association in the matter of having the denominational numbers printed upon the face of new currency only.

The President: The Chair would suggest that the subject matter referred to by the gentleman and the resolution ought to go to the Executive Council.

Mr. Seeley: Very well, sir. Then I move that it be so referred.

The motion was seconded.

The President: All in favor of the motion will say aye; opposed, no.

This completes our programme for the day, and the Convention will stand adjourned until 10 o'clock Friday morning, as to-morrow and Thursday are to be given up to the several meetings of the various Sections.

Adjourned to Friday, September 13, 1912, at 10 a.m

SECOND DAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

MORNING SESSION.

Friday, September 13, 1912.

The President: The Convention will rise while the divine blessing is invoked by the Rev. Joseph A. Vance, D. D., pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, of this city.

INVOCATION.

Almighty God, our Heavenly Father! We have gathered here again this morning to deliberate upon the things which are dear to our hearts and which are engaging the activities of our lives. We look up to Thee as the God over all, blessed forevermore. Thou hast revealed Thyself to us, and called us to discover the laws for our lives and intelligently to relate ourselves to Thee and the world in which Thou hast placed us. With the dawning of each day our faces are lifted to Thee for light, and as we seek a path by which to walk we seek Thy guidance and grace that we may walk in it uprightly and well.

We ask Thee for Thy guidance in the deliberations of this day that with clear vision and undaunted loyalty to the truth and the good of men we may see the things that are excellent and prove them, that we may discover the paths by which we may walk to a larger life and a richer service, and give ourselves to them with renewed diligence and intelligence.

We pray Thee to teach us day by day Thy holy will, and help us reverently to see the truth and the path of life as men who must give accounting for a trust and as men who pass this way but once.

May the years that come on us not only change our hair to gray and write the traces of them on our faces, but may they mellow our hearts, fill us with a greater love for men and a greater hunger to do good and grow good, and as we travel into the future may it be with a cheerier heart and a gladder joy in our life for the mere privilege of living and learning to love man and honor our Lord.

We pray Thee to bless the homes from which we come and the things that we have left behind us in places that are dear to us. Safeguard them from all peril. Guide the children we have left from evil, and grant grace, Lord, to the wives to execute the double responsibility that rests upon them in our absence, so that all those dear to us may be cared for aright, and preserved in God's good way.

We pray Thee to let Thy blessing rest upon each man and the men who are associated with us as we gather here from day to day, and may we not only learn better ways in which to handle the peculiar departments of business that engage us, but may we learn to be better men. Deliver us, O Lord, from sinking our manhood in our professions, and deliver us from looking on this world and the men and women who people it as simply a source from which we may draw the means to gratify our own selfish ambitions and personal inclinations. May we get more and more of Christ's point of view as we live with men; may we learn to love them as He did, and as we plan and then try to carry out our plans in using the great interests that are entrusted to us, may this be our greatest desire: To live lives that will be as radiant and beautiful when they have been finished as our Lord's is to us to-day.

And we ask these mercies in Jesus' name, Amen.

The President: The gentleman whom it is my pleasure to present to the Convention now hardly needs an introduction at my hands. He has written so much on questions involved with the banking business that I presume there are few, if any, in this audience who have not read more or less of what he has published on these various topics.

He was appointed by the War Department as a Special Commissioner on the Currency System of the Philippines in 1901, and was the author of the present gold standard system there, and consulted by the Mexican Government in 1903 in regard to their monetary reform; was a member of the Commission on International Exchange in 1903, and was a delegate of the United States to the International Conference on Bills of Exchange in 1910 and 1912; and he aided in reforming the currency system of Nicaragua. And he speaks to us to-day on "Land and Agricultural Credits."

It gives me great pleasure to introduce Mr. Charles C. Conant.

Land and Agricultural Credits.

[The address of Charles A. Conant, of New York, on "Land and Agricultural Credit," is printed in full on page 120.]

The President: We have this morning received a telegram from Mr. Andrew M. Soule, President of the Georgia Agricultural College, in which he says: "Circumstances compel my immediate return to Georgia, and regret very much my inability to be with you on Friday." President Soule was scheduled to make an address here at this time, as I understand it, was on his way here, and when reaching Buffalo he received an urgent message which compelled him to turn about and return home.

Address by Andrew M. Soule.

[Though Mr. Soule was not present to make his address, we print it on page 117.]

The President: In place of Mr. Soule it affords me great pleasure to present to you Mr. Bradford Knapp, of Washington, D. C., the Special Agent in charge of the Farmers' Cooperative Administration Work in the Department of Agriculture. I might add that Mr. Knapp is the son of Dr. Knapp, who introduced the field demonstration in the cotton States. I present Mr. Knapp.

What the Government is Doing for Agriculture.

William G. Edens, of Chicago, Ill.: I would like to ask Dr. Knapp what is the total sum now available for the Department in the carrying on of this work in the Cotton States, the annual appropriation?

Mr. Knapp: $350,000.

Mr. Edens: Did the present Congress recommend an additional sum by which this work could be extended to the other States in the Union?

Mr. Knapp: Yes.

Mr. Edens: And what is the amount of that sum?

Mr. Knapp: That does not come in my office, but as I recollect it I think the sum was $100,000.

Mr. Edens: So we have $450,000 now available for the promotion of this work throughout the Union?

Mr. Knapp: Yes, sir.

Mr. Edens: Mr. President, I desire to make a motion that we extend a vote of thanks to Mr. Knapp for his very excellent and instructive address, and that the Secretary of Agriculture be included in the thanks, for permitting the Doctor to come here, and that this Association renews its recommendation to the present Congress to add substantially to the present appropriation for the prosecution of this work throughout the entire United States.

Mr. W. N. Homer, of Boston, Mass.: I second that motion.

Mr. Benjamin W. Hunt, of Eatonton, Ga.: I would like to have the gentleman amend that motion by providing that the Secretary of this Association write promptly upon adjournment to Secretary of Agriculture Wilson—he is a very old man, and not wait until our proceedings are printed and published—that we fully appreciate the work that the Department has done, and call his attention to our action on this subject at this Convention.

Mr. Edens: I will accept the suggestion. That might be put in the form of a letter or telegram.

The President: The Chair will put this motion as Mr. Edens made it with the acceptance of the amendment suggested by the gentleman from Georgia. I will put it as a general motion, and I would suggest that the gentleman from Illinois, Mr. Edens, will submit his motion, together with the amendment, in writing just as he desires it spread upon our record.

All in favor of the motion, gentlemen, will manifest the same by saying "aye"; those opposed, if there are any, "no." The ayes have it, and the motion prevails.

The next business in order is the report of the Committee on Agricultural and Financial Development and Education. This report will be presented by Mr. Joseph Chapman, Jr., of Minnesota

Mr. Joseph Chapman, Jr., of Minneapolis, Minn.: Mr. President, Members of the American Bankers' Association, Ladies and Gentlemen: I dislike to take up the time by reading a report, but there are only a few pages of it, and, as this is a very important subject, I will read the report.

Report of Committee on Agricultural and Financial Development and Education.

[The report of this Committee is printed in full on page 143.]

Mr. Hunt: I move that the report be received and approved, and that the thanks of the Association be tendered to Mr. Chapman and his colleagues on the Committee for the work they have accomplished.

Mr. Bradford Rhodes, of Mamaroneck, N. Y.: I second that motion.

The President: You have heard the motion, gentlemen. All in favor of the motion will say "aye"; opposed, "no." The motion prevails.

As the Chairman of this Committee has been an indefatigable and enthusiastic worker on this subject, and, as he is much more familiar with it than I am and can pick out readily those who are interested and perhaps may take part in the discussion, I was going to ask him now to take the Chair so that he can call upon such gentlemen as wish to discuss the matter.

Mr. Joseph Chapman, Jr., of Minnesota, then took the Chair.

Chairman Chapman: Gentlemen, I accept this honor as appreciative of the fact that you are in sympathy with the work of myself and colleagues on this Committee. It is indeed an honor to preside even for a little while, over a great Association at a meeting of this character. I will not take up much of your time because I want to call on a number of gentlemen for short talks so that you may realize that this is not a one man movement. But I want you to bear this in mind. There is a reason why the bankers are interested in this subject—a reason more than is stated in our report and more than you have gathered from the remarks of Dr. Knapp. In a nutshell, the reason is this. In this country we have nineteen and a half million school children. One-fifth of the population of the United States is going to school. It is costing us something like five hundred million dollars a year to educate those children. The interesting thing to you as business men is that of that nineteen and a half millions of school children only 1.71 per cent. ever reach the highest colleges; 5.72 per cent. reach our high schools. The balance of nearly 93 per cent. of the nineteen and a half millions drop out of school before they reach high school, and over 50 per cent. of that number never reach the seventh grade. In Minnesota, in 1903, we found that we were educating 435,000 school children, and of that number .4 of 1 per cent. were being educated to be producers, and 99.6 per cent. were being educated at the expense of the consumers. That is why bankers are interested in this question. That is why it is the most important question to-day before the American people. As we avail ourselves of these facts and as we discuss the situation various plans are devised to remedy the situation. I have in my hand a book of 368 printed pages, containing the reports and speeches and discussions that took place at the Conference in Minneapolis last October. It is the very best educational book ever published in this country, because the addresses given here are by uractical men who have devoted the greater part of their lives to thinking of the 93 per cent. of nineteen and a half millions of children who never go into the high schools or colleges. This book will be a text book, and it should be in the hands of not only every banker, but in the hands of every business man in this country. I am very glad to report that your Finance Committee have appropriated $2,500 to help mail this book to the bankers of the country.

Now, gentlemen, I am going to call on Mr. Harris, the President of the Illinois Bankers' Association, to give us a short talk on this subject.

Mr. B. F. Harris, of Champaign, Ill.: Mr. Chairman, Members of the American Bankers' Association. It is a privilege to talk to you for a few moments, and that privilege grows in importance as the work of this great Association spreads in the direction of agriculture. I have had the opportunity of addressing a number of State conventions this summer, so that I am not going to take advantage of you now. Some other time, when we are both better prepared for each other, perhaps I will do so. However, I have one or two thoughts to leave with you. I have been a banker and a farmer for several generations, and it is hard to say as to which profession I know the least; but I do know that this movement on the part of bankers and Bankers' Associations is in the direction of agriculture and is one of the most important questions now before the people of this country. It ought to have been started ten years ago, but you know it is a habit of the American people not to be too fast in inaugurating any new movement, but now it is started and is going ahead. An ancient Chinese philosopher said, "The well being of a people is like a tree. Agriculture is its fruit, and commerce is its branches and leaves. If the root is interfered with the branches and leaves fall away and die." In this age we realize that the word agriculture is still basic. There are other things below education chiefly. Men of observation have long since ceased to need argument for any movement that will tend towards better methods in agriculture and towards better roads, and towards anything that will aid the cause of agriculture and the problems of real life and promote the general welfare. Problems are paramount, and they concern the Nation at large directly almost as much as they directly relate or indirectly relate to the problems of the country. While we have passed the stage of argument, there has been a great deal of debate, ethically and otherwise, whether a Bankers' Association should show its interest in these matters of public welfare. I think I will hear no challenge now when I say that that day has passed. It is a splendid sign of the time to see bankers giving half a day to such a programme as this.

The banker has been misunderstood. He has been considered as a mere money changer and percentage taker. That is not fair to the banker or to the public, for the banker has begun to take an interest in the people as well as to take interest from them.

Now, it seems to me that a man has two great concerns in life. One is the conquest of his environment; the other is to demonstrate what life means to him. Bankers as a class have succeeded well in the conquest of their environment, and they have splendid opportunities to demonstrate their desire to do everything that will tend towards the public's welfare. We have reached the day of readjustment and realignment, that in order to be progressive we must be conservative. Yesterday man's work was valued on the basis of his material possessions. To day it is valued on the basis of the volume of the output of his hands and his soul. Yesterday the children were to have school education for the purpose of becoming merchants and customers of the bank, but to day and increasingly henceforth the children must be patrons of the banks and the Government, and that can only come to pass when business men, especially the leading business men of this country, reach into every hamlet and aid in education for the public welfare.

While our work is more especially along educational and agricultural lines, I want the various State Bankers' Associations to take that larger interest in public affairs which is necessary for the business men of this country to take.

Chairman Chapman: On Page 161 of this book that I have previously referred to you will find a table showing that during the period from 1907 to 1909, in rye, Germany produced 87 per cent. of the entire world's production while the United States only produced 10 per cent. Germany produced 58 per cent. of the wheat, the United States only 14 per cent. Germany produced 60 per cent. of the barley, the United States only 1 per cent. Germany produced 85 per cent. of the oats; the United States 6 per cent. Germany produced 80 per cent. of the potatoes; the United States only 7 per cent. Yet Germany has an area only equal to the area of the States of Minnesota, Iowa and Missouri.

I am now going to call upon Mr. Lester Butler, of Hood River, Ore.

Mr. Lester Butler, of Hood River, Ore.: Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen, it is a great satisfaction for me to get up here and tell you what we are doing out in our State. At our State Convention in June we had a very enthusiastic gathering. Our State Association has made an appropriation to put a man out in the field to assist our State Superintendent of the Agricultural College in the work that had been started. And I may say that Mr. Chapman, the Chairman of this meeting, came out there some three years ago, and it was largely through his efforts that the movement was started in our State. From that time on we have gone forward, and, as I say, we have put a man out in the field to assist the president of the Agricultural College and the State Superintendent through the County Superintendents has been educating our farmers along practical and advanced agricultural lines. We have made very great progress indeed, and on behalf of our State Association I want to thank the Committee of this American Bankers' Association for what it has done in instituting this movement. The results with us have been very satisfactory indeed.

Chairman Chapman: Mr. Edwin N. Chamberlain, of San Antonio, Texas, will now read a short report of his journey abroad in search of information. Will you kindly stand in front, Mr. Chamberlain?

Chairman Chapman: Now, gentlemen, we will refer again to the good book on page 264. I wanted to read to you just a line about what Mr. James J. Hill says about Denmark. I don't want you people to think the United States is the whole thing. Denmark is to-day the model farm country of the world. Denmark, with an area of about one-fifth the size of Minnesota, has 2,600,000 people that raise 38 bushels of wheat and corn per acre. Their land originally was very poor, about 3,000 square miles of their land to-day cannot be cultivated because it is so low and wet, and that is in the peninsula of Jutland. There is no place to carry the water to. But by keeping dairy cattle—they went in originally for dairy cattle—they had sufficient barnyard manure to fertilize the land; and they have gone on until they have now exported to Great Britain $48,000,000 a year of butter and $21,000,000 of bacon. Their farms average 43 acres. Their yield per acre is greater in every line than that of any other nation in the world that I know of. They feed their own two million six hundred odd thousand people and they export annually $9 an acre for every acre of farm land in Denmark. For a period of ten years the gross receipts on our farms all together has not been $9 an acre.

Gentlemen, I will now call on Mr. George E. Allen, of New York. As you know, Mr. Allen is the secretary of the American Institute of Banking, and is a member of the New York Committee. Mr. Allen.

Mr. George E. Allen, New York: Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen: From talking among bankers in attendance at the Convention, I find that not all of them, as well as not all of the public, clearly understand why the bankers are in this work. They are in it, first, as citizens and next as bankers, because any banker who is worthy of the name of banker must be a citizen. Nearly all farmers welcome the co-operation of bankers in everything, in furthering their interests, as bankers welcome the farmers in aiding them to secure a scientific system of currency. We all have to work together, and no interests work together more than the bankers and the farmers. We co-operate with the educators for the purpose of extending their work, in the general schools throughout the North, as Mr. Knapp has told you he is doing down in the South. That should be unanimous. And some such legislation as the Page Bill, to which Mr. Chapman has referred, should receive the support of every banker by direct influence upon his Senators and members of the House of Representatives. But bankers are interested in this work as bankers as well as citizens. You have heard much, and will hear much more, regarding land credits.

Now, what is the first essential of farm credits as of all credits? It is to make the borrower able to pay. That is the banker's reason for wanting good farming, and if there are to be loans going over a long period of years, there must be assurance that the farmer will be able to pay many years from now as well as now.

Mr. Conant and Mr. Chamberlain in their very able remarks regarding foreign mortgage banking did not, perhaps, put enough stress upon the fact that nearly all of these loans are coupled with the provision that the condition of the farm as a basis of credit must be kept up, or otherwise there is an automatic foreclosure.

Now, I want to say just one word about this man in Georgia who could not get trusted for a chew of tobacco and show how that works out. As quick as he became a good farmer he became a good citizen, and all the merchants wanted to trust him. There is an element that goes into the banking relationship with the farmer in this country. The merchants are doing a large part of his banking, and Mr. Knapp, I venture to say, might have continued by telling that when he established credit in that way that he could get all of the money of the banker as well as his merchant, and very likely if he wanted a mortgage on his farm some life insurance company would have been chasing him and he not the man.

In devising new modified banking schemes it is necessary to take into consideration what we already have in this country. We hear of many stories about 37 per cent. interest to the farmer, but the statistics compiled by Mr. Conant show that the farmer on the mortgage basis has not been paying more in your old established Eastern States than the manufacturer or even the railroad.

Now, in the Northwest, where high rates are said to prevail and did prevail years ago, we find that now money is being put out at 6 per cent. or less, and that life insurance companies are sending out agents to solicit mortgages without the farmers coming to them.

There are different conditions here than in Europe, but as we are preaching scientific methods to the farmer, we must be in a receptive mood for anything that economists, farmers or anybody else suggests to us bankers. The banking system is comparatively crude in America, and probably no revolution is needed here. Our 15,000 State banks and trust companies throughout the country are machinery that can be worked into a system of credit that will solve this, and by working in connection with the farmers and the economists to create by evolution out of this system whatever is necessary in farm credit banking, and by working for improved farming methods, as citizens and bankers, we are going to reach the point easily, with no danger to any bank, where we can one day support a billion in this country with greater prosperity and happiness than we are now supporting one hundred million.

Secretary Chapman: For fear some of you may not know what the Page Bill is, and would not recognize it if you met it on the street, I am going to tell you in a word what it provides, what the provisions of that Page Bill are (reading):

For the teaching of agriculture, the trades and industries and home economics, in connection with our general secondary or public high school system	$3,000,000
For the teaching of the trades and industries and home economics in separate schools	3,000,000
For instruction in agriculture and home economics in State district agriculture schools	3,125,000
For agricultural instruction work	2,980,000
For branch experiment and demonstration stations at district agricultural schools	1,050,000
For the education of teachers at State normal and other training schools	1,027,000
For the education of teachers at State agricultural colleges	480,000
For administration expenses	90,000
Total	$14,752,000

But this is not all to be paid in any one year—not until the end of the year 1921. That is, the maximum carried under the Page Bill by the year 1921 will be $14,752,000. In the year 1913 there will be only appropriated $2,000,000.

1915	2,777,000
1916	13,252,000
1917	13,552,000
1918	13,852,000
1919	14,152,000
1920	14,452,000
1921	14,752,000

And the government don't pay a cent unless the State and the locality in the State to be benefited pays twice what the government does. So they have a sort of John D. Rockefeller system attached to that. They make us pay if we want to get anything.

Now, gentlemen, I am going to call on Mr. W. W. Bowman, of Kansas. He is Secretary of the Kansas Bankers' Association and thoroughly interested in this subject. I wish him to say a few words.

Mr. W. W. Bowman: Kansas is in this great movement and loves it for two reasons at least: One, because she is interested in the public welfare, and she is interested for this very reason, that she would not mind having just about double what she is now getting out of her soil. She is in it because she knows that twice one is two. She is in it because she knows that the good Lord has deposited in that rich soil out there in Kansas enough of dynamics to produce double times what we are now getting. We know full well that we are just scraping over the soil.

And if I say one little word further now it will be simply to say that we are in this movement because we want not only more bushels of corn, more wheat, more bushels of everything to the acre, but I think I should say more bushels of happiness to the people out there, more bushels of content. We see more bushels of everything that makes up the sort of home life that would beautify and inspire and uplift rural life in America, if all over this great country under this great blue sky we can have this movement swept like a great flood to reach school houses of the country, the church, the farm homes, everywhere, the boys will stay there and the girls will stay there because they love to stay there, if all that has now come to pass to the modern civilization in these modern times, taking the daily paper and the telegraph and the telephone and these other good things, this splendid theory will bring to thousands and hundreds of thousands of rural homes—something better than a dollar mark of four figures—it will sweeten and ennoble and uplift all mankind.

Chairman Chapman: To get our minds off ethics for a few minutes, we will turn back to banking, and I will ask Mr. George Woodruff, of Joliet, Ill., who has also spent the summer in Europe looking around and seeing what he could gather, to step forward.

Mr. Woodruff: Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen: It is a little hard to ask leave to make a visit with you on this subject of farm finance, after Mr. Chamberlain and Mr. Conant have covered every point of the proposition, but I would just like for a few minutes to talk on the matter, nevertheless.

You know, I am a great fellow to believe that the best way to tackle a thing is to size all of the details and get it classified, and then after you have gotten it well classified in your mind, why, if you figure out what the ultimate object is, then just keep on tugging at that ultimate object until you get there.

And so, just let me briefly call your attention if I may. The basic point that Mr. Chamberlain and Mr. Conant have brought out, you know in the first place, the farm finance is divided into two great sections—mortgage finance and personal credit finance. Now, it is a good thing to know that, to get that in our minds. And so in all farm countries it is a good thing to get that in our minds first. And so you will find in all farm countries there are two great sub-divisions of this subject of agricultural finance that we are all so much interest in—mortgage finance and personal credit finance. Then we find the main parts of mortgage finance are divided into what we might call the Crédit Foncier type in France, and the Landschaften type in Germany. In other words, our mortgage sub-division is itself divided into the Crédit Foncier type and the Landschaften type. And so also is the personal credit finance divided. That is divided into what we may call the Reifeisen type and the Schultz-Delicht type, which are very much like the ordinary credit account such as we have in our country, and what we might call the credit agricole account in France.

Now, we take up the mortgage subjects first, and we find that the Crédit Foncier is an organization privately owned and it is a joint stock company and is largely controlled by the Government.

The Landschaften, on the other hand, is a German institution and is co-operatively owned, so that we find that the mortgage division, the division of mortgage finance, is perhaps strongly divided between the privately owned corporation and the co-operatively owned corporation.

Then look at the other side, the personal credit account. We find the Reifeisen Bank and the Schultz-Delicht, which are both co-operatively owned, the Reifeisen Bank being a rural bank and the Schultz-Delicht Bank being more of an urban bank. They are voluntary associations of farmers or of artisans. Then we find the ordinary bank, which is the same as our bank, your bank and mine, which, of course, is a joint stock company and privately owned. Then in addition we find the credit and agricole system, which is a co-operatively owned bank, but which is really a state aided corporation, government corporation.

Now, I will not take your time to go into the details of all these different systems, because these gentlemen have already several the matter very briefly, but you can easily find the information in many publications on this subject.

I want to call your attention to just one thing. There is [illegible] a great mistake, in my mind, here in America, on this whole thing about agricultural finance, in that we are leading the farmer to believe he is going to get very cheap rates if we adopt these various systems now being followed in Europe. Now, it is a mistake. I have seen that in lots of publications. I have heard lots of people make the statement, and it is getting so the farmer believes if we get these Landschaften banks here or the Raffeisen or the Crédit Foncier that he is going to get money for 3 per cent.; but I am sure he will never get 3 per cent money in this country. I think you have all seen many times the statement that the Crédit Foncier loans money at 3 per cent. Well, now, it is true. That is brought about by the fact that recently the Crédit Foncier had [illegible] of Credit Foncier bonds and they were open at public subscription and were offered and subscribed some fifteen times over. These were 3 per cent. bonds. So the statement had gone out in America that the Crédit Foncier loans money at 3 per cent. As a matter of fact, these bonds did bear 3 per cent., but they are sold at a discount. They were sold at around, say, 97, and therefore that gives the Crédit Foncier a little more than 3 per cent. Therefore they cost the Crédit Foncier a little more than 3 per cent. In addition to that, from what I know, there is lottery bonds. By that I mean that these bonds are being paid off every few months. They run for 75 years, and it is said they will be paid off by 75 years, and so they put all these bonds in a big wheel and every six months draw out a few of each bond, say 2 per cent. and at the end of six months, suppose you happen to own one of the bonds, the man who does the drawing draws out a number, and if that number happens to be the first number drawn out you will probably get 50,000 francs for your 500-franc bond; if you are the second, perhaps you will get 30,000 francs for that bond; if it happens to be the next, you may get 10,000 francs; or if it comes the next ten or fifteen numbers you may get 5,000 francs, and after all that the rest are paid at par. If you buy one of these bonds at 97 you have a good chance to get par in six months; but if you get par every time there is a drawing you have your chance, and in addition you have a gambler's chance to get 1,000 francs or maybe 20,000 francs, or 30,000 or 50,000 francs, and so the suckers buy. (Laughter.) And they invest their money at 3 per cent. because they get a gambler's chance like that.

Now, gentlemen, I know how it works, because I bought a 500-franc bond when in Paris to bring home to some of my friends to show it to them in New York, and I intended to sell it in New York and get my 500 francs back. I got to thinking it over and said to my brother, "I am a lucky fellow; I think I will hang on to that and get the 50,000 francs," and so I have got it home and the boys have it in the home, and I will not part with it. And that is why the 3 per cent. rate is made up with the Crédit Foncier. It costs the Crédit Foncier, after paying the deposits and paying the discount, exactly 4 per cent. to place those bonds, and they lend the money to any farmer at 4.3 per cent., as Mr. Conant has stated this morning, so the farmer himself gets the money at 4.3 per cent. and not 3 per cent., as is sometimes stated.

Then, I think, the next point, the next is in connection with the Landschaften system in Germany, which is the other, you remember, the other side of the farm mortgage section of this question. The statement is ofttimes made that the Landschaften loans money to the farmers at 3½ per cent. And it is true it does, but there is a joker there. The Landschaften system provides a farmer may come and say I want to borrow 1,000 marks, and the Landschaften will grab that loan, but, instead of paying the 1,000 marks in cash like the Crédit Foncier does in France, it pays it in debenture bonds, its own bonds; he hands him the mortgage and it has its own bonds and gives them to the farmer, and he must market it or sell it on the Bourse. Now a farmer comes into the bank and says I wish to borrow 1,000 marks; the manager says do you want to pay 3½, 4 or 4½ per cent., and the farmer then takes his pick, and if he says I want to pay 3½ per cent., they will say all right, and when he makes out his mortgages they hand him over a bond of the Landschaften drawing 3½ per cent. interest, and he must go to the Bourse and sell it for maybe 85 or 80 per cent. on the dollar and so he does not get 3 per cent. money in the Landschaften system in Germany, but it costs him probably in the neighborhood of 4½ or 5 per cent.

Then the third system, which I have noticed in some of the American magazines, is in connection with the Crédit Agricole. You remember, the co-operative division of the personal credit organization. These were mortgage organizations. This is a personal credit organization. Where the statement is made that the farmer borrows at 3½ per cent. And as Mr. Conant said this morning, some gave more. Now, it is perfectly true the farmer there does get his personal credit short time loan under very good restrictions for 3½ per cent. or 4 per cent., but that is due to a peculiar condition in France. Mr. Conant called your attention to the fact that the Bank of France was compelled to make a large draft to the government for the use of agriculture at the time of the extension of its charter, and it has to pay in each year a certain tax. That goes to that purpose. There is always a large bond that is divided almost wholly to the department known as Crédit Agricole, and then the money is divided and a certain part of it is allotted to each one of the regional banks. There are about eighty-one departments, and each department has to have a bank, and the regional bank loans to each local bank and the local bank loans to the farmer, but the bank gets that money free of interest and it loans to the regional bank free of interest, and the regional bank loans to the local bank at 3 per cent., and this 3 per cent. goes to build up a reserve in the regional bank that will some time take care of this branch of the business, and a regional bank loans to the farmer at 3½ per cent., making ½ per cent. profit to cover its expenses.

Now, while the farmer does get it at that rate, it is at the expense of the Government and indirectly at the expense of the Bank of France, and the best bankers I have talked to in France are unanimous in stating it is a great mistake to furnish the farmer at artificial rate—a rate below the commercial rate—and in that way fool a farmer as to his credit standing. Some day if the fund shall be exhausted and the Bank of France should change and as repayment of this loan, the Government could not provide funds, of course, the whole thing would fall.

From your standpoint of practical banking the thing you would not stand for is the way the local bank loans the money. They endorse them to the local bank and they send them to the regional bank, and this three-name paper is forwarded to the Bank of France. Discounted by the regional bank and the Bank of France, and the Bank of France raises sometimes 4 per cent., and they sometimes have to take 4 per cent. on paper that is only receiving 3 per cent. from the farmer, and consequently the regional bank suffers a loss, which is not what we consider good banking principles.

That, gentlemen, is the answer, in my mind, to these things that I have noticed in connection with the rate, and it seems to me that we ought all to pull together to show the American people and the American farmer that while we are trying to get an abnormally low rate, we will not get it, but a rate that is as good as obtained by the railroads on long-time bonds, or which it will get on the Crédit Foncier system and the Landschaften system, on one side, and a rate that is just as good as would be obtained by the manufacturer or merchant in Chicago, on the other side. I think our present 27,000 banks in America can handle the situation and it is not necessary to create a large number of co-operative banks, because all men know that what we need in America is some single organization which will give us an outlet for the loans of these 27,000 banks, and you will find, gentlemen, when you come to study the great co-operative systems in Europe, that in every case the co-operative system would be of no consequence in this country unless we have something of that sort, and it seems to me it would be better to create a central banking organization on the lines of the National Reserve Association and allow the present 27,000 banks to handle the business.

There is a whole lot more things about this that I am interested in that I wish I had time to talk over with you, but I have taken much of your time and I am very much obliged to you.

Mr. Myron Campbell, of South Bend, Ind.: Mr. President, may I inject myself for a moment without being called on, because I want to follow this discussion with a resolution that will not require any debate, as I will ask to have it referred to a committee.

Chairman Chapman: Yes, sir, if you will not take more than a moment.

Mr. Campbell: We all realize that we ought to encourage fertilization and education along farming lines, but I think we also ought to realize that Congress acts slow in all these matters, and the resolution that I am about to offer refers to one or two features in the Aldrich Bill, and it may be a long time before Congress finally acts upon that measure, but there are one or two features that Congress might act upon at once—

Chairman Chapman (interposing): Will the gentleman kindly state his resolution that he wishes referred to a committee.

Mr. Campbell: The resolution is this:

Resolved, That the National Banking Act be amended so that Section 5,136 shall read—that is, the line "To loan money on personal security," shall read "to loan money on such security as shall be approved by its Board of Directors"; and to strike "previously" out of Section 5137——

Chairman Chapman (again interposing): The Secretary calls my attention to the fact that it takes a two-third vote of the Convention to permit of the introduction of a resolution other than a resolution of thanks without its having first been reported out of a committee.

Mr. Benjamin W. Hunt, of Eatonton, Ga.: Do not our by-laws require that a resolution of this character shall first go before the Executive Council?

Chairman Chapman: That is the understanding of the Chair, sir.

Mr. Campbell: I beg your pardon, but by vote of two-thirds of the Convention it may be taken up and considered at any time. I ask the General Secretary if that is not so?

Secretary Farnsworth: Yes, that is right.

Chairman Chapman: The Chair rules that you will have to move for the consent of the Convention before your resolution can be entertained.

Mr. Campbell: Then, sir, I make that motion.

Mr. Edens: I second the gentleman's motion.

Mr. Hunt: I object. I came here to attend this meeting, hoping to hear a debate on this subject, and I do not wish to have the debate interfered with by the injection of resolutions not germane to it.

Chairman Chapman: Vote it down, then, when the question is put. All in favor of the Convention entertaining the resolution presented by the gentleman from Indiana will say "aye"; opposed, "no." The motion is lost.

I will now call on Mr. H. P. Beckwith, of North Dakota, to give us a talk.

H. P. Beckwith, of Fargo, N. D.: My talk will be very brief, gentlemen. I will simply give you a few practical facts. North Dakota won the prize at the agricultural meeting in St. Paul, and I want to tell you why we did it. We have, in North Dakota, the only system in actual operation of this movement. We have an incorporation called the North Dakota Better Farming Association, and to carry on our work we have raised $150,000 a year for three years. That money was raised principally through the banks, though, of course, we got some out of the railroad and the milling interests; but they benefit by the movement as materially as do the rest of us.

I have jotted down two or three of the results that we have obtained. Taking a piece of 120 acres of wheat. In 1911 the yield was 12½ bushels to the acre. In 1912 it was 21¼ bushels to the acre. Another piece of 40 acres sowed to oats. In 1911 the yield was 32 bushels to the acre. This year it is 49 bushels per acre. I could go on and give you numerous other similar instances if time permitted. And we have only just started this work. We have engaged an Agricultural Adviser, and he goes out to the country, to the farmers in the different sections, and gets right down to the farmer and works with the farmer. We have tried the plan of sending out circulars to the farmers, but we do not think it is useful in obtaining results, because they do not always read them. We think a better plan is to send an expert to them who will actually teach them modern methods, and who will instruct them in respect of the selection of various seeds. We have supervisors under our agricultural department in each county, and they supervise the work of these instructors. The greatest trouble that we have experienced is in getting suitable instructors. We have had to scour the country practically to get those that we have now.

Another thing, we are getting consolidated schools in our State that are teaching agricultural culture and domestic science along the same line that is now being taught in the schools of Illinois. We are also making an effort to get the boys interested so that they will take up agriculture for a business. We are offering prizes for scholarship, much in the same way as has been done and is being done in the South to-day.

This movement up in our State was originally called the Hundred Acre Club, but we have changed that name and now call it the Better Farming Association. I have nothing but good results to report.

Benjamin W. Hunt, of Eatonton, Ga.: I want to say that Mr. Livingstone, of the Fifth Georgia District, was the man who did more than any one else to get these boys' Corn Clubs started. The Georgia Bankers' Association then became interested and they have been helping these clubs along.

Now, in this discussion I notice that there is one thing that has been left out, and that is the home life of the farmers. A boy will leave the farm and go into town and work in a dry goods store rather than stay home, and what we want to do is to inculcate in our farmers the idea of making homes pleasant. Why, there are rich farmers down in my country that live in almost absolute wretchedness. The younger generation that is growing up ought to be surrounded with the beauty and restfulness of art that all nature intended should be thrown around the home of a farmer. If we bankers teach the farmers how to grow more corn and how to amass more riches that is all very well, but it will never keep the boy on the farm or send the boys back to the farm until we do something to make the farm more of a real home—make it more attractive. We owe it to the people not only to make farming more comfortable, so that the farmers will make more money, but we want to do something to make the farmers' homes more attractive. What are you going to do with the money? Every man here in this Convention doubtless has all the money that is good for him, but if he has not a restful, happy home what good is it? We shall be at fault as leaders of the people if we do not make farm life attractive as well as profitable.

Chairman Chapman: I refer the gentleman from Georgia to this book, in which you will find a number of addresses on the subject of which he has spoken.

Mr. Breckinridge Jones, of St. Louis, Mo.: Mr. Chairman, I move that this Convention tender a vote of thanks to Mr. Charles A. Conant, and to the other speakers, for their addresses upon this occasion.

Mr. Hunt: I take pleasure in seconding that motion.

Chairman Chapman: Gentlemen, you have heard the motion. All in favor of it will say "aye"; opposed, "no." The motion is carried.

I should have liked to have the Convention hear a number of other gentlemen this morning, but time forbids, and I hope that the gentlemen whom I have not called upon will not feel hurt that they have not had a chance to speak on this subject. Next year I trust that in arranging the programme for the Convention an entire day may be devoted to this subject.

And now, Mr. President, thanking you for your courtesy, I turn over the gavel.

Mr. Livingstone, the President of the Association, then resumed the Chair.

The President: Gentlemen, United States Senator Townsend will be present this afternoon and address the Convention promptly at 2.30 o'clock, and I hope there may be a large attendance.

Secretary Farnsworth: I desire to announce that there is a large quantity of mail and some telegrams addressed to members of the Association at the Information Bureau in the Hotel Pontchartrain.

The President: We will now take a recess until 2 o'clock.

A recess was then taken until 2 p.m.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The President: The Convention will please be in order. Is the Federal Legislative Committee ready to report?

(No response.)

We will pass that. Is there any report from the Organization of State Secretaries?

(No response.)

Report of Committee on Forms for National and State Banks.

[The report of this Committee is printed on page 144.]

Is there any report from that Committee?

Secretary Farnsworth: Yes; that report is here.

The President: Unless there is objection, the report will be received and filed. There being no objection, it is so ordered.

NEXT CONVENTION TO BE HELD AT BOSTON.

The next business in order is invitations for the next Convention.

Secretary Farnsworth: Invitations for the next Convention have been received from New York City, through Group 8 of the New York State Bankers' Association; from Boston, through the Clearing House Association of that city, and also from representative bankers; from Atlantic City, through the Atlantic City Publicity Bureau; from Indianapolis, Ind., through the Publicity Bureau of the Commercial Club of that city, readnig as follows (reading the several invitations referred to).

The city of Buffalo, N. Y., also sends a communication respecting the holding of the Convention in 1914 in Buffalo.

There are also in the hands of your Secretary invitations from San Francisco and from Seattle for the Convention of 1915.

Mr. George M. Reynolds, of Chicago, Ill.: Recognizing as I do how much more advantageous it is to the locality which undertakes to entertain a large gathering to know as far in advance as may be that it is going to be asked to take care of the gathering, I move that this Convention accept with thanks the invitation of the Boston bankers to meet in the city of Boston in 1913.

F. H. Colburn, of San Francisco, Cal.: I second that motion.

The President: Gentlemen, you have heard the motion that the Convention next year be held in the city of Boston. Are you ready for the question? All in favor of that motion will say "aye"; opposed, "no." It is carried unanimously.

Mr. Charles A. Ruggles, of Boston, Mass.: On behalf of the Boston Clearing House Association and on behalf of the many bankers of our city, I thank you and assure you that when you come to Boston next year we will give you a royal welcome.

The President: We have with us a distinguished citizen of our State and of the nation, who, through some misunderstanding, was not present with us on Tuesday as he expected he would be, and I take great pleasure in introducing to you United States Senator Townsend, of Michigan.

The Bankers in Their Relation to the People.

The President: Unfinished business is the order on our programme. Is there anything under this head? (No response.)

The next item on the programme is communications from Executive Council. There is nothing under this head, I understand. Resolutions are next in order.

THANKS TO DETROIT.

Mr. Stephenson: I move that this Convention extend a cordial vote of thanks to Hon. Charles S. Osborn, Hon. Charles E. Townsend, Hon. Charles A. Conant, Dr. Bradford Knapp, and to Hiram Walker & Sons, to the Burroughs Adding Machine Company, to the members of the press and the reporters and the newspapers of the city of Detroit, to the Associated Banks of Detroit, to the Packard Motor Car Company for their courtesy extended in sending their band to play for us this afternoon, and to the citizens generally of Detroit, who have extended cordial, delightful hospitality and courtesies to us and have made this a gala week for the members of the American Association during our sojourn in this city. (Applause.)

The resolution was variously seconded.

The President: Gentlemen, you have heard the resolution expressive of the thanks of the Convention to the guests of the Association who have delivered addresses and to the banks and individuals who have extended courtesies to us. All in favor of the adoption of the resolution will manifest it by rising. The resolution is unanimously adopted.

John F. Seeley, of Caro, Mich.: Mr. President, are we still under the head of resolutions?

The President: Yes, sir.

Mr. Seeley: I have a resolution that I desire to offer.

The President: Resolutions that do not come reported out from a committee cannot be entertained unless with the permission of the Convention by a two-thirds vote.

Mr. Seeley: I ask unanimous consent to present the resolution.

Mr. Hunt: I object.

The President: The Chair has no parliamentary right to permit the introduction of the resolution, but as a matter of courtesy will permit the gentleman to read it.

Mr. John T. Dismukes, of St. Augustine, Fla.: I rise to the point of order that the Chair cannot even entertain the resolution as a matter of courtesy when objection has been made, and objection was made by a gentleman on my right.

The President: Then the Chair is compelled to sustain the point of order.

Mr. Seeley: The reason I ask leave to read the resolution is so that it may get before the Executive Council now and not be delayed for a year.

Mr. W. G. Edens, of Chicago, Ill.: I move that unanimous consent be given for the gentleman to read his resolution.

Mr. W. W. Cloud, of Baltimore, Md.: I second that motion.

Mr. Dismukes: I move to lay the resolution on the table.

Mr. Hunt: I second the motion.

The President: It has been moved, and the motion is supported, to lay this resolution on the table, and that is the first question that we will vote on. All in favor of laying the resolution on the table will say "aye"; opposed, "no."

The motion to lay on the table is lost.

The question now recurs on the motion made by Mr. Edens to permit the reading of the resolution. All in favor of that motion will say "aye"; opposed, "no."

The motion is carried and the gentleman from Michigan may read his resolution.

Mr. Seeley: Gentlemen, I thank you. I have had this matter under consideration for over a year and it had come to a point where——

The President (interposing): The gentleman from Michigan will proceed to read his resolution.

Mr. Seeley: All right, sir. The resolution is as follows:

Whereas, The bank note or currency now in use, is printed with large or distinctive figures on both the back and face, and causing the people to count their money from the back as well as the face; and,

Whereas, The 26,000 smaller banks of our country are put to the taxing expenses of rearranging each of their customer's currency offered for deposit or for the payment of notes; and,

Whereas, At no time in our history could relief from this old time-consuming currency be better had than at the present time; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Secretary of this Association be directed to write to the Secretary of the United States Treasury—Mr. McVeagh—recommending that the large denominational numbers be printed upon the face only of the proposed new issue of Government and National Bank notes.

I move the adoption of this resolution.

The President: Is not this the resolution that was offered on Tuesday and referred to the Executive Council?

Mr. Seeley: I beg to say that this resolution has not been introduced before.

Mr. R. A. James, of Easton, Pa.: Unless this resolution has been separated from the Executive Council it cannot be considered in the Convention. Now, the gentleman has been accorded the courtesy of reading his resolution, but the resolution cannot be considered and acted upon by the Convention if objection is made, and I heard some gentleman here object; it cannot be considered by the Convention except by a two-third vote, but it must go to the Executive Council.

The President: Does the gentleman from Pennsylvania make that point of order?

Mr. James: I do, sir.

The President: The Chair sustains the point of order. Now, are there any other resolutions?

Secretary Farnsworth: There is a resolution which was submitted to the Executive Council by William R. Creer, President of the Cleveland Savings & Loan Company, of Cleveland, Ohio, and reported out from the Executive Council and which resolution reads as follows:

RESOLUTION IN FAVOR OF ONE-CENT LETTER POSTAGE.

Whereas, The annual reports of the Postmaster General for fiscal years ending June 30, 1910, and 1911, show that first-class (letter) mail, produced in the first of these two years a profit of over $58,000,000, and in the second (the current year), a profit of more than $62,000,000, which sums were entirely absorbed by the losses incurred in handling other classes of mail at less than cost of service; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the American Bankers' Association, that all users of letter postage should be accorded a one-cent rate for the ordinary letter with as little delay as possible.

Mr. Creer: I move the adoption of that resolution, Mr. President.

Mr. Edens: I second it.

The President: It has been moved and seconded that the resolution just read be adopted. Are there any remarks?

Mr. Creer: I know that the gentlemen of the Convention are in a hurry to get away, but I would like to speak briefly on this resolution. As it states, in the past two years the profit on first class postage has been more than $50,000,000 in one year, and in another year over $60,000,000. Now, in the last year the loss on second-class mail matter was $66,000,000, and it is growing greater every year. One pertinent fact will explain the reason. The large majority of publications that seek entrance under the second-class rating of one cent per pound are nothing but advertising schemes in disguise, and that portion of the publication which is other than advertising is in the large majority of instances devoid of literary ability or educational value, and so far as the youth of the land are concerned, it would be much better that it were buried in the deep sea than ever perused.

The second-class mail matter constitutes 63 per cent. of the tonnage of all mail matter moved, yet it only pays four per cent. of the annual revenues of the Post-Office Department. The little postal card turned in to the Post-Office treasury last year $18,000,000. They weighed 10,000,000 pounds. The second-class mail matter turned in, in revenue to the Post-Office Department, $9,000,000, and it weighed 953,000,000 pounds. We were entertained and enlightened this morning on farm development, and we were told that Congress had made an appropriation of $450,000 to put instructors in the field to teach up-to-date farming. If the money gained in profit to the Post-Office Department in the last ten years had been used for that purpose a farming instructor would have been placed in every county of the United States, and with a ship subsidy used out of the same funds the American flag could have been put in every port in the world.

The Post-Office Department is in favor of this plan, and the President of the United States has declared himself also in favor of it. We ask for an adjustment. We do not want any lapsided arrangement made, but we want "Jones to pay the freight." We want to pay for our first-class mail matter all that it costs the Government to move it, and we ask that the other fellow be made to pay what it costs the Government to move his second-class mail matter. Why, gentlemen, it is a matter of some little humor when you reflect that if you wish to mail a copy of the Holy Scriptures it will cost you eight cents, whereas the "Philistines" can be mailed for one cent. (Laughter.)

The President: Are you ready for the question on this resolution. If so, all in favor of its adoption will say "aye"; opposed, "no."

The motion is carried and the resolution is adopted.

We now come to the report of the Committee on Nominations.

The President: A motion that the rules be suspended and the report adopted would be in order.

Mr. Edens: I move that the rules be suspended and that the report of the Nominating Committee be adopted.

Mr. Joseph Chapman, of Minnesota: I second the motion.

The President: All in favor of the motion will say "aye"; opposed, "no."

The motion prevails and the report of the Committee is adopted. It affords me very great pleasure to present the President-Elect, and you will permit me to say that, while the Association thus honors him, it has honored itself by electing a man who will ever have the interests of bankers at heart, and who ever stands willing to give the very best that is in him for the advancement of the American Bankers' Association. (Applause and cheers greeted the President-Elect as he stepped forward.)

President Huttig: Members of the American Bankers' Association: I thank you with all my heart for the honor you have conferred upon me. The financial and commercial welfare of this country is largely centered in the hands of you who make up the membership of this organization, and to properly discharge the duties of the position with which you have favored me will be my greatest ambition. The American Bankers' Association is committed to certain important work, and we will lend our best efforts to successfully carry it out. Special attention will be directed to securing federal legislation in the matter of banking and currency reform. It is the immediate business of the bankers of this country to secure the passage of laws that will keep our banking and industrial affairs in a normal and healthy condition. We must not follow others; we must lead. (Applause.)

What is the further pleasure of the Convention?

LOVING CUP FOR PRESIDENT HUTTIG.

Mr. W. W. Hoxton, St. Louis, Mo.: I have the honor, sir, to hand you this token in behalf of those who rejoice in your elevation to the Presidency of the American Bankers' Association. In behalf of those of your own home, those who know you best, I present this loving cup. (Applause.)

The gift was placed upon a table.

President Huttig: Mr. Hoxton, this is indeed a surprise. It almost gives me stage fright. All I can say is that I appreciate the gift of my home friends very dearly. I take pride in my Presidency of the Third National Bank of St. Louis.

but my greatest asset I hold to be the friendship the manifestation of which this beautiful gift is, and another expression of which has come from this Convention in electing me to the Presidency of this Association.

Calls were made for Vice President Elect Reynolds.

President Huttig: I present the Vice-President Elect, Mr. Arthur Reynolds.

Vice President Reynolds: While I deeply appreciate the compliment paid me in selecting me as Vice President for the ensuing year, I esteem very much more the continued confidence of my fellow bankers. In the various undertakings of this Association with which I have been connected I have endeavored to give the very best that was in me, and I pledge you that for the work that lies before me during my term of office I will continue along the same line.

CHEST OF SILVER FOR RETIRING PRESIDENT LIVINGSTONE.

Mr. F. O. Watts, of Nashville, Tenn.: It is a custom in the American Bankers' Association upon the retirement of one of its officers to present to him a fitting testimonial of the love and confidence that he has inspired in the members. It has been my pleasure during a period of three years to have stood shoulder to shoulder with the man who has now laid down the gavel, and therefore I am in a position to say of him that, whether as Chairman of the Executive Council, Vice-President, and President, he has ever measured up to the utmost demands made upon the incumbency of his high office. (Applause.) Commodore Livingstone, on behalf of the American Bankers' Association I present you this chest of silver. (Applause.)

A large chest of silver was then displayed upon the platform.

Retiring President Livingstone: I do not think I have hay fever, but I have something which pretty nearly brings the tears. Among the anxieties of life which come to all of us it is the little bright spots that make everything happy. I have been honored very much more than I deserve. When I was elected President of this Association, to say that I appreciated it is beyond the bounds of my vocabulary to express. Now I have had the honor of helping to entertain you in my home city, the city where I have lived from boyhood, and I hope, Providence permitting, that I will have an opportunity to meet with you many times in the future. I remember hearing the lamented McKinley say that the sweetest flowers that bloom were those that grew over the garden wall of politics. While there are no politics, in that sense, in the American Bankers' Association, yet in this busy competitive world of ours it would be astonishing if sometimes there were not more or less friction; but I am frank to say, looking the twilight hour in the face and not unmindful of that fact, that I have been associated with a great many men in my life engaged in different vocations I have never yet found a body of men that had so much of the milk of human kindness in their make-up as the bankers.

Gentlemen, again and again I thank you from the depths of my heart, and assure you that I shall ever cherish with fondest recollection this beautiful gift. (Applause.)

George M. Reynolds, of Chicago, Ill.: Mr. Livingstone, believing as I do that there comes a time in the life of every man when he lives more in the memories of the past than in anticipations for the future, and at the same time hoping that it may be many years before you will reach that stage, still, in order that there may be something come to you later on when you have completed this magnificent new building that you are erecting for your bank's home, and when you are occupying your own private office in that building so that you may hang it upon the wall, on behalf of the American Bankers' Association I present to you this emblem of your office as President of this Association. I trust that in the future as you sit in meditation in your home or in your office that your mind will recur with pleasure to the memory of the days when you were so actively connected with this Association. (Presenting emblem.)

Mr. Livingstone: Mr. Reynolds and Gentlemen: Some poet has said, "When time, which steals our years away, shall steal our pleasures too, the memory of the past remains, and half our joys renews." I assure you that that pleasure will be ever mine.

Secretary Farnsworth: Before the Convention adjourns I desire to say that I have received a letter of greeting from the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges. (Reading letter.)

I desire to give notice that immediately upon the close of this Convention the Executive Council will meet on the Convention Hall floor of the Hotel Pontchartrain.

President Huttig: If there is no further business to come before the Convention, a motion to adjourn would be in order.

Mr. F. W. Hyde, of Jamestown, N. Y.: I move that the Convention do now adjourn without date.

Mr. R. W. Cutler, of Hartford, Conn.: I second the motion.

President Huttig: All in favor of adjourning will manifest it by saying "aye"; opposed, "no." The motion is carried, and I declare the Convention adjourned without date.

MEETING OF THE EXECUTIVE COUNCIL.

The newly elected Executive Council of the American Bankers' Association met late Friday afternoon, after the adjournment of the Convention, and elected the following officers for the ensuing year:

Chairman:—Thomas J. Davis, Cincinnati, Ohio.

General Secretary—Fred E. Farnsworth, 5 Nassau Street, New York. (Unanimously re-elected.)

Treasurer—J. Fletcher Farrell, Vice-President Dearborn National Bank, Chicago, Ill. (Unanimously re-elected.)

Assistant Secretary—William G. Fitzwilson, 5 Nassau Street, New York. (Unanimously re-elected.)

General Counsel—Thomas B. Paton, 5 Nassau Street, New York. (Unanimously re-elected.)

The Council resolved to hold its spring meeting at Hot Springs, Va.

After making appropriations for the various Sections and to carry on the general work of the Association, the Council adjourned.

The Money Trust Inquiry.

By GEORGE M. REYNOLDS, President of the Continental and Commercial National Bank, of Chicago.

Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen:

Every great crisis wherein business has been seriously affected and which has had a tendency to accentuate any weakness in our system of business has brought out some object lesson for future guidance.

The lesson of the panic of 1907 was that of the value of co-operation.

The abuses incident to the unparalleled prosperity in this country for five years prior to that period caused an over-expansion in the use of credit, culminating in the latter part of October of that year in a money panic, which for a time paralyzed our commerce and threatened the destruction of our institutions; public confidence was disturbed and, the solvency of the banks being doubted, depositors were anxious to withdraw their balances for the purpose of hoarding money.

The amount of lawful money carried by the banks, while sufficient to meet all requirements under normal conditions, now that a state of chaos existed, was found to be inadequate to meet the demands made upon them, and since our Banking and Currency law contained no provision by which the banks could protect their outstanding credits, to say nothing of protecting the credits of their customers, the banks located in the principal cities throughout the country, as the only means of self-defense left to them, simultaneously went upon a clearing house certificate basis.

While this action seemed to some to be very drastic, it, in fact, proved to be the safeguard of the situation, since through it banks were enabled to meet the urgent requests for credit made upon them and renew credits already extended to concerns, many of which might otherwise have been forced into bankruptcy. At the same time, self-preservation, admittedly the first law of nature, forced the banks in the large reserve cities to stifle the spirit of competition existing between them and work in harmony for the common good—self-protection compelling them to apply the spirit of co-operation to their business in a practical way by utilizing, as far as was practicable, their combined skill and strength to defend the integrity of any bank or concern known to be solvent which required assistance.

Regardless of this commendable spirit and the aid rendered, much criticism has been heaped upon bankers by certain classes. These critics are dissatisfied because we do not in times of crises furnish to the public credit and money in amounts sufficient to meet their needs, and, on the other hand, in normal times they criticise us because, as they say, the control of money and credit is not sufficiently diversified.

I am surprised that any student of the subject should pretend to believe that the banks in times of stress willfully withhold from the public the use of such credit and money as it is possible for them under existing conditions and in accordance with the law to supply. Self-interest alone would not permit of their doing this, for no profit can accrue to a bank where an excess of reserve accumulates. Furthermore, the law of competition would not permit it, for in these days when it is the universal practice for banks to extend credit in proportion to the balance which a customer carries with the bank subject to his check, the banker knows full well that if he fails to meet the legitimate requirements of such customer it will result in the loss of that account, which, under the law of competition, will go to his neighbor, who will extend credit against such balances. Therefore, self-interest prompts the banker to do his utmost to serve the public under these conditions.

In thirty-two years of experience in banking, I have yet to learn of the first instance where bankers carrying the reserves of a community have willfully, and for the purpose of punishing individuals or industries in that community, declined to extend credit against their reserves when there has been a disturbed public confidence and an unusually large demand for both money and credit; and, so far as I know, the only bankers who have failed in emergencies of this kind have been those who have themselves been filled with fear and who have been so panic stricken that they have placed their own safety above the public welfare. I am glad to say, however, that such bankers are so few as compared to the whole number that I do not believe there is just ground for the belief that the bankers of this country have failed to discharge this trust faithfully and well.

Whatever of criticism can properly attach to the banks because of their failure to meet the wishes of the public in times of stress is due to the system and not to the inclination of the bankers, whose actions are circum-scribed by a law compelling them to maintain certain reserves, no matter what the needs of a community for credit or money may be.

As I stated in the beginning, the object lesson of the panic of 1907 was that of the value of co-operation, and bankers, striving, as do also those engaged in other lines of business, to prevent losses where possible, and quick to realize the real value of that lesson, have since that time applied this principle of co-operation with great success to the affairs of such of their customers as through unforeseen circumstances have experienced difficulty in maintaining their credit when it has been assailed.

Instead of continuing to follow the old-time method of throwing such creditors into bankruptcy and getting a mere pittance on their claims—where conditions are such that they are justified in so doing, the bank and other creditors now form creditors' committees to manage the affairs of the disabled concerns, thereby very often through such harmony of action restoring the affairs of those concerns to a normal basis, thus averting their failure and consequent loss to the banks and other creditors.

The application of this principle of co-operation by the banks as a means of protection, both to themselves and their customers, thus conserving the assets and oftentimes the integrity of both, by preventing failures as well as contentions between the creditors of concerns whose solvency is questioned, has caused many to misconstrue the real motives involved and apply the term "Trust" to this harmony of action which is always prompted, so far as I know and believe, by the highest motives born of a sense of fairness and justice and reflecting a desire on the part of the bankers to conserve and upbuild rather than to tear down and destroy.

The fact that 95 per cent. of the business of this country is done upon credit, and that the use of actual money in transactions has been reduced to the minimum, makes it very easy for people who do not properly discriminate between credit and money itself to become confused in the application of the terms; and especially is this likely to be the case with those who have given so little study to the subject that they look upon a bank as being an institution dealing in money, whereas, in reality a bank deals in credit, and the money it carries in its vaults is only an incident to its business, being carred only in an amount sufficient under the law of averages to make it possible for the bank to pay its obligations upon demand under normal conditions.

This confusing of credit with money, as it is related to business, has caused much misapprehension on this subject and resulted in more or less honest criticism by those who do not realize that the "Money Power" as it is usually applied relates to the power or control of the credit which may be extended against either money or other tangible liquid assets easily or quickly convertible into money; and in view of the temper of the people toward large aggregations of capital, it is not surprising that there has also arisen much confusion and misconception through the use of the words "Money Power" and "Money Trust." Oftentimes, where quotations of alleged statements are made, the word "Trust" is, either through confusion or arbitrarily, substituted for the word "Power," making it appear as "Money Trust," thereby changing the meaning of the statement as it was originally made.

I disclaim any knowledge, to say nothing of any connection with any "Money Trust" of any character, and I feel I would be derelict in my duty if I were not to say to you that I do not believe any such trust exists.

I feel this class of citizen has an erroneous opinion concerning banks, their business, their earnings and their relations to the public. In the first place, any condition which adversely affects the public must react detrimentally on the volume of the business done by the banks, thereby reducing their earnings.

Reverting to the criticisms of the banks during 1907 for their failure to pay money against the balances shown upon their books, I sometimes wonder if the public realizes that those balances were to the extent of 95 per cent. made up of items of credit and not money. I wonder, too, if the depositing public takes into consideration the fact that when the bank cannot pay its deposits on demand, it is only because it cannot realize on its credits extended to the borrowing public. Two men may be neighbors, one is a depositor of $1,000 in the bank, the other a borrower of a thousand dollars from it. If the borrower will pay the note when demand is made upon him to do so, the bank will also be in a position to pay the depositor the amount of his balance. Therefore, in times of panic the reason that banks cannot pay the Depositing public their obligations on demand is because the Borrowing public cannot pay their obligations to them. Therefore, in criticising a condition of this kind the public should have their criticism attach either to the law which fails to apply the remedy or to the borrowers of banks who are unable to pay their obligations in crises.

If a little more of the spirit of fairness were to be injected into a consideration and discussion of this subject, the masses of the people would be less inclined to hold prejudice against or criticise banks, for, after all, the banks are only the "warehouses" of the credits of the community and the credits they control are subject to the ebb and flow incident to the fluctuations in business.

In one breath a man will criticise the banks for not extending credit to the public in times of stress; in another he will criticise the bankers for violating the National Banking law by loaning money when to do so impairs their reserves, thereby showing an attitude of inconsistency which I am unable to reconcile.

I have heard more or less criticism of banks in this country upon the theory that the "Money Power" is in the hands of too few people.

Inasmuch as whatever control individuals may now have of our banking power comes to them under and by virtue of the National Banking law, as the result of a concentration of reserves in the central-reserve cities and through legitimate practices in the ordinary trend of business, and not, mark you, through any violation or evasion of the law on their part, would it not be far more becoming to criticise the law which forces this condition rather than to criticise the men who under the law have the condition forced upon them?

As one who has been accused of admitting that the "Money Power" under existing conditions, or the power to extend credit in times of crises, rests in the hands of a few bankers in this country whose institutions carry the surplus banking reserves, I have for three years past been making a plea to the people of this country to assist in securing legislation providing for a system of banking and currency, which, it is believed, will very materially decentralize the money power by placing it within the control of several thousand banks, rather than to have it literally controlled by the bankers in the central-reserve cities, as at present.

So far as I know and believe, the majority of the bankers in the central-reserve cities recognize the enormity of the responsibility which rests upon them under the existing law and would welcome any legislation that is just and fair which would both minimize this responsibility and free them from the unjust accusations that are constantly being made against them.

The banks of the country are the servants and not the masters of the people, and it is always to their advantage to serve the people provided conditions are such that they can do so without an infraction of the banking law.

We find a class of people referring to the financial institutions of this country as members of a "Money Trust" and "Lawbreakers," but, are not those depositors and intelligent business men who are in close relationship with the bankers, through daily business and personal contact and who have an insight into their methods of conducting the business affairs of their institutions, qualified to intelligently judge as to whether or not bankers are the criminals they are portrayed by some to be? Can you reconcile these accusations with the fact that the business of such institutions is constantly increasing, and very largely, too, through the good offices of their customers and depositors, who, recognizing the value of the service rendered and the treatment accorded them, try to induce their friends to transfer their accounts to the bank with which they do business?

In view of the good treatment extended by banks to that army of active, intelligent business men and citizens of this country who have been successful, I cannot but feel this acrimonious criticism of banks and their treatment of the public emanates from a decided minority of our people. Indeed, to those who have been most active in their efforts to encourage the enactment of currency legislation, one of the chief discouragements encountered has sprung from the fact that business men and individuals have been treated so considerately and well by the banks that they have not had a proper realization of the great necessity for currency legislation, and, therefore, have been more or less indifferently inclined toward it.

If the banks had failed to serve the public so satisfactorily or they had mistreated or attempted to take unfair advantage of their customers, do you think this great army of people would have been slow to make themselves heard; and in this event do you not think there would have been the greatest interest in and support by it of any movement which was calculated to bring about currency reform?

While I have heard much criticism of the policy of the management of banks in New York City during the panic days of 1907, which I know to be unfair and unjust, I regret to say that, on the other hand, I have seen but few expressions of commendation of the many examples of the self-sacrificing, noble and patriotic efforts made by many bankers of that city to allay the fear born of a disturbed public confidence and with a view of bringing order out of chaos, thus protecting our institutions at home and our integrity abroad—so aptly illustrating how quickly criticism will prevail and how tardy we often are in according justice to those who, by a close adherence to their fidelity to the welfare of the people, often sink personality and self-interest for the common good.

If the impending investigation can be divested of everything except an honest desire to find the cause of any unsatisfactory existing conditions, I believe it will result in good, for I feel confident it will be found that most of those conditions which have been the subject of criticism have been the outgrowth of the inadequacy of our system of banking and currency, and that bankers, in general, instead of entering into collusion with each other to control the money power for improper uses, are in fact only accepting such responsibilities as come to them naturally and by virtue of and under the law, and, furthermore, that they are striving to the best of their ability to render to the public a proper accounting of their stewardship.

I should like to say a few words upon what I regard as the duty of the banker, as well as the duty of the capital he controls, to the public, but since my views are so well known to you and the time at my disposal so brief, suffice it to say that we must, if we are free from cause for criticism, always have in mind the necessity for the practice of high ideals and the establishment of high standards in business, doing what we can to make the capital under our control do the greatest possible good in the upbuilding of our industrial and commercial enterprises; and in the extending of credit we should not ask: "Is the applicant a friend or an enemy," but rather we should determine as to whether or not the credit is wanted for legitimate purposes, and as to whether or not it will be properly secured and repaid at maturity.

I should like to refer to the money planks in the platforms of the three great political parties, but time and the fear of overtaxing your patience prevents. If, however, any of you can see anything in those planks to encourage bankers in an honest effort to help provide a proper system of banking and currency—a system which would correct the evils of the system under which we are forced to work—I should be glad to have you point it out.

The failure on the part of those prominent in shaping the policies of the great political parties, to inspire in the members of those parties a patriotic desire to consider this and other great national questions honestly and fairly, on their merits, without respect as to whether or not it will make or lose votes for their party candidates, is causing a great deal of industrial and social unrest. If the time and thought given by some to the promoting of class prejudice and hatred could be devoted by them to an effort to promote qualities of mind and heart that would reflect fair treatment, justice and equity, much of the contention which is now so prevalent would be dissipated.

Being more or less optimistic by nature and of a philosophical bent, and trying at all times to believe that what is, may ultimately result for the best, I see in these contentions and differences of opinion upon this and other questions, this lesson, viz.: the necessity for a careful study of all of our national questions with open, unprejudiced minds, in the hope that we may become factors in the creation of a public sentiment which will tend to insure their settlement along wise and just lines and result in the greatest good to the greatest number.

As bankers who have studied the philosophy of our business and think we know something of the laws of economics as applied to our organization of credit, we are impatient because others who are not students of this subject and whose activities and studies have been along other lines do not support our theories and recommendations with more readiness and enthusiasm, but I sometimes wonder if we, on the other hand, are any better equipped to consider and help determine other questions, such as the tariff, for instance, than our neighbors are to help solve the questions involved requiring the enactment of currency legislation. I very much doubt it, and I want to say that to my mind all these national problems that are becoming more frequent in number and more complex in character, if settled fairly, must be settled by the force of a public opinion that reflects a knowledge on the part of the masses of the intricacies of our Governmental policies as they relate to economics as applied in our business.

Believing, as I do, that open-minded, honest agitation of any question in which the public is interested, prompted by a laudable purpose and kept free from animus and prejudice, will tend to secure a proper solution of that question, I desire to disavow any antagonism for or opposition to the impending investigation of the so-called "Money Trust" by the House Banking and Currency Committee; on the contrary, I shall be glad to do what I can to co-operate with the members of that committee, so long as their activities are exerted along the lines of an honest endeavor calculated to promote better methods and higher ideals in business.

Inasmuch as under good business conditions all lines of industry are active and prosperous and labor is fully employed, and since the ramifications of business affect every class of our people, public agitation of any question which can seriously affect business and thereby minimize the measure of the prosperity of the masses should be prompted only by the highest motives, and public discussion of that subject should be along honest, honorable, conservative lines.

Good business conditions insuring the full employment of labor means the free use of capital and credit. The greater portion of the credit thus employed has its inception in and is backed by the various banks of the country.

and if these credits are stable our people must have confidence in our financial institutions which undertake to protect them.

Credit even when based upon a proper premise, is extremely sensitive, and anything which disturbs public confidence at once impairs the quantity as well as the usefulness of credit which so largely enters into our general prosperity.

The business of the banks and the prosperity of the masses are so intimately related through the use of credit that you cannot harm one without adversely affecting the other.

Therefore, everyone, no matter how great or small his business may be, should be interested in encouraging only such a plan of procedure in the investigation as will be required to determine the actual facts, keeping it free from prejudice or political bias, for any plan of procedure which would result in disturbing public confidence would affect our institution of credit and thereby carry its blighting effects into every home.

Every banker in his relation to the public welfare should be in sympathy and co-operate with every movement which is honestly calculated to improve public conditions, but, knowing as we do that our system of banking and currency makes no provisions for the protection of credit when public confidence is disturbed or impaired, we, as bankers, should not hesitate to direct the attention of the public to possible dangers to business that may be encountered if this investigation should at any time be shorn of an honesty of purpose born of a desire for improved conditions. In this event bankers should not be found lacking in the courage to discourage, or even resist, any movement created for the purpose of capitalizing any prejudice for the benefit of any political party or for the advantage of anyone.

I do not believe the bankers of the country will enter the slightest objection to the making of a comprehensive investigation of the banks by those charged by the House with that responsibility, so long as such investigation does not require them to disclose to the public the confidential relations existing between themselves and their customers, the divulgence of which might greatly embarrass the customer and thereby do serious injury to the banks. In my opinion the banks should, and I believe they would to the limit of their ability to do so, decline to make this information public.

If a banker can be forced to disclose a confidential relationship between his bank and its customer, it would require but a short step further to capitalize for the gratification of prejudice the confidences between the attorney and his client, as well as the secrets of the confessional.

I cannot believe a condition exists which can begin to justify such drastic treatment; no more do I believe Congress will take any action which would strike so directly at the personal rights and liberties of the people.

Since the laws enacted must be of a character to meet the approval of public opinion, and since bankers, as well as those engaged in other lines of business, must be governed by these laws, surely we, as bankers, who are so keenly interested in the discussion of this subject so vitally important to our welfare, cannot reasonably be criticised for honestly expressing our opinion upon it.

I do not mean to question the attitude toward this investigation of any of those who have any connection with the work, for, until I am shown to the contrary by their work, I shall be pleased to believe that their efforts will be prompted only by the highest motives born of an honest desire to improve public conditions and free from any desire on their part to needlessly annoy, much less harm our financial institutions, which are the very bulwarks of our national strength.

Achievements of the Trust Company Section During the Past Fifteen Years.

By Breckinridge Jones, President, Mississippi Valley Trust Company, St. Louis.

Fifteen years ago the title "trust company" was familiar to the American people, for it is said that some 500 institutions used it as a part of their name. As to what such a title meant, however, the people in general had a very vague idea. The words "trust company" had not become distinctive; they had been coupled with other words, as "Loan and Trust Company," "Life Insurance and Trust Company," etc. Some companies were in fact trust companies, but their names did not clearly indicate it to the public, e. g., Pennsylvania Company for Insuring Lives & Granting Annuities. A trust company was to the masses something unknown and mysterious, and, because not defined by the law, had been seized upon by certain of the unscrupulous to blazon abroad many promises of a get-rich-quick variety. In fact, according to the report of the National Monetary Commission, in 1894 there were only 228 companies that were real trust companies—all the rest were masqueraders. Some people argued that a "trust company" is a company with trust in it, and that trust, while a good word in itself, had grown to mean that the company using it must be trusted for everything without giving anything in return; others thought that it was synonomous with pool, combination in restraint of trade, or other term of denunciation used by the radical reformer and the political demagogue. By many it was considered the relation, if not an actual tentacle, of that ominous thing called an octopus. Even the best organized and most conservative trust company was marked with an interrogation point. Six years before, after great search, I had not been able to find in print fifty pages of general discussion of information as to trust companies.

To the younger men this may seem an overstatement of the facts, but there are those here to-day who will remember a paper presented at the first meeting of this Section, just fifteen years ago, by Mr. Ralph Stone, then Trust Officer of the Michigan Trust Company, of Grand Rapids, and now one of the most competent financial leaders of this most progressive city. He said:

"During the collection of the material for the paper, an incident occurred which may be worth relating. In response to a request addressed to the Secretary of State for each State, for a certified copy of the laws relating to trust comanies, about half a dozen secretaries transmitted copies of the laws regulating, restricting, or prohibiting pools, trusts, unlawful combination, and conspiracies in restraint of trade. The copies of these laws were returned with an explanation that it was the statutes relating to trust companies which act as trustee, executor, etc., which we desired. In one case, the Attorney-General, to whom the letter was referred, replied that he regretted misreading the first letter on the subject, but that after a thorough search, he was convinced that there were no statutes of his State relating to trust companies, and that, as far as he could learn, there were no trust companies doing business in his State, except the Standard Oil Company."

If the men who had risen to the positions of Secretary of State and Attorney-General could be so befogged, what could be expected from the public?

Many—I believe it might be said a majority—of the banks in the large cities where trust companies were generally operating, did not fully understand the functions of a trust company and looked on that institution with suspicion and as an unworthy rival. How could they do otherwise, when the name was constantly surrounded by the smoke of ignorance? There were educated bankers, however, who realized that the trust company was not so much a rival of the banks as it was the banks' outgrowth or corollary—a co-ordinate branch of finance. They remembered that the reason the first trust company was formed in New York in 1822 was because banks could not attend to certain business outside of the City of New York; that if the banks could have done so, what is now the Farmers Loan & Trust Company, of New York City, might never have been started. It was realized by the financial student that our development to a certain point could be easily handled by the bank, but that, with the marvelous develoment of our country, the density of population, and the aggregations of wealth, came a demand for a more elastic financial institution in order efficiently to meet the requirements of a more complex community. The trust company, a conservator of capital, to work hand in hand with the bank, the creator of capital, was the invention of American genius, and this desipte the fact that the Roman, Argentarius, as an individual, exercised some of the functions of a trust company.

This antagonism on the part of the banks was reflected in the legislatures of several States, evidenced at every session by bills to restrict the powers of trust companies in States where those powers were broad and by faction opposition to bills giving ample powers in States where additional legislation was needed. Many of these conflicts were acrimonious—all were serious.

Intelligent men, both bankers and trust company officials, appreciated the situation, and what might have grown into a wall of flame—a permanent antagonism between the banks and trust companies—was smothered out it was a tiny blaze. It became apparent that, both for the purpose of protection and in order to educate the public, companies doing legitimate trust company business should have a national organization. Many advocated organizing an association composed exclusively of trust companies, but as there was already in existence the American Bankers' Association, of which a number of trust companies were already members, others thought it wise to clasp hands and work with it. One year before this Section was formed an application was made to the Executive Council of the parent body to recommend changing the by-laws so as to provide for a Trust Company Section. The argument was made that there was no precedent in the Association for such action, and that if such a Section were formed it would result in unifying the strength of the trust companies and produce a factional strife. The application was not granted.

So, the year following, after some correspondence with prominent trust company men, and without any commitment on the part of the parent body, there was delegated to me the privilege of sending out the call for the meeting of trust companies, to be held in St Louis at the same time as the National Convention of the American Bankers' Association. The purpose of this meeting was to discuss the organization of a Trust Company Section of the American Bankers' Association, and the call was signed by fifteen trust companies, representing eight separate States, as follows:

Boston—Old Colony Trust Co., by T. Jefferson Coolidge, Jr., President.

New York—Continental Trust Co. of the City of New York, by Otto T. Bannard, President; United States Mortgage & Trust Co., by G. W. Young, President.

Brooklyn—Franklin Trust Co., by Geo. H. Southard, President.

Chicago—The Northern Trust Co. Bank, by Arthur Heurtley, Secretary; Security Title & Trust Co., by Peter Dudley, Trust Officer; Title Guarantee & Trust Co., by Frank H. Sellers, Trust Officer.

Indianapolis—The Union Trust Co., by John H. Holliday, President.

St. Louis—Mississippi Valley Trust Co., by Breckinridge Jones, Second Vice-President; St. Louis Trust Co., by John D. Filley, Secretary; Union Trust Co., of St. Louis, by C. Tompkins, Treasurer; Lincoln Trust Co., by A. A. B. Woerheide, Secretary.

Louisville—Columbia Finance & Trust Co., by Atilla Cox, President; Fidelity Trust & Safety Vault Co., by John Stites, Vice-President.

Denver—The International Trust Co., by F. B. Gibson, Secretary.

When this meeting was called to order on September 22, 1896, there were present seventeen trust company officials from ten different States. After a thorough discussion of problems which, due to the influence of this Section, are now matters of history, through the aid of the talented Joseph C. Hendrix, who was Chairman of the Executive Council, the Trust Company Section was formed.

Just fifteen years ago in this City of Detroit, in the Turkish Room of the Hotel Cadillac, the first meeting of trust companies, as a Section of the American Bankers' Association, was held. Then it was that the mist of ignorance and uncertainty concerning trust companies began to disappear.

It may be of interest here to record that, in appreciation of Mr. Hendrix's acting as doctor at the borning, when a memorable struggle came up at that meeting here in Detroit between George H. Russel, of this city, and Jos. Hendrix, as representing the progressive element as against the "Old Guard," as they plumed themselves, led by Mr. Hahn and Mr. Tracy, it was the solid support of this Section that turned the tide, made Russel President that year, and led to Hendrix being President the following year.

At that first meeting, I was called on to present the needs of the trust companies of the United States, and from the records of that meeting I find that it was suggested:

First. That the Section should see that no company used the words "trust company" unless it did a legitimate trust company business.

Second. That the Section should use its best efforts to bring about a greater uniformity in laws relating to trust companies. (This meant that in many States we should see that some kind of a trust company statute be enacted.)

Third. That the Section have some publication make a compilation of trust company laws of all the States.

Fourth. That the Section try to induce some of the banking journals to publish the papers read at the meetings, and to devote some space to questions of special interest to trust companies. In short, the effort was to lay the foundation for a recognized literature, and standardize the business, and promote the acquaintance and social intercourse among trust company men.

To the trust company man of to-day, this very mention of what the Section thought it should accomplish, shows what the Section has really accomplished in fifteen years. From time to time at the meetings of the Section, papers have been read, published in the records, and in many instances issued in pamphlet form and widely distributed. These papers have covered the general field of trust company activity, and furnish an invaluable library of trust company literature, accessible alike to those in and out of the business, and will endure as an ever fresh Pierian Spring to those thirsty for trust company information. Students are continuously scanning the pages of these records, and several enterprising writers have in effect digested parts of them, and worked the results, along with other matter, into excellent books relating exclusively to trust companies. The cry of "no literature" has been met.

When one examines the various banking journals of the present, it seems strange that there was ever a time when no space was devoted to trust company news. The present day condition also shows the very important position the trust company has come to take in the financial world, for besides being given space in nearly every banking journal, it also has a journal, "The Trust Companies Magazine," published monthly, and devoted exclusively to trust company matters. When a compilation of trust company laws was first suggested, there had not developed sufficient esprit de corps for us to do this work ourselves. None of us I think realized how capable and strong an association had been brought into being. As it is, the Section itself has published a compilation of trust company laws, and has gone a step further and compiled a book of trust company forms. In fact, the third and fourth needs of the Section, as presented fifteen years ago, have fully been met to the present time, and of course will be taken care of in the light of changes demanded from time to time.

How great progress has been made under the supervision of this Section as to the use of the words "trust company," and the enactment of laws governing trust companies in the various States, is established by the fact that at the time of the first meeting here in Detroit there were thirty States which had no laws specifically governing trust companies. Such institutions as used the name had come into existence under special charters, or under general banking laws; and if they were created under general banking laws, it meant as a rule that they were only banks of discount and deposit, could not exercise trust company functions, and were trust companies in name only. To-day the situation is greatly changed. According to the Digest of the State Banking Statutes, compiled by Samuel A. Welldon for the National Monetary Commission, there are only ten States that now have no separate laws governing trust companies. They are: Arizona, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Nebraska, Nevada, North Carolina, Oregon, South Carolina and Tennessee, and there are trust companies in each of them. In six other States, namely, Idaho, Iowa, Mississippi, Rhode Island, Utah and West Virginia, the trust company laws are all too brief. Louisiana has trust company legislation, but it seems to be so commingled with the laws concerning banks, that it is difficult to know exactly what is meant. However, counting both the States that have no separate legislation and those with laws that are too brief, we have only a total of seventeen, which means that in the fifteen years of our existence thirteen States have been influenced to enact trust company laws.

In this connection, it is also interesting to note that to-day in only seven States are no reports required from such trust companies as may be organized. They are: Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, Florida, Louisiana, Nebraska and Tennessee. And in only nine States are no examinations by State officials required, namely, Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, Nebraska, Tennessee and Virginia.

In many jurisdictions, but by no means all, to-day the unwarranted use of the words "trust company" is punished under the criminal laws, and in this way the public is protected.

The functions of a bank as a corporation have been known to the world since the middle ages, but the functions of a trust company as a corporation have developed in a popular way in comparatively recent years. To this Section has fallen the duty of standardizing the trust company. The development has been so rapid that there has been a great deal of work to do, and there is still much to do, not only in finishing the cure of old ills, but in meeting those incident to new conditions.

The tendency of all the work of the Section is towards establishing and maintaining a standard. One of its latest efforts towards that end is a draft of what is to be proposed as a model trust company law, drawn under the direction of our Protective Committee. It is my understanding that it is the purpose of this draft to furnish a standard to which a State making trust company laws can refer. In its effect it will be educational, and will define what this Section means by the words "trust company." For this reason, in my judgment, too great attention cannot be given to its consideration and care must be exercised that it does not impair the elasticity of the trust company to suitably adjust itself to the varying conditions in the different sections of the country. Especially should it guard against any provision that will tend to make the trust company disclose its individual trusts or fix the trusts it will accept. Whenever the trust company becomes crystallized, its ability to respond to new conditions will be impaired. Care should be taken to put on committees for such work only those experienced in the practical everyday work of a trust company.

Before the Section was organized there was but slight personal acquaintance among trust company men, and hence no opportunity for the pleasures of social intercourse or the advantages of unity of action. What change in that regard has taken place under the influence of the Section is evidenced by the large attendance at our meetings. In 1911 it was thought wise to have a national gathering of trust companies at a banquet in New York City, and in response to the call over 1,000 men were present. This was such an enjoyable gathering that it was repeated this year, and again there were over 1,000 at the banquet table. I but voice the sentiment of all who attend these meetings, when I say that these gatherings are full of sweet pleasures and cherished memories. For myself, I can say that in all my business life no associations have given me greater honor or been more fruitful of charming companionships.

MEMBERSHIP BY YEARS, SINCE FORMATION OF THE SECTION IN 1896 WITH 17 MEMBERS.

1901— 348;	1902— 414;	1903— 501;	1904— 566;
1905— 638;	1906— 718;	1907— 846;	1908— 931;
1909— 981;	1910—1007;	1911—1137;	1912—1206.

According to the last reports of the Comptroller of the Currency of the United States, there were 1,251 trust companies. From these figures it would seem that nearly all the trust companies of the United States are members of this Section. However, according to the annual volume entitled "Trust Companies of the United States," published by the United States Mortgage & Trust Company, of New York, on June 30, 1911, there were 1,616 companies claimed as trust companies in this country; but even taking these figures, it shows that the growth of the Section has kept full pace with the growth of the country. This marked difference in number, as given by two such recognized authorities, shows that there is still great laxity in the use of the name.

The following table giving the figures compiled for the National Monetary Commission from 1879, the first year for which it seems to have been able to get anything definite, to and including 1909, and giving the figures taken from the last report of the Comptroller of the Currency of the United States, shows the comparative development of classes of financial institutions:

National Banks..	2048	2625	3239	3770	3583	5331	6893	7331
State Banks.....	813	1017	2097	3705	4253	6984	11292	12864
Trust Companies.	37	44	63	228	276	924	1079	1251

From this it is to be noted that thirty-three years ago, while there were 2,048 national banks and 813 State banks, there were in this country, or in fact in the world, only thirty-seven trust companies. In 1894, seventeen years ago, there were 3,770 national banks and 3,705 State banks, and only 228 trust companies. From that time to the end of 1911, during the period of the existence of this Section, there has been an increase in national banks of 3,561, or 94 per cent.; in State banks of 9,159, or 247 per cent., and in trust companies an increase of 1,023, or 448 per cent. The ratio of increase in trust companies has been far greater than in either of the other two kinds of financial institutions, and this while not only the laws governing them, but the ideas concerning them, have been in uncrystallized form. Whether this increase has been because of or in spite of this want of crystallization, furnishes an interesting inquiry.

It will be remembered that in the first draft of the plan for proposed monetary legislation, the Monetary Commission omitted any provision for trust companies, but, due to the influence of this Section, and the prompt protest from its members, in the later drafts of the plan and the bill reported by the commission to Congress, trust companies were given their proper place. In fact, it was due to the initiative of trust company men that State banks also received their requisite amount of attention in the bill.

That the precedent of forming this Section was not bad for the parent association, is shown by the subsequent birth of the Savings Bank Section and the Clearing House Section. It is believed by many that the formation of these sections has been one of the prime causes of the unexampled growth of the American Bankers' Association.

The fear expressed originally in the Executive Council that the formation of this Section would lead to factional differences has proved to be unfounded. No longer do you find the banks at the legislatures fighting trust companies. Each now recognizes the right of the other to exist. Under the by-laws of the parent association, this Section is entitled to adequate representation on the Executive Council, and the opportunity for factional differences is thereby avoided. From time to time there will be those contests that are the fruit of competition—always active, but generally wholesome. Sometimes this competition will be vicious and intemperate, but until the millennium such things will be, and in banking as in other lines must be adjusted from time to time as best they may be.

So it is seen what wonderful progress has been made by this Section towards attaining the objects set forth at its first meeting, and the Section should go ahead in its efforts until the very words "trust company," wherever seen, will be synonomous with trustworthiness.

As evidence of the harmony that exists between banks and trust companies to-day, we have the fact that in those States where trust companies receive deposits and conduct business of such a nature that membership in the clearing house associations is of value, they are admitted to the associations in nearly all instances, on the same terms as banks, the general rule being that they are not required to carry as large a reserve, especially against their savings deposits. In the preparation of this paper, I wrote letters to the managers of clearing house associations in 63 of the large cities of the country. In this letter I asked for the name of the first trust company that became a member of the respective clearing houess and the date of its admission; also for the names of trust companies that were members of the clearing houses in 1912, with the dates of admission; and I also inquired if there were any differences in the regulations covering the admission of trust companies and banks. I received fifty-two replies.

Prior to 1890 there seems to have been no trust company a member of any clearing house association, except in Chicago. In that city the Merchants Savings, Loan & Trust Company became a member in 1865, and the Union Trust Company in 1872. In the majority of States, membership of trust companies in the clearing house associations is more recent than 1900. No difference in the requirements for membership between trust companies and banks was reported, except in St. Louis, New York and Philadelphia, and the difference in these cities only relate to the reserve fund required. The following clearing house associations report no trust companies as members:

Atlanta, Ga.	Duluth, Minn.
Augusta, Ga.	Des Moines, Ia.
Boston, Mass.	Houston, Tex.
Baltimore, Md.	Los Angeles, Calif.
Bloomington, Ill.	Milwaukee, Wis.
Cleveland, O.	Minneapolis, Minn.
Charleston, S. C.	Pittsburgh, Pa.
Denver, Colo.	St. Paul, Minn.
Detroit, Mich.	Washington, D. C.

In many cases the replies stated that, due to the law, or the business transacted, such membership would not be profitable for trust companies, and they had never asked to enter, indicating, however, that if for any reason trust companies should wish to enter, there would be no objection.

I also wrote letters to the Banking Departments of the forty-eight States, but did not receive replies from the following fifteen: Arizona, Arkansas, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, Nebraska, North Carolina, Rhode Island, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee and Wyoming. It is to be noted that of these fifteen States not replying, ten are States in which banking supervision is not complete, and doubtless on account of lack of adequate reports, there was nothing they could say. It is perhaps true also that the other States from which replies were not received had no records to which they could refer. In this letter I asked the number of trust companies doing business in the State on January 1, 1897, the number on January 1, 1912, and the aggregate capital, surplus and profits and deposits on those dates. I also inquired if there had been any failures of trust companies, and if so, whether the depositors were paid in full. Especially I asked as to whether any trust estates in charge of any trust company that had failed had lost anything by such failure, and if so, how much.

Of the thirty-three States from which replies were received, only nine could give the information asked for both the years 1897 and 1912. However, twenty-one of the States could give the information for the year 1912, showing how great the improvement in trust company supervision was during the fifteen years that this Section has been in existence. These twenty-one States, on January 1, 1912, had a total of 1,063 trust companies, with a total capital, surplus and profits of $848,397,935.60, total deposits of $3,320,497,805.19. Four other States gave information for 1912, but it was incomplete.

For purposes of comparison, it will be necessary that we take the nine States that could give complete information of both years. They are: Connecticut, Illinois, Maine, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Montana, New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania.

	1887	1912.	Gain.	% of Gain.
No. of trust companies.	241	657	416	172+
Aggregate capital, surplus and profits.	$191,251,684	$698,276,784	$507,025,099	265+
Aggregate deposits....	$584,008,422	$2,799,100,047	$2,215,091,624	379+

In considering this table, it must be remembered that it gives the growth in only nine States; but, as the entire twenty-one States which gave figures for trust companies on January 1, 1912, had aggregate capital, surplus and profits of $848,397,935.60, with aggregate deposits of $3,320,497,805.19, and of these amounts the nine States had aggregate capital, surplus and profits of $698,276,784.82, with aggregate deposits of $2,799,100,047.05, it is clear that of the total 1,063 trust companies in the twenty-one States from which data could be obtained, these nine States must contain the largest and best developed trust companies. This would seem to indicate that where supervision has been the most complete, trust companies have developed most rapidly. For this reason, it would seem that this table is a fair index of trust company growth, which from every standpoint has been most remarkable.

However, it is when we consider the list of failures of financial institutions that trust companies show up best. According to Bradstreet's, during the fifteen years that this Section has been in existence, from 1897 through 1911, the failures among "loan and trust companies" have been seventy-one.

The next class of institutions are the savings banks, which during the same period had seventy-seven failures, while the national banks had one hundred and thirty failures, State banks two hundred and seventy-nine failures, and private banks four hundred and twenty-four failures. This enumeration of course does not show the number of companies that, after closing their doors, resumed operations; but, from common knowledge, it is safe to say that probably more trust companies commenced business again than any other class of financial institutions.

The replies to my inquiries received from thirty-three States showed that in fourteen States thirty-eight failures had occurred, as follows:

Kansas,	1.	Loan Credit Trust Company, Wichita	1908
Maine,	4.	American Banking & Trust Company, Auburn	1896
		Northern Banking Company, Portland	1897
		Oxford County Loan Association, South Paris	1898
		Waterville Trust Company, Waterville	1899
Massachusetts,	3.	Suffolk Trust Company, Boston	1891
		Taunton Safe Deposit & Trust Company, Taunton	1904
		Union Trust Company, Boston	1904
Minnesota,	6.	American Loan & Trust Company, Duluth	1894
		Duluth Trust Company, Duluth	1900
		Northern Trust Company, Minneapolis	1896
		Metropolitan Trust Company, Minneapolis	1900
		Minnesota Title, Insurance & Trust Company, Minneapolis	1907
		St. Paul Trust Company, St. Paul	1884
		(The language of this reply from Minnesota stated that six trust companies had "discontinued," but as my question was as to "failures," I take it to mean that.)
Missouri,	2.	Bankers Trust Company, Kansas City	1907
		Mo. Lincoln Trust Company
Montana,	1.	First Trust & Savings Bank, Billings
New Hampshire,	1.	(Name not given in reply.)
New Jersey,	1.	Monmouth Trust & Safe Deposit Company, Asbury Park
New York,	10.	National Trust Company, New York City	1877
		American Loan & Trust Company, New York City	1891
		Merchants Trust Company, New York City	1905
		Holland Trust Company, New York City	1906
		Knickerbocker Trust Company, New York City (resumed)	1907
		International Trust Company, New York City	1907
		Lafayette Trust Company, Brooklyn	1908
		(This company took over the Jenkins Trust Company, which failed in 1907.)
		Williamsburgh Trust Company, Brooklyn	1911
		Binghamton Trust Company, Binghamton	1911
		Carnegie Turst Company, New York City	1911
Ohio,	3.	Guaranty Savings Bank & Trust Company, Mt. Vernon	1911
		Metropolitan Bank & Trust Company, Cincinnati	1911
		Columbus Savings & Trust Company, Columbus	1912
Oklahoma,	4.	(Names not given in reply.)
Oregon,	1.	American Bank & Trust Company, Portland	1911
		Northern Banking Company, Portland	1897
Texas,	1.	(Name not given in reply.)

The remaining nineteen States either reported no failures, or no failures since the Banking Department had been established.

Of these thirty-eight failed trust companies, ten had paid all depositors in full. The Carnegie Trust Company, of New York, up to the time of the answer to my inquiry, had paid only twenty-five per cent. to depositors, though it was stated that liquidation was not complete; and it was estimated that the California Safe Deposit & Trust Company, of San Francisco, would pay from twenty-five to forty per cent.; up to this time it has actually paid only ten per cent. These are the greatest losses to depositors reported. Next after these, in the percentage paid depositors, come the Suffolk Trust Company, of Boston, with thirty-eight per cent.; Bankers Trust Company, of Kansas City, Missouri, with forty-three per cent.; Lafayette Trust Company, of Brooklyn, New York, with fifty per cent., and the liquidation not yet completed; First Trust & Savings Bank, of Billings, Montana, with sixty-five per cent. estimated; Monmouth Trust & Safe Deposit Company, of Asbury Park, New Jersey, with sixty-five and one-fourth per cent.; Binghamton Trust Company, of Binghamton, New York, with seventy per cent., and the liquidation not yet completed; Taunton Safe Deposit & Trust Company, of Taunton, Massachusetts, with seventy-five per cent.; American Bank & Trust Company, of Portland, Oregon, with seventy-five per cent.; Waterville Trust Company, of Waterville, Maine, with eighty-five and ninety per cent. estimated; Minnesota Title Insurance & Trust Company, of Minneapolis, Minnesota, ninety per cent., and the liquidation not yet completed.

This record of trust companies in relation to their depositors covers a period of fifteen years, and the fact that out of 1063, the total number of trust companies existing in the States from which the data was obtained, only thirty-eight have failed, is in itself a certificate as to their high character.

However, the trust company has matters entrusted to it of a more sacred nature than are given to the charge of any other corporation. It is its province to act for a man after he is dead; it is charged with the responsibility of seeing that the man's family is provided for to the full extent of the property he leaves; or, it might be that during his lifetime, some one needs a faithful trustee and has chosen a trust comapny. Has it been faithful to the trust imposed? Its record speaks for itself, and shows beyond the possibility of dispute that the trust company has been a much more faithful steward than the individual.

In only three out of the thirty-eight failed trust companies has there ever occurred any loss to trust estates entrusted to them, and at this writing in only one instance is it certain that there will eventually be a loss. My reply from New Jersey says that in the failure of the Monmouth Trust Company, of Asbury Park, the loss to trust estates has been $1,994—surely not a very serious matter. The loss to trust estates, if any, in the failure of the California Safe Deposit & Trust Company has not been fully determined, while in the case of the Carnegie Trust Company, of New York City, ten per cent. of all claims has been held by the State Banking Deaprtment, as Liquidating Agent, pending a decision of the court as to preferred claims. It is stated that if the court holds that trust funds are preferred claims, there is sufficient on hand to pay off all such claims in full. I did not receive a reply to my inquiry from the State of Kentucky, but through other sources I have heard that in the failure of the small trust company in Owensboro there was a loss to trust funds, but the loss was comparatively small. My inquiry in this matter has been sufficiently diligent to justify the statement that, with the exception of these four instances, no trust fund coming into the charge of a trust company in this country has ever lost one cent. This is particularly remarkable when it is remembered that it is estimated that trust companies in this country have in their charge aggregate trust funds, including corporate trusts, of thirty billion dollars. This is one-fourth of the aggregate estimated wealth of the United States, and more than the combined banking power of all banks, national and State, which is reported by the Comptroller of the Currency as amounting to twenty-one billion dollars. In addition to this, exclusive of trusts, according to the same report of the Comptroller of the Currency, trust companies represent twenty-five per cent. of the total banking power of this country.

There is no reason that there should ever be any loss to trust funds coming into the charge of a trust company. It is a principle of law that when a trust fund can be traced, it will be held intact for the beneficiary of the trust, and the Trust Department of every trust company should consider this principal of paramount importance. There should be a separate vault set aside, into which trust securities should be placed. Each trust estate should be kept entirely separate and its securities so marked as to be easily distinguished from all others; and in addition to this, a security register or some other written record should always be kept up to date, itemizing the securities that belong to each trust estate. By some such method, trust companies would be so guarded that in the event of such a calamity as closing the doors, there would be absolutely no question as to whether or not trust funds were a part of the general assets.

It was an old saying of the law that a corporation could not act as trustee, because it had no soul. The record of trust companies proves this maxim to be fiction. It can be truthfully said that a trust company has the composite soul of its Trust Estates Committee, of its Executive Committee, or its Board of Directors. Men directing a trust company, if doing their duty, cannot act in any other way than conscientiously. As a corporation, the law says that the trust company is a person and it has shown that it has a soul in spite of the law. However, unlike an individual it has no such largeness of personal liberty. This corporation is subject to an examination and supervision that would be resented by any other kind of person,—for do you know of any individual who would not indignantly refuse to allow an outsider to examine into his personal and private books to see if he were engaged in speculation, or if in reality he had all the cash he said he had? He would be insulted if the privilege were demanded of checking up all the securities in his possession to find out if there were any possibility of his trust funds being mingled with his personal funds. Such supervision he would consider an infringement of his personal liberty and a violation of his constitutional rights.

The trust company, however, is subjected to such an examination, but instead of resenting, welcomes it, for it desires anything that will in the least help to safeguard the interests it holds in sacred trust as executor, trustee, guardian, or in any other fiduciary capacity. In fact, the well-managed trust company not only has the conscientiousness and responsibility of the individual, but it has its freedom so restricted as unquestionably to make it far less liable than the individual to either dishonesty, error in judgment, or carelessness in management.

The subject assigned me has led into greater detail than I desired; but this seemed a fitting place for a resume of the standing of trust companies in the several States.

May this Section ever flourish. May its benign influence be widespread, and if its members will give back to it even a small return of what they secure from it, its continued existence will be assured.

Some Unscheduled Liabilities of Trust Companies.

By Harry M. Bates, Esq., Dean of the University of Michigan.

I wish, at the outset, to express my thanks for most helpful suggestions as to some of the legal problems arising in the performance of the duties of trust companies, and for information concerning the custom and practise regarding the matters with which I shall deal, toe the following gentlemen: Mr. F. H. Goff, of Cleveland; Mr. Ralph Stone, of Detroit; Mr. Louis Boisot, Mr. H. A. Dow and Mr. Horace S. Oakley, of Chicago; Mr. Stanley D. McGraw, Mr. Henry C. Swords and Mr. E. C. Hebbard, of New York.

The modern Trust Company, with its varied and highly developed functions, is a characteristic product of our present complex civilization. It meets the insistent economic demand for division of labor, specialized service, expert skill, fidelity and financial responsibility, without which many of the most important and most characteristic business undertakings of the present day could scarcely be carried on. The multiplying and ever refining needs of the business and industrial world have thrown upon this modern conception the performance of a vast number of diversified functions, but nevertheless, so skillfully has the organization been developed and made responsive to the dominant economic movements of the day, that unification rather than segregation of functions has resulted, with consequent increase in efficiency and decrease in cost of administration. The Trust Company, as someone has said, has become the corporation's corporation, a sort of super-corporation, as it were, an expression which may convey some meaning in these days when our literature is so full of the idea of the superman, living a life and performing functions just above and beyond those of ordinary human beings.

This I think is not mere glittering generality. The Trust Company cannot be classified with other corporations or business organizations, either from the point of view of the law pertaining to its creation and subsequent life, nor from that of its functions. This must be clear when we consider that trust companies perform functions heretofore distributed among banks, safe deposit companies and individual or corporate trustees, executors, escrow holders, title guarantors, and agent and fiduciaries of almost every conceivable kind.

The question then naturally arises, is there any law peculiar to Trust Companies? Have court decisions in conjunction with statutes resulted in a jurisprudence of Trust Companies? Or, to put a question not so compersuasively have the activities of these companies resulted in the enunciation of any peculiar and characteristic doctrine of law? If these questions are to receive a categorical answer, it must be "no." Trust Companies being corporations, are governed, of course, by the statutes of the State relating to corporations in general and to the Trust Company in particular and to those developments of the judge-made law pertaining to corporations. I have not been able to find a single decision by any English or American court which can be said to arise out of any peculiarity of the Trust Company per se. All of the litigation of which I am aware has been settled by the application of statutory law or by the doctrine of the common law relating to corporations, or more often to the particular function or activity involved in each case. The manifold and tremendously important activities of Trust Companies, then, have thus far only added to the development of the law relating to corporations, principal and agent, bailments, and other branches of the common law. In view of the magnitude of the operations of these companies, their failure to produce a new branch of law may seem somewhat surprising. It is due, first to the comparative novelty of this form of business organization, but largely, I think, to a certain toughness of English and American law, if not English and American lawyers, which resists change and novelty of classification. Our common law and our common lawyers are prone, and rightly so, to decide new cases according to old principles, and to find guidance for the determination of rights growing out of activities, in the rules laid down for older and analogous organizations. If this paper has any marked trend, it will be in the direction of inquiring whether this condition of things is likely to continue in the future, or whether we may not, in some respects at least, anticipate the enunciation of principles of law based, of course, upon the old, immutable principles of justice and equity, but arising out of new functions and new relationships created by Trust Companies, and peculiar thereto.

In undertaking to address you on this occasion my first plan was to consider a number of the transactions in which Trust Companies are engaged, principally in its capacities as transfer agent and registrar of corporate stock, and as Trustee under mortgages securing corporate bonds. I have, to a large extent, abandoned this plan, however, first, because I find there has been very little development of the law since other papers on this subject were read to you, and partly because the admirable report of the Stock Transfer Conference of Transfer Agents and Counsel has been recently published, and it discusses the important questions with which a transfer agent and registrar is obliged to deal, and contains a promise of fuller treatment with citations of authorities in a book shortly to be published. For me, then, to go over this ground would be superfluous, not to say presumptuous. I shall confine myself therefore to a brief consideration of the liability incurred by the Trust Company in its dealing with corporate stock in order to show what little development the decisions of the last few years have produced, and especially of seeking to find out the general trend of that development with a view to hazarding some opinion as to its probable future course and direction.

Let us then first inquire to what extent the liability of Trust Companies, acting as Transfer Agents and Registrars, has been established by statutes or decisions of the courts. Statutes afford almost no assistance in determining this liability, and court decisions on the subject are extremely few in number. This is a splendid tribute to the skill and fidelity with which Trust Companies have performed their delicate, important duties, but it makes it difficult to state with confidence or precision the nature and extent of the liabilities incurred. One is further embarrassed in the effort to make such a statement by the fact that there is lack of uniformity, and especially an almost complete lack of precision and definition in the contracts of employment of Transfer Agents and Registrars, and in the language used by such agents in certifying the performance of their duties. Authority for the employment of these agents is derived, of course, from resolutions of the directors of the corporations making such employment. So far as I have had opportunity to examine such resolutions, while they agree in general purport, they differ considerably in detail, and in defining the functions to be performed they are content as a rule to use only general terms, such as Registrar, Transfer Agent and the like. The method of procedure is sometimes stated, or at least implied, and provision is made for the filing of sample signatures of the corporate officers, and sometimes for the employment of counsel, designated and paid by the principal corporation, to pass upon new legal problems for the guidance and immunity of the Trust Company. No attempt has been made in any of the resolutions I have seen to define or limit the liability of the Trust Company either to its principal or to buyers and sellers of the corporate stock. The question of ultimate liability to third persons could not, of course, be determined by resolution or by contract between the principal and agent corporations. In 1907 Mr. Ralph Stone, of Detroit, published a valuable paper on this subject, in which he showed that at that time the Trust Companies of New York used at least seven different words or phrases to indicate the performance of their duties as registrar: "Registered," "entered," "countersigned" and "countersigned and registered" were those most commonly used in New York and elsewhere. So far as I have been able to learn, the same divergence in language still exists.

It has been said often in this Section that the relation between the corporation and its Transfer Agent or Registrar is that of principal and agent. Certainly that relationship exists, and out of it grow certain duties and liabilities, the general principles of which are fairly well settled, but, as has been said, the application by courts of their principles to specific cases have been very few in number.

As new cases arise, and as the function of the Trust Company, in this and other respects, become more fully developed and highly specialized, it is possible that new duties and liabilities will be recognized by the courts. What the nature of these possible new liabilities may be can be understood only by considering what those already established are. As the law stands to-day the general outlines of the relationship are fairly clear and simple. Any agent is liable to his principal if he fails to exercise that degree of skill in the performance of his duties which an ordinarily prudent and skillful man would exercise in looking after his own affairs in like matters. Unquestionably, however, it has come to be recognized that the Trust Company is and holds itself out to be especially skilled and expert in the performance of the duties in question. Compensation is doubtless based upon this understanding. It follows, then, that the Trust Company owes to its principal that high degree of care and skill which experts in such matters ordinarily exercise. This I admit is a generality which would be of little use to one not accustomed to applying general legal principles to specific cases. It certainly imports, however, that the Trust Company, acting in these capacities, shall employ trained and experienced clerks and officials, that they shall give to their work careful attention and shall have ample book and other office facilities for the performance of their duties. It further imports that the Trust Company's officials and employees shall understand and be governed by the law pertaining to the transactions in question, and this often involves the law of several States, that they shall take notice of all matters or facts appearing in the transactions, or otherwise brought to their notice in connection with such transactions, showing, or tending to show, as the result of settled law or practice, any rightful claim or liens or disabilities which destroy, restrict or limit the right of the seller to sell or the buyer to buy the stock in question. The Transfer Agent or Registrar would, of course, be liable in case its principal suffered damages by reason of the transfer or registration of an excessive issue of stock.

The courts have made a somewhat subtle distinction in classifying the liabilities of the agent with reference to third persons who, in the transactions we are considering, would usually be the owners or purchasers of stock. Even though the contract be exclusively between the corporation and the Trust Company, the Trust Company is nevertheless liable for all acts of misfeasance whereby third persons are injured.* For nonfeasance, by which is meant non-performance of its duties, the agent, generally speaking, is not liable.† The courts of New York have passed upon this very point as applied to transfers of stock. The attention of your Section has been called by others to the case of Dunham against the City Traction Company, decided by the Appellate Division 101 N. Y. S. 87. In that case the transfer agent was held not liable to a person entitled to a transfer of stock for the agent's delay in making such transfer, the court holding that there was no contract between the transfer agent and the stock purchaser, that the acts complained of amounted only to nonfeasance, and that the purchaser's only recourse was against the corporation itself. The clear inference from the opinion of the court is that the corporation itself could have been made to respond in damages to the plaintiff, though it was shown that the delay in making the transfer was due to the honest but erroneous belief of the transfer agent that as a matter of law the plaintiff was not entitled to receive a transfer of stock without certain steps which had not been taken. On this point a recent Iowa case is instructive: Dooley vs. The Consolidated Gold Mines Co., 109 N. W. 864. Assuming then that the principal was liable, did it have a remedy against its agent? The law is not settled on this point, but in my opinion the tendency will be to hold the agent liable to the principal on the ground that as an expert in the transfer of stock, his failure to know the law in connection therewith will not excuse him, but constitutes negligence. All this involves a delay of results with which there is just impatience. This case has since been confirmed by the Court of Appeals, 193 N. Y., 642. There are at least five other decisions to the same effect by inferior courts in New York. I do not, however, believe that it would be safe to assume that the courts of other States will always follow these decisions. In the Dunham and other recent cases in New York State, the decisions were made with very little discussion of the principles involved, but on the authority of much earlier New York cases, notably that of Denny against the Manhattan Co., 2 Denio, 115. The transactions involved in the transfer of stock in that case, and in all other cases of that time, was very different from the present method. The transfer was then made upon the books of the company, at its own office, by a clerk or official of the company. The reason for insisting that the injured party pursue his remedy only against the corporation and not against its employee in such cases was clear. It may be doubted if the same reason is fully applicable under modern conditions, but to this I wish to call more particular attention later.

In my opinion, Trust Companies should also take notice of the recent tendency in many of our State courts to limit the scope of this doctrine of nonfeasance. Thus, it has been held in many cases that where the agent undertakes the performance of an act, in which the rights or property of a third person are involved, if he then abandons the undertaking, or neglects to perform some part of it, or so delays his performance that the person is injured, the case is really one of misfeasance and not merely of nonfeasance. See for example Osborne against Morgan, 130 Mass., 102. It is not clear to me that the New York courts have been sufficiently impressed by this somewhat newer doctrine. To refuse to transfer corporate stock to one entitled to it repeatedly has been held to constitute conversion for which the corporation is liable. Some court may some day hold that if the agent takes the assigned old certificate preliminary to transfer, and then refuses to go on with the transfer, that he is liable directly to the injured person.

For a long time it was the well settled doctrine of the courts that suit could be brought for violation of a contract only by one of the parties to such contract. This is true in some States, notably in Massachusetts and Connecticut, but in most of our States this doctrine has been so modified that where a contract between two parties is made for the express benefit of a third party, such third party may sue the promisor. The law is in much confusion on this point, and with the present state of popular discontent with the administration of law and the probable general tendency of the courts, elsewhere referred to in this paper, it is not impossible that there may be an even further extension of the rights of third persons, not parties to the contract, but benefited by it, to sue on such contract. An illustration of what may happen is seen in the decisions of those courts permitting a resident of a city, which has contracted with a water company to furnish water for public use and for the private use of its citizens, to sue such water company for damages resulting through failure of the company to fulfill its contract. For example, where the citizen's house is destroyed by fire by reason of the failure of the water company to supply the agreed amount of pressure. In the case of the Guardian Trust Company against Fisher, 200 U. S. 57, the United States Supreme Court sustained a decision of the North Carolina Supreme Court enforcing such liability on the ground that the water company was performing a quasi-public or governmental function and was liable to a citizen injured by reason of its failure to supply the agreed amount of water pressure, but there have been several decisions in which such suit was allowed on the pure contract theory. They are not, in my opinion, sound as a matter of legal theory, but no one knows when the doctrine may become established in several of our States. See 3 Mich. Law Review, 442, 500.

Some courts seem to have gone to extreme lengths in requiring the corporation to ascertain at its peril whether the sale is legitimate and authorized, and on the other hand they have held the corporation to strict liability for honest but mistaken refusal to make the transfer. Instances of this type of the twin dangers, the Scylla and Charybdis, between which the transfer agent must steer its narrow and tortuous course, may be found in two recent cases. In Miller vs. Doran, 245 Ill. 200, decided in 1910, a corporation transferred the stock in question after a decree had been entered in pending litigation finding the ownership of said stock in such prospective transferee. The transfer was accordingly made. On appeal, however, the decree was reversed and the corporation was held liable to the person finally adjudged to be the rightful owner. On the other hand, in Mundt vs. Commercial National Bank, 99 Pacific Reporter, 454, it was held that the corporation cannot inquire into the motives which induced the transfer, nor question the consideration of such transfer. In O'Neill vs. the Wolcott Mining Co., 98 C. C. A. 309, a corporation was held liable for refusing to transfer stock, which refusal it based on the ground that the original certificate still stood on its books in the name of the original purchaser who some years before the attempted transfer had informed the company that he had lost some of his certificates, and instructed it not to transfer any of the stock represented without his consent.

The question as to whether a transfer agent is liable for transferring stock upon a forged assignment or certificate remains unsettled so far as I can ascertain. Of course the corporation itself is liable for the issuance of certificates forged or fraudulently issued by its own officers. Jarvis vs. The Manhattan Beach Co., 148 N. Y. 652, and Fifth Avenue Bank vs. Railway Company, 137 N. Y. 231, are cases of this type. But it does not follow from this that the transfer agent is liable for the same act where the forgery is not by any of its officers. Neither is there a sufficient analogy between the case of the transfer agent and that of the bank which cashes a check forged in the name of one of its depositors, and which is held absolutely liable therefor, to justify the application of the rule of the bankers' liability. The banker is rightly held to a knowledge of his depositor's signature. The transfer agent on the other hand has not the same means of knowing the shareholders' signature, and in the absence of actual negligence should perhaps not be held liable. I do not undertake to predict, however, how this question will be finally settled. The supposed analogy between strictly negotiable paper and corporate stock has been worked a little too hard. While there may be a tendency toward approximation in the legal characteristics of these two types of paper, the decisions of the courts, nevertheless, make clear that there are vital differences. For example: The vendor of corporate stock does not warrant its value. Rereton vs. Maryott, 21 N. Y., Esq. 123. In the case of Rothmiller vs. Stine, 143 N. Y. 581, it was said that the rule that one who sells commercial paper payable to bearer warrants that he has no knowledge of any facts which prove the paper to be worthless on account of the insolvency of the maker, does not apply to the sale of corporate stock so as to place the stockholder under any legal obligation to state the fact that the corporation is insolvent.

A few suggestions with reference to the report of the Stock Transfer Conference may not be amiss. These are not in supposed correction of, or addition to, that report, for which, as well as for the distinguished gentleman who participated in the conference, I have the most profound respect. On the contrary, they are to be taken only as growing out of some special experiences of my own, and as made with reference to the possible future tendencies of our courts, elsewhere referred to in this paper. It may not be presuming of me to say that this report contains an admirable statement of those powers so far as the disposition ofcorporate stock is concerned. Quite properly the report justifies the transfer of stock to or by an executor or administrator, when there are no facts which would put the corporation or its agent upon notice of any limitation of authority by the will or law or of paramount right of others as creditors, heirs or legatees which might restrict such right of alienation. It is precisely here, however, that it seems to me we may look for some change in the attitude of the courts. Our existing decisions go far in giving the executor the right to deal fully with the assets of his testator and in permitting third persons, without notice of restriction or limitation, to acquire good title to such assets, even where the executor has improperly sold them. How great latitude in this respect has been allowed may be seen in the case of Carter against Manufacturers' National Bank, 71 Maine 448, in which a bank had loaned money on a pledge, by an executor, of stock belonging to his testator's estate, the proceeds of which loan he converted to his own use. The bank was allowed, nevertheless, to retain title to such stock as against creditors and other claimants. The recent Mississippi case, Meyers vs. Martinez, 48 So. Rep. 291, is perhaps even more extreme. In that case an executrix fraudulently appropriated stock in a bank of which she was a director to the prejudice of creditors. The bank had permitted her to sell this stock, knowing of the pending administration, yet it was held that the bank had incurred no liability to the creditors. The doctrine thus exemplified is based upon conditions which no longer exist. In the first place, it was the early theory of the courts that the executor, being the confidential appointee of his testator, stood in the latter's shoes and could deal with his estate pretty much as the deceased himself might have done. With the developments of our modern probate law and the close scrutiny and supervision of the court over all of the executor's acts, this view of the executor's relationship to the estate and his power in connection with it is no longer tenable. In the second place, the great power allowed the executor was due to the opinion that he should be permitted to deal freely with the assets of the case and that purchasers should be able to buy freely in order that the best price might be obtained. The same developments of the functions and powers of the probate court with the power to authorize a sale at any time, and to require a bond, now enable the executor to give assurance of title to the purchaser in all cases where he has a right to sell. It will not be surprising, therefore, if the courts in the near future show a tendency to find that the purchaser from the executor is bound by the mere fact of the executorship to ascertain at his peril the extent and the limits of the executor's authority in each case, and the facts as to the payment or non-payment of taxes, debts and legacies. In other words, the present tendency, though not a marked one, is to restrict and limit the legal presumption that the executor is dealing lawfully. This possible increase of liability can be partially guarded against by insisting upon an order of court authorizing the sale or the taking of an indemnifying bond in most cases.

There is great danger in dealing with that portion of an estate which is covered by the residuary clause. Cases are not uncommon in which the residuum of an estate supposed at the time to be large, is given to the widow or other near relative of the deceased. Though large when the will was made, or even when the testator died, this residuum may shrink before the time of closing the estate. It may well be, and in many cases it has transpired, that property thus distributed or sold under the residuary clause turned out to be needed to pay debts or specific legacies. No transfer agent, therefore, should consent to the sale of stock sovered by a residuary clause of the will without an order of court, an indemnifying bond, or other protective measure, except, perhaps, in the clearest possible case of a sufficiency of assets.

This point may be considered in connection with questions I and VI of the Conference Report. In regard to transfers by guardians it seems to me that when it is feasible to do so, the transfer agent should require copies of the letters of authority to the guardian, and if the ward's estate be still under the control of the court, it should demand an order of court authorizing the transaction. I cannot but feel that it is dangerous for the transfer agent under these circumstances to rely upon the presumption that the guardian is acting lawfully and with authority. The courts are proverbially tender in the affairs of wardship, and the utmost care in dealing with guardians is advisable.

I have time for only a passing reference to a few matters concerning the liability of Trust Companies acting as trustees under mortgages securing corporate bonds. It is apparent that the practise during the last few years has tended toward a uniform and, it seems to me, a very wise refusal of Trust Companies to certify the character or quality of the bonds thus secured either as first mortgage, leasehold or of other types. But it is obvious that Trust Companies should have no connection with a bond issue in which the salient characteristics of the security are not clearly set forth on the face of the bond itself, together with referenec to the mortgage or trust instrument in which a complete and detailed statement of the security should, of course, be made. The purchaser should determine the character, quality and value of the security for himself; at least he should not look to the trustee for this information. The Trust Company has too many important functions to perform, and it owes too much to its stockholders and the various enterprises with which it is connected to subect itself to the uncertain and potentially enormous liability involved in certifying the character of securities. The liability of the trustee ought to be clearly and definitely set forth in the trust instrument. So far as the bond is concerned, the nearly universal practise now seems to be to make a simple statement like the following:

> "This is to certify that this is one of the bonds mentioned in the indenture within referred to."

As a matter of practice, however, Trust Companies pretty generally undertake for their own assurance and reputation many things not indicated by the foregoing, and there is unquestionably a strong disposition on the part of the investing public, at least in that class of non-professional investors known as outsiders, to infer that the connection of the Trust Company with an issue of secured paper is a sort of blanket guarantee that all is well. Unquestionably prominent Trust Companies are often selected to perform the function of Trustee for the very purpose of giving this general assurance facilitating the sale of the securities. This, in my judgment, makes the situation a dangerous one, for while the general popular belief cannot create legal liabilities, acquiescence in this custom and in this popular impression will tend to color the decisions of the court when questions of liability arise. It is highly important, therefore, that the liability of the Trustee be strictly defined and limited, and that by proper recitals in the bonds and Trust instruments notice of the limitations be brought home to investors. In this same connection the most scrupulous care should be exercised in the choice of words used in describing the securities. An illustration of what I mean is brought out in the following incident: A corporation recently borrowed a large sum on its own notes. This issue was carefully guarded by an instrument with the ordinary commercial safeguards. Acting on the advice of one of the most skillful examiners of corporate securities, the Trust Company requested to act in the premises refused to certify this issue of notes so long as the promises to pay were styled "debentures," on the theory that a debenture imported some kind of collateral and that to certify such notes as debentures might mislead the public. But after all the safeguarding of the Trustee in these transactions is a matter of individual consideration in each case, and few general rules of value can be laid down.

In the foregoing fragmentary discussion I have considered the liabilities of the Trust Company, especially when acting as Transfer Agent and Registrar, as circumscribed by the law of agency. I think it highly desirable for many reasons that the liability be so limited, but I can scarcely feel that I shall have shown the extent of my appreciation of the honor you have conferred upon me in asking me to address you, unless I point out certain tendencies which seem to me not unlikely to result in an actual extension of and addition to the liabilities incurred by the Transfer Agent and, to a less extent, by the Registrar. It might for the moment be more gratifying to you if I were to assert roundly that these liabilities can never transcend those of the ordinary agent, and that the only questions which can arise in the future are those involved in the application of the settled principles of agency to specific cases arising in the Trust Company's business. I cannot but feel, however, that there are many signs of the times and many currents of popular thought, and some almost casual not to say subconscious expressions of the courts themselves in cases involving Trust Companies, which portend possible changes in the law. And unpleasant and unpopular as it may be to bring these matters to your attention, it seems to me that this is the honest and perhaps the only service I can render to you on this occasion. It would be superfluous to do more than merely refer to the present intense popular dissatisfaction with the attitude and conduct of the profession which I am proud to represent here to-day, with our existing law, especially that concerning large business activities and with the administration of justice generally. In the nature of things the lawyer is, and ought to be, conservative. As Sir Frederick Pollock, the great English jurist, has said, "taught laws," by which he means in effect English and American law of to-day, "is tough law." It has resisted change, and has seriously retarded in some particulars legal reforms instituted by legislatures by applying the rule that statutes in derogation of the common law must be strictly construed. As a result we have been almost overwhelmed with a flood of criticism, some just and more of it unjust. And certainly, however unjust this criticism may be, I do not see how anyone can fail to realize that there has grown up among the American people a state of mind and an attitude, not wholly the work of demagogues, which is exerting and is sure for some time to continue to exert an increasingly powerful influence upon our legislatures and courts.

This wave of popular criticism, so far as it affects the law relating to Trust Companies, bears most heavily upon the supposed favoring of large business enterprises at the expense of the individual circuity of action, concerning which I have already spoken, and technical or arbitrary defenses. There is a strong feeling that too often the law considers the form rather than substance of things. Moreover, the recent development of the paternalistic attiude of government in the effort to have government protect the individual in every possible way, a tendency which certainly has its unfortunate results, whatever may be its effect as a whole, finds a corresponding tendency to insist that the individual be protected by somebody, even in his individual investments and business enterprises. In endeavoring to prove worthy of public confidence, and I suppose to increase business, Trust Companies have, perhaps, emphasized this tendency by doing a great many things in connection with their agencies and trusteeships, which are not strictly within the scope of such employment. With the courts yielding, perhaps, subconsciously to this popular demand for the protection of the individual as against the great corporate enterprises for directness of action as in permitting a suit against the agent, it would not be surprising if they were to permit the growing custom of Trust Companies to undertake these enlarged functions, to result in the establishment of legal liabilities not before attendant upon the functions in question. The case of the transfer agent affords the best illustration of this possible tendency. When the transfer of corporate stock was purely an internal affair, performed by the officer or employee of the company, the scope of the liability incurred was necessarily limited to the precise work of transferring the stock, but now the custom is well established to employ for this purpose an independent corporation with established reputation for skill, fidelity and financial responsibility. While this change may have been brought about mainly by the demands of the New York and other stock exchanges, there is no doubt that corporations are influenced to employ Trust Companies in this capacity for the purpose of inspiring confidence in the purchasers of stock, and the purchaser is thus led to feel that an impartial agency, one not controlled by the corporation itself, is passing, in a general way at least, upon the validity of the stock and its assignment. Is it not probable that there will grow out of this custom something more than mere agency? A corporation may employ a man with an established reputation for skill and honesty and do so partly for the purpose of increasing its business, yet here there results nothing but a case of agency. Impalpable though it may be, it seems to me nevertheless there is a clear distinction between such a case and that of a Trust Company in such a capacity. Unquestionably the public deals more freely in stock which is transferred and registered by such an agency than with one not so certified. A general feeling of security is induced and this fact is getting to be well known. Several years ago a case arose in New York which illustrates my point, and the decision of the case tends to confirm the existence of such a tendency as I have indicated. In McClure vs. Central Trust Company, 165 N. Y., 108, one Warner had sold his patent medicine business to an English corporation, in which he became the largest stockholder. Desiring to put his stock on the market in this country, he employed a firm of promoters. They issued a prospectus offering for sale certain shares of this stock, for which the purchasers were to receive certificates issued by the Central Trust Company as transfer agents. McClure, the plaintiff in this case, received such certificates from the Central Trust Company, but Warner being indebted to the English company, the latter refused to transfer his shares. The court held the Central Trust Company liable as a vendor upon an implied warranty of good title. I recognize that this is not a typical case, but the opinion of the court indicates appreciation of the fact that the transfer agent may easily put itself in a position with liabilities much greater than those of a mere agent. As I have before said, popular belief cannot create legal liabilities, nor can mere custom change established law, but in most of our States there is no established law relating to the status and liabilities of Trust Companies acting in certain capacities. Without saying that they would be justified in so doing or that this would be a scientific development of law, I believe that it is nevertheless true that some court or courts of last resort may, in the near future, hold for an enlarged liability of the kind indicated, perhaps that of an insurer, even upon the rather vague basis I have outlined. If they do, it will be because they recognize that the participation of a great Trust Company aids, and is often intended to aid in the sale of corporate stock, and they will say that out of this grows moral responsibility and legal liability.

Now I am very far from believing that this possible tendency is desirable. On the contrary because of the delicate and important functions it has to perform, because it has become such an essential part of our vast modern fabric of business, it seems to me that trust companies should not be allowed to incur this potentially varied and enormous liability. How can such liability be escaped should the courts manifest a tendency to impose it? I can add little, if anything, to what has been said by former speakers in arguing for legislation, uniformity of practice, avoidance of general terms in certificates and elsewhere, and the strict and explicit limitation of the functions undertaken and liabilities recognized.

The recent case of Davidge vs. Guardian Trust Company, 203 N. Y., 331, and the somewhat earlier case of Gause vs. Commonwealth Trust Company, 196 N. Y., 134, will show what legislation can accomplish. In this action the Court said: "The Legislature intended and the public interests demand that trust companies shall be confined, not only within the words, but also within the spirit of the statutory provision which declares that a corporation shall not possess or exercise any corporate powers not given by law or not necessary to the exercise of the powers so given. Such authority does not permit a trust company to enter into speculative and uncertain schemes, or, unless under peculiar circumstances not disclosed in this case, become the guarantor of the indebtedness or business of others." This permits the defense of ultra vires, one of great strategic value.

Something at least can be accomplished in agreeing upon the language of transfer and registration certificates. For example, it seems to me better that trust companies should sign "as registrar" or "as transfer agent." The use of the word as, though possibly superfluous, tends to bring out the limited character of the work performed. While I do not think that in the case of Jarvis vs. Manhattan Bank Co., 148 N. Y., 652, the court intended to attach the significance to the word "countersigned" which some writers have ascribed to it, still it seems to me it is a word to avoid because in the popular mind it is often taken as indicating a general authentication and guarantee of the instrument in question. For similar reasons perhaps the phrase "entered for registration" is to be preferred to the simple word "registered." The difficulty about all of these cases is that the statutes and the corporations themselves have assumed that certain general terms such as transfer agent, registrar and the like have definite meanings. This is not the case. Would it not be possible, and is it not desirable that these words should all be defined by law, at least in States in which there is much business of the kind we are considering, or that a precise, explicit delimitation of the functions performed be attached to every instrument involved. Just how this should be done, if it be feasible at all, it would be presuming in me to undertake to say. Finally, let me repeat that the possibile tendencies to which I have referred would certainly not be scientific legal developments; that the extension of liability, which I fear, is on almost every account undesirable and that if I have ventured to give expression to these half prophecies, it is because I have a keen appreciation of the vital importance to the business world and to all of us, of preserving the strength and integrity of this great modern commercial device which you gentlemen so ably represent, which you are conducting, with such fine appreciation of responsibility, and such great fidelity.

Committee Reports—Trust Company Section.

Report of the Executive Committee, by F. H. Goff, Chairman.

To the Members of the Trust Company Section of the American Bankers' Association:

The Trust Company Section was organized in 1896. Its first annual meeting was held in Detroit in 1897, fifteen years ago. The increase in the influence and importance of the section, to some extent, may be measured by the increase in membership. In 1897 there were 114 members, having combined resources of about $350,000,000. The membership on September 1 of this year was 1,251, with combined resources of approximately $4,500,000,000.

The work accomplished during the perilod has been noteworthy. The laws of the several States relating to Trust Companies have been collated and published; a complete set of approved trust company forms has been carefully compiled; the duties and liabilities of Trust Companies in acting as registrar and transfer agent, as trustee under corporate mortgages and in conducting a safe deposit department, have been studied and defined; a beginning, at least, has been made in standardizing the method of accounting; due to the efforts of the Protective Laws Committee, especially of its able chairman for many years, Mr. Lynn H. Dinkins, the use of the word "trust" in corporate titles has been protected by legislation in most of the States.

Tre development of Trust Companies throughout the country during this period is evidenced by the fact that in 1897 only nineteen of the then forty-nine States and Territories had passed general laws providing for the incorporation of Trust Companies; whereas to-day not only have such laws been passed, but strongly financed and prosperous Trust Companies are doing business in most, if not all, of the States.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee held at Briarcliff in May, the future work of the section was carefully considered. Among other things, your committee deemed it desirable that the work of the Protective Laws Committee be enlarged to secure the adoption, so far as possible, of laws by the several States providing for the supervision, regulation and control of Trust Companies acting in a fiduciary capacity, to the end that the interest of beneficiaries might be everywhere adequately safeguarded, and the high standard and good repute of Trust Companies maintained.

Having protected the use of the word "trust," it is believed that the duty of our organization should now be directed to securing the adoption of uniform laws properly safe-guarding the exercise of trust functions by corporate institutions.

A committee consisting of Oliver C. Fuller, Chairman, president of the Wisconsin Trust Company, Milwaukee, Wis.; A. A. Jackson, vice-president of the Girard Trust Company of Philadelphia, Pa., and Isaac H. Orr, trust officer, St. Louis Union Trust Company, St. Louis, Mo., was appointed to prepare and submit to this meeting recommendations looking to the accomplishment of such purpose.

Your committee also considered the advisability of endeavoring to make better known to the general public the advantages of corporate trusteeship, by a co-operative publicity campaign. It was ordered that this be assigned as one of the topics for general discussion at this meeting, and it is hoped that a full and free expression of views may be had.

Following the spring meeting of the Executive Committee, a noteworthy banquet, attended by Trust Company representatives from thirty-seven States, was given at the Waldorf-Astoria, under the auspices but not at the expense of the Trust Company Section. Able and interesting addresses were delivered by Hon. William J. Gaynor, Mayor of the City of New York; Hon. Simeon E. Baldwin, Governor of Connecticut, and Hon. Chauncey M. Depew, ex-Senator of the United States.

There was an increase of 114 in our membership during the past year. With the office accommodations and facilities now afforded, your committee believe that the value and efficiency of the work done by our secretary can be so increased that the advantages to be derived from membership will make it profitable for every Trust Company to join the association. The secretary's office is now equipped to compile and preserve for ready reference the statistics and information suggested in the report submitted by H. P. McIntosh, chairman, on behalf of the Executive Committee for 1908.

The work done during the year by the various standing and special committees will appear in reports to be presented by them.

Respectfully submitted,

F. H. Goff, Chairman.

Report of Committee on Protective Laws.

New Orleans, September 5, 1912.

To the Chairman and Members of the Trust Company Section:

During 1912 your committee has been active in its efforts to secure desired legislation in the twelve States whose General Assemblies were to hold sessions.

In Arizona, Georgia, Mississippi and South Carolina no Trust Company legislation was secured. The causes which prevented action in these States are quite beyond the control of this committee. It is believed, however, that substantial advance has been made in the matter of educating the bankers and legislators in those States concerning the desirability of proper State banking supervision.

Virginia has a law restricting the use of the word "Trust," and this year passed the association bill with regard to deposits in two names. The General Counsel of the Association succeeded in having a number of other desirable bills favorably reported from committees, but they were not acted upon by the House.

In Kentucky a Department of Banking was created. The act provides for the inspection and supervision of banks, regular reports and other desirable restrictions in connection with the transaction of banking and Trust Company business. Additional interesting legislation was enacted providing for the method to be followed in the consolidation of Trust Companies.

Rhode Island passed a law relative to penalties for false statement to obtain credit.

The only new legislation in New York in which Trust Companies are interested was an amendment to the law which provides of what money legal reserve must consist, an act to punish derogatory statements attacking banks, which will include Trust Companies, and a bill relating to false statement to obtain credit.

In New Jersey a bill to punish false statement to obtain credit was passed. Through the efforts of the publisher of "Trust Companies" and of Mr. U. H. McCarter of the Fidelity Trust Company of Newark, the committee has, it is believed, effectively broken up the practice of certain irresponsible parties in this State securing charters for so-called Trust Companies.

In Massachusetts an act was passed exempting from taxation shares in Massachusetts Trust Companies owned by Savings Banks, and Trust Companies are authorized to hold, for their own use, real estate owned by National Banks which they may succeed. A Trust Company may invest in a bank building not exceeding 25 per cent. of its capital and surplus, but in no case to exceed $250,000.

Maryland enacted legislation placing additional restrictions in regard to reserve of Trust Companies.

In Louisiana, "The Uniform Bills of Lading Act," "The False Statement Act," and "The Act limiting the liability of a bank to its depositor for payment of forged or raised checks for a period of one year," were all passed.

The 1911 Vermont Legislature passed the act restricting the use of the word "Trust."

The Illinois Bankers' Association during the year appointed a committee to make suggestions regarding a bill providing for supervision of all banks in the State of Illinois, and to otherwise safeguard State banking.

At the suggestion of a distinguished member of the Trust Company Section, your committee this year has given some attention to the consideration of existing Inheritance Tax laws. It finds the laws are confusing and imperfectly administered. A majority of the evils in the present systems were indicated in an address by Mr. Jackson at last year's convention. The committee has taken up the matter of securing changes in those laws and will use its efforts to assist in bringing about just and equitable laws in the various States.

A desirable change in the matter of a tax upon the personal estate of a non-resident decedent within Massachusetts was made this year.

Since our last report the committee has lost one of its most valuable members, through the death of Mr. F. J. Parker of Quincy, Ill., who had for several years acceptably represented the Middle West in the committee's affairs. Mr. Parker's successor, named by the president, is Mr. E. D. Hulbert of Chicago.

Report of the Committee on Legislation.

To the Members of the Trust Company Section:

Gentlemen: The resolution offered and passed at the last annual meeting which created the permanent Committee entitled "Committee on Legislation of the Trust Company Section" read as follows:

Resolved, That the Executive Committee shall annually at its first meeting appoint a committee of five as a Committee on Legislation of the Trust Company Section. The President, the First Vice-President and the chairman of the Executive Committee shall be ex-officio members of such committee, the other two members may or may not be members of the Executive Committee. Such committee shall serve until the appointment of their successors.

The general object of the appointment of this Committee was primarily to take in hand all general legislation affecting the members of the Section, and to submit the same, as far as it was possible, to the meeting of the Section for consideration and approval. The special work entrusted to it was the proposed legislation on monetary reform, which was carefully considered and reported upon last year. In the bill proposed and finally submitted to Congress, Trust Companies were fairly treated, and until some adverse action is contemplated it would seem unwise to interfere. The Monetary Commission's Bill now rests with the Finance Committee of the House of Representatives, and nothing can be expected from it until after the general election. It is useless to anticipate what can or will be done, but to those best situated to judge the early passage of the measure seems doubtful.

Respectfully submitted,

F. H. FRIES,
For the Committee.

Report of Committee on a Model Trust Company Law.

At a meeting of your Executive Committee held at Briarcliff on May 8, 1912, the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That the tentative draft of the Trust Company law prepared by Mr. Paton, General Counsel, be referred to a committee of which Mr. Fuller shall be chairman; such committee to report any suggestions, corrections or amendments of such draft at the next meeting of the Section.

Your Committee respectfully reports that after careful consideration of the subject it has reached the conclusion that it is inexpedient at this time to attempt to draft a model law covering all of the functions of the various kinds of institutions using the word "Trust" in their title; but that its efforts along that line at this time should be limited to the preparation of a draft of that portion of a trust company law which relates only to the handling of matters in trust, and particularly to the conservation of trust finds and trust estates.

Therefore your Committee feels that the draft prepared by Mr. Paton, admirable as it is, covers in its scope a larger field than it is wise to attempt to bring under the action of a uniform law at the present time.

Although appreciating the desirability of having all the trust companies in the United States operating under identical laws, defining and regulating all of their rights and powers, your Committee believes that an attempt to introduce such a law in all the States of the Union under existing conditions would not meet with a favorable reception.

Your Committee believes, however, that a draft of a model law, insofar as it relates only to the rules, regulations and safe-guards of the Trust Departments of all institutions which accept and administer trusts, is practicable, and would be interesting to all the members of your Section, and especially advantageous to those who are in working for the enactment of new and better trust company laws in some of the States where the laws regulating trust companies are at present far from ideal.

In the opinion of your Committee, a new draft should be prepared on the limited lines that it has indicated, rather than that the draft referred to it for consideration should be amended. Such a draft should be the result of most careful study in its preparation, and this it has not been possible for your Committee to expend during the limited time at its command.

It suggests, therefore, that it be discharged and that the duty imposed upon it be assumed by the already existing Committee on Legislation, under the advice of the General Counsel, to the end that there may be presented for consideration at the next annual meeting of this Section a draft of a model trust company's law, insofar as such law relates to matters in trust.

Respectfully submitted,

OLIVER C. FULLER, Chairman,
ALBERT A. JACKSON,
ISAAC H. ORR.

Seventeenth Annual Meeting TRUST COMPANY SECTION, Held at Detroit, Mich., September 11 and 12, 1912

FIRST DAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

Wednesday, Sept. 11, 1912.

F. H. FRIES, President, presiding.

The seventeenth annual meeting convened in the Hotel Pontchartrain, Detroit, Mich., on Wednesday, Sept. 11, 1912, at 10 A. M., the President, F. H. Fries, of Winston-Salem, N. C., in the chair.

The President: The seventeenth annual meeting of the Trust Company Section will please come to order. We will join in prayer the Rev. Dr. S. S. Marquis, Dean of St. Paul's Cathedral, Detroit. Let us rise.

Invocation by Rev. S. S. Marquis, D. D., Dean of St. Paul's Cathedral, Detroit.

Oh God, our heavenly Father, Thy kingdom is over all the earth and Thy power is infinite. In Thee we live and move and have our being, as the spirit of man prevails, the body in which it dwells to which Thy spirit by light and Thy inheritance remains over all things and dwells wthin us. Thou art present everywhere and yet Thou art real only unto the man that takes time to make Thy presence real.

We, therefore, pause in the beginning of our labors to-day in order to make a fact which would remain a fact without our consciousness of it, but which is a fact only to us as we make it real to us. The fact is that God is and that He is in all and through all and over all.

Wilt Thou take away from us the deadly belief that God is the God only of the past time or of the future and give us the living faith, the faith in the present tense, the belief in the God who not only was and shall be, but the God who is. Take away from us the deadly belief that there is work in this world which is sacred and that is inestimable which is secular and give us to understand that all work is sacred only as a man does it in and for his fellowmen and in the consciousness of God; that every man's work is a ministry before God only in that it is a ministry to man, and there is no calling in this world that is higher in itself than another, but that, whether a man works with his hand or with his brain, whether it be in the simple work of the shop or the factory or the counting house, or whatever it may be, that a man's work is sacred when it is done as a service to humanity and in the consciousness that God rules and reigns over all.

Take away from us the deadly faith or belief that Thou art a God only of the past or that Thou art shaping the destiny of the dim and distant future, and give us the living faith that Thou art the God of the nation to-day, and that Thou art the God of this nation, and that in it Thou art working out divine principles in so far as the men of this nation permit Thee to work in them.

And may the men who are here assembled this morning, whose work is so vitally connected with the welfare of this country, appreciate the fact that the welfare and the higher blessings that are to come upon them are in a great measure attendant upon the work and the plan and the design which they themselves form for their great and important affairs. Fill us with the consciousness, in other words, before God, that we are the creatures, the offspring, the Son of an infinite Father, who put us here for a divine purpose, and who ennobles and glorifies the work of man who does it in the consciousness of his Father.

Be with us in the deliberations of this and all other days, and may we care more earnestly for the work that Thou hast given us, that we may be ashamed to go through any day in our lives when we have not taken time to make ourselves conscious of the presence of God, of the dignity and of the importance of the work that we are doing and the necessity of doing it as in the sight of God.

This and all other blessings, Oh God, we ask in the name of Thy Son, Jesus Christ. Amen.

The President: It gives me pleasure, gentlemen, to introduce to you Hon. David E. Heinman, who comes charged with a message of welcome from the city and citizens of Detroit.

Address of Welcome, by Hon. David E. Heineman, Comptroller of the City of Detroit.

Mr. President, Ladies and Gentleman: It has come to dawn upon me that the reason the Sections like yours meet on the second day of this great Convention is because the first day is taken up entirely in listening to addresses of welcome. It was my privilege to be over in the Opera House yesterday morning at the first session, and I heard the Governor of the State offer you the entire State of Michigan, and as some of you who were there recall, threw in about all the Greek mythology besides. And then I heard a representative of the city diligently picking up what crumbs of the city the Governor had left and offer you those. And then a Detroit resident, who was an ex-President of the American Bankers' Association, welcomed you with words which can only come from our hearts, and, lastly, the Postmaster of the city, who also happens to be the President of the Board of Commerce, loosened the door of his heart to say that he could not find one postal card on which he saw the word "Closed." Really, gentlemen, I don't think there was one convention assembled in all our good history that we were so glad to see, and I don't really know what remains for me except as the fiscal officer or Comptroller of the city to rummage in my pocket and pick out the key of the strong box and say, "You have got everything else, now take that." And I think that I would do that, gentlemen, except for the fact that there is a complimentary key in the possession of the Mayor and the Mayor is out of the city at present, and so I will have to equivocate a little bit to let you understand what I might do if the Mayor were here.

I hope the gentlemen of this Convention will not misunderstand the continuity and multifariousness of our wealth, or get for a moment the idea we are glad to see you for what you possess rather than for what you are, but what you stand for, or that there is any selfish motive whatever, but you are located right here in the central part of our city, where the first convention of white men that ever came here 212 years ago was met by the red inhabitants and offered pipe of peace. Now come, gentlemen, we don't mean to, in the parlance of your messenger boys, reverse the operation by coming here with all these welcomes and offering you, not pipes of peace, but pieces of pipe, don't think so.

I wish to say a word as the fiscal officer of the city. It may interest you in feeling that the fiscal atmosphere of this city is such as not to make it entirely unworthy on its part to entertain a Convention of this kind. We are an old city, 212 years old—only nineteen years younger, if you please, than one of our friends here from Philadelphia—and the history of Detroit has been a singularly conservative one. A thing that may interest you: We have a city historiographer here, not one of those moth-eaten individuals who sits at a desk and dreams over a few papers, but a gentleman who has a separate building of his own, one of the finest books of historical reports in the United States, and a few weeks ago he informed me, in answer to a request, that in the entire history of the city of Detroit, 212 years, this city has never defaulted on any obligation of any kind. There have been times when the city has been hard pressed for money, and there was delay, but never a default in the history of its finances.

When I speak of its fiscal condition I must speak of a thing which perforce is known to you all when I tell you that, according to the Government reports, the city of Detroit occupies a fiscal position which is quite unique in its pre-eminence, and when I say that I refer to the fact that there are eight other cities closely approximating Detroit in population, having an average debt of $25,000,000, yet the city of Detroit has a net debt of only six and one-half million dollars, and against that debt, gentlemen, we have property conservatively inventoried and belonging to the city upward of forty-five million dollars in value—a statement that would entitle us to do business, I think, with any branch of the American Banking Association. And when we sold our bonds, our 4 per cent. bonds, within the last few weeks, the last sale, they brought over par, and this morning the paper reports the sale of water bonds at par, this being a nice, friendly transaction between one of our good trust companies and the Board of Water Commissioners. If it would not be mercenary, if it would not give the wrong complexion to a welcome, I would almost like to discard the pleasant position I have as the heralder of greetings and step right down and do a little business with some of you trust company members. Last week I had the pleasure of meeting a convention which was made up of manufacturers of tombstones, but I was not inclined to do very much business with those gentlemen, but this, let me say, is an opportunity which is altogether more alluring, and I am only sorry that we have not a bond sale on where we have so many gentlemen with us to afford us an additional reason for having been in our midst.

Now, gentlemen, in having given you the strong box I ought to really content myself with saying a few words of welcome and then giving way to your regular programme.

I want to say just a word about our trust companies, who heart and soul enjoy having you in our city. That which makes Detroit a good, open, grown, conservative city in its government and fiscal arrangement, also makes our financial institutions the same way. That which puts upon our honorable city commissions that handle almost the entire business of the city our best and most representative citizenship, also puts upon the board of directors of our banks and trust companies precisely that same kind of citizenship, and so in Detroit we never have any fear when hard times come along about what is going to happen to our institutions, because we know, and history has proven it, we know full well that if there is any trouble we can rely, not only upon the institutions themselves, but upon the individual integrity and individual fortunes of the men who make up the boards of directors of those institutions.

And so I am glad to welcome you in the name of those institution, and to say that they are just as solid and rock bound as the city itself is. We have three institutions here in the order of their foundations, the Union Trust Company, the Detroit Trust Company and the Security Trust Company, and I need not say to you that their representative standing among you is good.

Now what, in a word, what is the welcome that a city can offer you? If I were to ask you to look out of the windows of this Convention to the right and to the left, I would ask you to gather there the inspiration that spells the word "welcome." We gentlemen, are sometimes too much at our desks, our eyes are fixed on the immediate five-minute matter that is before us; we sometimes lose the proper vision. Yet when we look out and see a great city like this, covering forty-one square miles of territory, proud and happy under God's blue sky on a morning like this, it is there that we ought to get the inspiration of welcome and the impetus for continued good work. If I were to offer you a welcome I would want it to be in some style the noise of the humming factories which enable our thousands and tens of thousands of operatives to build their lives and found their homes and maintain their families. I would get you to include in those words of welcome the thanks of this city, which is glad of our beautiful river and island, where these men can go on the wharves and boats and be refreshed and return to their work. I would seek to gather a part of the great noise in a great city like this, which is impossible, but it comes to us with the voice of hundreds of thousands of men, the men who are achieving and working. It might mean nothing, but it is the noise they make that is inspiring, that is high and noble in a great city in this, the twentieth century.

Gentlemen, I trust that beyond the valuable work which you will do in your section, beyond the pleasant hospitality which this city offers you and to which you bring so largely contributing a share yourselves, beyond that, that you will go away inspired and refreshed for your next year's work by the thought that of a city like this, with all its countless men and women in it achieving all these things, doing those things which make for character and integrity and power, that you bear with you the thought that not only in Detroit is life worth living, but life is worth living if lived rightly in your homes, in your cities all over this land, all over this world—everywhere.

Response to the Address of Welcome, by Mr. F. H. Fries, President.

We have listened to the fervent invocation for the Divine guidance and blessing, and the cordial words of welcome that have been extended to us by Mr. Heineman in behalf of the citizens and the city of Detroit; we feel that it is good for us to be here, that the peculiar pleasure that always accompanies a visit to this charming city is heightened and broadened by the warm welcome of sympathetic friends and the approval of the beneficent Ruler of all things. Under such circumstances we are touched with a peculiar joy, and our hearts respond to such words of welcome with a peculiar thrill of satisfaction and delight. The stirring spirit of this marvelous city seems to pervade us, and its matchless beauty has so captivated us that we are ready to admit that we are a part of its proud citizenship, move to call it all our own, and to sing its deserved praises, not only while we are here, but after we have returned to our distant home. Years ago already the American Bankers' Association laid claim to one of Detroit's distinguished citizens, Mr. George H. Russel, and made him its President. More recently it adopted Colonel Farnsworth, and now it has called to the Presidency Commodore Livingstone; I can see no legitimate reason why we may not, under the present conditions, accept with thanks the city itself and all the good things thereof. We feel very much at home here—are not its Adding Machines a part of our very existence; do we not ride in its automobiles, chew its tobacco, eat its meat, take its patent medicines, and is not the Diamond Match a household word, if not a boon companion? Does not the census show that its widely extended borders have taken in at least one representative of each family from everywhere in this country, and may not the 178 per cent. increase in banking deposits during recent years explain where some of our own anticipated and coveted growth may have gone?

We thank you, Mr. Heineman, and the good citizens of Detroit, for the cordial welcome extended to us, and we will long remember with pleasure the days spent in your midst, especially when a punctured tire along a distant roadside gives us ample time for pious and pleasant reflection. We hope, then, to see again before us your broad and beautiful avenues, your magnificent buildings, your crowded streets, your wharves laden with commerce, the numerous and stately vessels that pass through your gateway, your magnificent parks and palatial and hospitable homes; but most especially your kind words of welcome and the kindness of your people, which will linger with us most pleasantly, when other memories may have faded away.

It is customary, gentlemen, for your presiding officer to present at this time a report. I would like to say that this report contains some suggestions more particularly connected with the Trust Company Section, which it has been my pleasure and privilege to serve during the past twelve months. With your permission I will read what I have to say.

(The report was read.)

DETROIT, MICH., September 11, 1912.

Gentlemen: It is our good fortune to meet this year in the charming, progressive and historic city of Detroit, where, fifteen years ago, the Trust Company Section of the American Bankers' Association held its first annual meeting.

We note the marvelous growth of this city and the great development of its business since last we were here, and we realize that it is a part of the general prosprity that has blessed our entire country. During these fifteen years the population of the United States has increased 33 per cent., and its trade and commerce has doubled; bank deposits indicative of this growth have increased in the same ratio, and the bank clearings show that all sections of the country have shared in this prosperity.

If the Trust Company, as in institution, is a natural result of our business and financial development, as we believe it is, this great prosperity must have affected the growth of Trust Companies and be quite apparent in the growth of the Trust Company Section. There was no statement made at the first meeting as to the number of Trust Companies then in existence, but their total capital and surplus was stted as $224,606,000.00, with assets amounting to $405,516,714.22. To-day the Trust Companies of the United States number over 1,800, with resources aggregating $5,500,000,000, besides which they control in some trust capaoity $35,000,000,000 more. The membership of the Section has grown during this time from 114 to 1,251, and their resources from four hundred million to four and one-half billion dollars. Thus, while the population of this country has grown 33 per cent. and the business 100 per cent., the Trust Companies of the Section have increased in number and resources about 1,000 per cent.

The Comptroller's report of 1911 shows the relative growth of National Banks, Savings Banks and Trust Companies since 1907. We note their individual deposits as follows:

	National Banks.	Savings Banks.	Trust Companies.	Total in All Banks.
1911..	$5,478,000,000	$4,212,600,000	$3,295,800,000	$15,906,300,000
1907..	4,322,900,000	2,495,410,000	2,061,600,000	13,099,600,000
	$1,155,100,000	$717,190,000	$1,234,200,000	$2,806,700,000
Per cent. increase,	21%	23%	60%	44%

A perusal of these figures must be a source of pride to those interested in the development of the Trust Company idea and a satisfaction to all who are engaged in Trust Company business.

While we are profoundly impressed with these figures as an evidence of past achievements, we are still more impressed with the thought of what may be done, nay, rather what will surely be accomplished in the coming years, if this promise of the future is fulfilled. Let us consider, briefly, not the possibilities as to numbers nor as to aggregate resources, great beyond comparison as these may become, but rather the responsibility and duty of the Trust Company Section and its members in shaping "The Trust Company," that it may the more successfully meet the greater demands that will certainly be made upon it.

The responsibility upon the Trust Company Section cannot be avoided, because Trust Companies are and will probably ever remain State Institutions. The Trust Company Section is the only common ground upon which they can meet and its influence the only one that can be successfully exerted to bring about uniform and improved methods and practices and the passage of better laws in the different States, and from it should emanate every good thing that will help to standardize or improve this work. The varying interests involved and the character of this work broadens the scope of the business necessarily undertaken, and opens a larger field of effort that necessitates the handling of details that may differentiate this from other Sections of the American Bankers' Association, and yet these very interests draw us into more intimate relation with all the other Sections and should tend to cement in a peculiar degree the ties of mutual interest and esteem.

There have been evidences in the past that the general association may not have appreciated the peculiar conditions that have surrounded the Trust Company Section, and that some of the members may have become impatient with the interest and zeal that has been shown at times in its affairs; it has even been stated upon the floor of the General Association that the Trust Company Section contemplates withdrawing from the parent body.

This is not correct, and these impressions should not exist, for it is desirable that the union should be maintained, not only on account of the greater efficiency in matters of general legislation, but because of the greater advantages that arise from closer sympathy and wider acquaintance and the strength and influence that comes by reason of this union. The best thing possible for all concerned lies in working for the real benefit of the individual members, which can be accomplished through the material advancement of their interests. For this reason I am sure that you will listen with a very great deal of pleasure to the paper entitled "Achievements of the Trust Company During the Past," and I recommend a careful consideration of the reports of the various committees, which will show what is being done in the present and to the discussions of this meeting which will doubtless forecast the possibilities of the future.

Perhaps the most important of the possibilities is the passage of the bill proposed by the Monetary Commission for Monetary Reform, which is at present held in abeyance, on account of the political situation. It is hoped, however, that this is only temporary, that the merits of the measure will win for it a favorable consideration, and that its importance to all branches of business and all classes of citizens will ensure its adoption.

The Legislative Committee has given this measure much careful thought, and has secured for Trust Companies full and favorable recognition, which should recommend the bill to the earnest support of all members and their Representatives in Congress. The success attending the efforts of this important committee would seem to warrant the belief that a determined effort might result in obtaining uniform Trust Company laws in the various States. We realize the almost chaotic condition of the laws affecting Trust Company business, and what a stupendous undertaking this would be, and yet the success attending the passage of the Negotiable Instrument Law and the present condition of proposed legislation for a uniform Bill of Lading should afford every encouragement to hope for reasonable success.

The possibilities along these lines are very great.

The excellent work done by the Protective Laws Committee is also encouraging, as the report will show, but the prohibition of the use of the "Trust Company" name to unworthy institutions that seek a chartered existence is not sufficient to save it from slander if companies already chartered and bearing the name are guilty of questionable practices, and this is the case. There are at present promoting companies in three different States bearing the name of "Trust Company," whose object and aim, as well as work, is reprehensible. If it is at all possible the powers and work of the Committee should be enlarged.

The rapid growth of business has necessitated the introduction of methods of accounting and reports that are different in almost every institution, but no one will say that all are equally efficient or equally good, and all will say that there must be a best one. Cannot a more effective effort be put forth to standardize these forms and methods than the publication of a book of forms for choice, admirable as that method was a few years ago?

Trust Company advertising and publicity work is necessary in a business where so little is known and so much information is needed, and this branch of the work is attracting much attention. The intelligent direction by experienced leaders would be appreciated and valued by most, if not all, of the members.

These and many other things claim the attention and the special interest of the Section, but the most important of all is the influence that the Section can constantly exert to raise the standard of service. The work accomplished is important, but the spirit and faithfulness shown in the doing of it is still more so—absolute truth and honesty are the cardinal virtues that belong to the officials and work of the Trust Company. There is no room for falsehood in any form from the advertisement that "Cries our wares" to the final settlement with a most dependent ward.

The Section has called into its immediate service in the past men of unblemished character and high ideals, and they have had much to do with what has been accomplished; appreciating this as I do, I want to emphasize the importance of securing the very best men in the trust company business as officers and members of committees, so that the "highest ideals" will ever remain the goal toward which all members are directed.

Allow me to recommend the continuance of the annual banquet of the trust companies of the United States, given each spring under the auspices of the Section. No single agency has done more for the reputation and upbuilding of the Section. So long as the high standard of the past two years is maintained, the banquet will do the Section great good. I would also venture to suggest a more intimate relation between the Section and the State Trust Company organizations, the forming of which should be encouraged in every way; also the cultivation of the respective Vice-Presidents of the various States through whom more effective work can be done.

I cannot close without making due and grateful acknowledgment to the officers of the Section, and the members of the Committees, with whom it has been my good fortune and pleasure to serve.

May the coming years bring to the Section, and all its members, the prosperity and success they deserve.

The President: Gentlemen, I want to introduce to you a gentleman who is not known here (applause), a very good friend of mine, Commodore Livingstone, of this city. We will be very glad to have him with us and have a word from him.

Mr. William Livingstone, of Detroit, Michigan: Gentlemen of the Trust Company Section, I think this is very unfair. I just came upstairs to hear your President's address and to ask him a question. I had no thought of interfering with your program whatever. I can only say that I am more than glad to see you in my home city, glad that Providence has been kind to us and given us pleasant weather, and I sincerely trust that meetings you are about to have will be one of the most pleasant and most productive in your history, one of the oldest and strongest Sections we have, your old and proud Trust Company Section (applause).

The President: The next in order is a report of the Executive Committee. Mr. Goff is present.

The report of the Executive Committee was read by Mr. F. H. Goff, Chairman of the Committee.

Report of the Executive Committee.

[The report of the Executive Committee is given on page 175 of this publication.]

Mr. Wm. C. Poillon, of New York: Mr. Chairman, I move that the reading of the further reports be dispensed with for the present, in order that we may listen to the addresses prepared for the occasion. We can take up the reports afterwards or to-morrow.

The motion was seconded.

The President: The motion is made and seconded, gentlemen, that we suspend the reports and listen to the addresses that have been prepared for this morning. Those in favor vote by saying "aye," those opposing say "no."

It gives me pleasure under these circumstances to favor Mr. Poillon and to introduce to you Mr. George M. Reynolds, who will speak to us on the Money Trust inquiry. He needs no further comment from me.

Mr. George M. Reynolds, Chicago, Illinois, then read the address, "The Money Trust Inquiry."

"The Money Trust Inquiry," by George M. Reynolds.

[Mr. Reynolds' paper in full is printed on page 161 of this publication.]

The President: I am sure the members of the Section and those who have heard this able paper are under great obligations to Mr. Reynolds, and I desire in the name of all present to thank him for this excellent paper prepared for us.

The next address, "Some Unscheduled Liabilities," has been prepared by the Dean of the University of Michigan, Henry M. Bates, Esq.

Henry M. Bates, Esq., Dean of the University of Michigan, then read the address, "Some Unscheduled Liabilities."

Some Unscheduled Liabilities.

[Dean Bates' paper will be found printed on page 169.]

The President: I have no doubt that the members would like to discuss this very important question, and unless there is something to interfere we might request the reader of this paper to be with us to-morrow morning. I know some of you are deeply interested.

Mr. F. H. Goff: Mr. President, appreciating as I do the great amount of time and labor involved in the separation of a labor of this kind, covering practically an unexplored field of the law, I move you, sir, that a vote of thanks and appreciation be extended to Dean Bates for the able paper submitted.

By Mr. Poillon: I second the motion.

The President: Gentlemen, you have heard the motion. Those in favor make it known by rising. The motion is unanimously carried.

The President: I am sure you will be interested in the next one—who has been so long interested in the Trust Company's Section—and to the next paper, in which you yourselves have become so very active in the years gone by, and I take great pleasure in asking Mr. Jones, of the Mississippi Valley Trust Company, Mr. Breckinridge Jones, to come forward and tell us what the Trust Company Section has done since he began the Section fifteen years ago.

Mr. Breckinridge Jones, St. Louis, Mo., then read the address, "Achievements of the Trust Company Section During the Past Fifteen Years."

Achievements of the Trust Company Section During the Past Fifteen Years.

[We print Mr. Jones' address on page 164.]

Mr. Oliver C. Fuller, Milwaukee, Wis.: I suggest that a nominating committee of five be appointed by the Chair, which Committee shall receive names in writing from the delegates present, and from said names the Nominating Committee shall select five persons as members of the Executive Committee for the term 1912, said Committee to report back to the Convention for its action. This resolution was passed unanimously at the meeting of the Executive Committee on Monday.

The President: Is the resolution seconded?

Mr. A. A. Jackson, Philadelphia, Pa.: I second the motion.

The President: All in favor say "aye." Opposed, "no." The motion has been carried. I will appoint that Committee in a few minutes. Is it your pleasure now to take up the reports?

Mr. William C. Poillon, New York: Mr. President, I think this would be a fitting opportunity for this meeting to vote its thanks to Mr. Reynolds and to Mr. Jones for their very able and carefully prepared addresses.

The President: The Chair entertains such a motion with a great deal of pleasure.

Mr. F. H. Goff, Cleveland, Ohio: I second the motion.

The President: Those in favor of it make it known by saying "aye"; those opposed, "no."

The motion is unanimously carried.

Mr. Goff: I suggest that it is the sense of this meeting that there should be kept and filed in the office of the Secretary of the Association the statistical information contained in the papers submitted by Mr. Jones. I have some appreciation for the amount of labor involved in gathering this information, sitting as I have near enough to see his paper as he turned the pages and enabled to determine that it contained very much statistical information, of which he gave us but a brief summary. I ask you to suggest that the Secretary be instructed to verify it and confirm and extend the information contained in that paper.

Motion seconded.

The President: Gentlemen, you have heard the motion. All those in favor will make it known by saying "aye"; those opposed, "no."

Motion unanimously carried.

What is your pleasure, gentlemen, in reference to the reports that we left on the programme? I will ask that Mr. Drake and Mr. Goff distribute the papers for votes, which you will please deliver to this gentleman before leaving the hall. The Committee will from the names gathered select a new Committee and elect it to-morrow.

Unless there is objection, we will hear the Secretary's report.

Mr. F. H. Goff: Mr. President, we find that many of the members do not understand what they are expected to do with these papers. They seem to feel that they ought to submit recommendations to the Nominative Committee for appointment to the Executive Committee for the following year.

The President: The suggestion is that from the names gathered from the members on the floor the Nominating Committee that you have just appointed will select five members of the Executive Committee to serve for the succeeding three years.

Mr. A. A. Jackson, Philadelphia, Pa.: I think that we have had hardly time enough to consider such an important matter, and I second the motion that they be returned to the Secretary the first thing in the morning, after we have had an opporunity to consider the matter. I put that in the form of a motion.

Motion seconded.

The President: I understand that motion is that they return this vote the first thing to-morrow morning. The suggestion has been made that the Committee would like to have these votes in so as to consider them before that meeting. What is your pleasure, gentlemen? The motion is to return these votes at 9 o'clock to-morrow morning.

Mr. A. A. Jackson: Mr. Chairman, wouldn't it be better to let the members that are here now return these to-morrow morning and then let them withdraw at any time during the session for a limited time?

The President: The motion is made, gentlemen, to gather the votes to-morrow morning. That will give the membership ample time for consideration. The Committee will then take it up for their consideration to-morrow. Those in favor make it known by saying "aye": those opposed, "no."

The motion has been carried.

The Secretary will be here in the hall to gather those ballots in the morning at 9 o'clock.

Mr. F. H. Goff: Mr. President, in order that the programme may be completed without too much pressure, I beg to suggest that when we adjourn we adjourn to convene at either 9 or half-past 9 to-morrow morning. We have talks for discussion that are likely to consume considerable time. I would suggest half-past nine, to meet promptly at 9.30.

Mr. William C. Poillon: Second the motion.

The President: The motion is made that when we adjourn to-day it will be until 9.30 to-morrow morning. Those in favor make it known by saying "aye": opposed, say "no."

The motion is carried.

The Chairman announces the following Committees on Nomination: R. W. Cutler, President of the Hartford Trust Company, Hartford, Conn.; W. C. Poillon, Vice-President of the Bankers' Trust Company, New York City; Mr. Edwin Chamberlin, Vice-President of the San Antonio Loan & Trust Company, San Antonio, Texas; Mr. John G. Reading, President of the Susquehanna Trust Company, Williamsport, Pa.; Mr. J. J. Sullivan, President of the Central Savings & Trust Company, Cleveland, Ohio.

Mr. Henry G. Aird, Jacksonville, Fla.: Mr. President, I notice that so many have left the hall, and the reports now to be read are of such great and vital importance and certain interest to every one that they be deferred until to-morrow morning at 9.30.

The President: Is that a motion?

Mr. Aird: Yes, sir.

The President: Gentlemen, you have heard the motion. What is your pleasure?

The motion was seconded.

The President: The motion is made and seconded that we adjourn the reading of the reports until to-morrow morning at 9.30 o'clock. Those in favor of the motion will make it known by saying "aye"; opposed, "no."

The motion is carried.

We will make these reports, then, in the order of first business to-morrow morning.

Is there anything else to come before this meeting?

Mr. Aird: I move we adjourn.

Motion seconded.

The President: The motion is made and seconded that we adjourn until 9.30 to-morrow morning. Those in favor make it known by saying "aye"; opposed, "no."

The motion is carried.

The Convention was then adjourned until Thursday, September 12, 1912, at 9.30 a.m.

SECOND DAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

Thursday, September 12, 1912.

The President: Gentlemen, I am requested to announce that the polls are still open, and will be open until 10 o'clock. The box is here for your votes for five members of the Committee for next year.

The Section will please come to order, and the unfinished business of yesterday is the reports of the Secretary and the Committee on Legislation.

Report of the Secretary.

[The report of the Secretary was read and will be found on page 176 of this publication.]

The President: The report of the Committee on Legislation. Your by-laws require or your resolution requires that the President make this report, and with your permission I will read it.

Report of the Committee on Legislation.

[The report of the Committee on Legislation appears on page 176.]

The President: The next report is the report of the Committee on Protective Laws by Mr. Lynn H. Dinkins, Chairman of the Committee.

Report of the Committee on Protective Laws.

Mr. Kauffman: If I may be permitted to refer just a moment to the report of the gentlemen of the Legislative Committee in reference to the monetary bill as presented by the National Monetary Commission I want to offer a slight resolution recognizing the fact that a very important body of business men of this country are endeavoring to carry on an educational campaign by sending out information among the business men of the country relative to those important changes that are necessary in our currency system. I will read the resolution if permitted:

Believing that the permanent prosperity of this nation depends upon a sane and sound banking system and a currency that will respond to the seasonal demands of the different sections of the nation, and that the business men of the country, bankers, manufacturers, merchants, and farmers are alike concerned in this most important problem of our economic and commercial life; be it

Resolved, By the Trust Company Section of the American Bankers' Association, that it heartily approves of the campaign of education for sound banking and currency reform which the National Citizens' League is carrying on in the several States of the Union; and be it further

Resolved, That the members of the Trust Company's Section pledge themselves to give their active assistance in the distribution of educational propaganda now being carried on by the National Citizens' League.

I think it is entirely within the province of this Section of the American Bankers' Association to take an active part in this campaign, and to let it be known that this action is properly recognized; and I, therefore, would submit and move the adoption of that resolution.

The President: Do I understand, Mr. Kauffman, to approve the report of the Committee and have it filed and then put this resolution? There is no action on the part of the house in reference to that report.

Mr. Kauffman: I would move that the report of the Committee be accepted and filed, and I introduce then this resolution.

The President: You have heard the first resolution, gentlemen, are you ready for the motion? Those in favor make it known by saying "aye"; opposed, "no."

The motion prevails.

You have heard Mr. Kauffman's resolution. Is there a second?

Mr. Dinkins: Mr. President, I should like to inquire whether Mr. Kauffman has the approval of the National Citizens' League or any of its officers in presenting such a resolution.

Mr. Kauffman: I did not catch the question.

Mr. Dinkins: I asked whether Mr. Kauffman has the approval of the National Citizens' League or any of its officers. As I understand it, they desire to operate independent of all banks.

Mr. Kauffman: They have a resolution similar to that adopted by the Washington Bankers' Association recent convention, and I have had letters from them not only expressing approval, but most earnest satisfaction that we have taken that position, and I know that they have requested that a similar resolution be presented at their convention.

Mr. Jackson: Mr. Chairman, to get the question before the house, I would second Mr. Kauffman's resolution.

The President: Gentlemen, the resolution has been seconded, and I would like to have the Secretary read or I will read, as I have it before me, Article 7: "Resolutions or subjects for discussion (excepting those referring to points of order or matters of courtesy) must be filed with the Secretary at least 15 days before the Annual Convention and submitted to the Executive Council at its regular meeting preceding the Convention; but any person desiring to submit any resolution or business in open convention may do so upon a two-thirds vote of the delegates present, or such resolution or business shall be referred to the Executive Council to report upon immediately; provided that this shall not apply to any proposed amendment of the Constitution."

The Chair rules that it will take a two-thirds vote on the resolutions and a second that has just been made.

Mr. Robert E. James, Easton, Pa.: Do I understand that this resolution offered by Mr. Kauffman is a resolution pertinent to this body? It is for action in this Section, is it not? How then would the restrictions of the Constitution, which apply only to the general body, affect this body? We must have our own rules. If there is a rule in the Trust Section which prescribes any resolution that is urged and offered from the floor, then, of course, it is a resolution that would not be proper. That provision which has been read from the Constitution applies only to the general convention, not to this Section.

The President: It has been customary, Mr. James, that the rules of the general Association govern in all these matters, at least in former meetings. I think ,therefore, we will be right in this case.

Mr. James: Don't you observe, Mr. Chairman, that if you do that you will have no earthly reason for the assembling of this body, for there is positively nothing that can be brought before them. We might meet and adjourn without doing anything year after year because no one thinks of doing any business in this Section, and you could not accept a motion, except an original resolution; you can do absolutely nothing except to meet, smile at each other, and go home.

(Laughter).

The President: Gentlemen, you have heard the resolution and the second; any remarks upon it?

A delegate: Question.

Mr. Oliver C. Fuller, Milwaukee, Wis: Mr. Chairman, I desire Mr. Kauffman to read the resolution again.

The President: Mr. Kauffman, please come forward and read the resolution again.

The resolution was read.

Mr. Kauffman: I would say that in the recent New Jersey Convention this resolution or one almost the same verbatim was presented by a member of this Section, one of your most active members, Mr. McCarter, and was earnestly advocated and unanimously adopted by that State Association.

While it is true that the National Citizens' League is a businessmen's organization, they certainly desire the active co-operation of the bankers in the dissemination of the information they have compiled and if they feel that they have the support of the bankers, they would be all the more ready to continue the work that they are doing.

They have organizations, as you know, all throughout the country. That is the reason why every one of the bankers of every State should approve of the work the League is doing

Mr. Fuller: Mr. Chairman, I see no objection to the first part of that resolution, approving of the work being carried on by that League or organization, but I should object to this Section pledging its members individually to work and distribute the literature of the League. I think it is an unnecessary pledge, and is one that I think we should not commit the members to. The resolution approving their work I see no objection to, but the latter part of that resolution I shall object to strenuously.

A Delegate: I move an amendment to the resolution by adding the words "as far as consistent with our obligations to our depositors." I think there are some things in connection with banking that the Government, the Commission or no one else has any right to inquire into. I think it is an obligation on the part of every man controlling a bank or institution to see that those privileges and obligations are protected.

The President: Your amendment, sir, is, as I understand, is what?

A Delegate: That "so far as is consistent with our obligations to depositors"—in other words, a depositor might be unwilling to have his affairs investigated, and if we pledge without restriction the Trust Section to furnish all the information that the Commission desires, we might be compelled with that resolution to report facts which would violate the confidence of our depositors.

Mr. Jackson: Mr. Chairman, isn't the gentleman confusing this with the Investigating Committee, Senator Pujo's Committee? This is a thing, as I understand it, relating to the campaign of education by the Citizens' Monetary League upon the Aldrich Bill. While I am on my feet I want to ask whether it would not be possible to accept an amendment to eliminate the latter part of that resolution. I agree with Mr. Fuller that we should not put upon the members of this Section who are not here the burden of a pledge.

Mr. Kauffman: I was just saying that it was not my intention to put any burden at all upon the members, as I do not think that the phrasing of that Section will do so; yet it pledges the members to give their active assistance. Now, if this be obnoxious or is too strong, I am perfectly willing to withdraw that part of the proposed resolution. Of course, all that I was seeking was the approval of this Section for the work of the National Citizens' League, and which meets with the approval of the gentlemen. It is perfectly satisfactory; if you desire me to withdraw that other part, I am willing to do it—that is, if it pledges us to anything beyond our power at all.

The President: I will ask Mr. Kauffman to read the resolution as he now has it.

Mr. Kauffman then read the resolution, with the last paragraph omitted.

The President: Are there any remarks on the resolution as read?

Mr. J. J. Sullivan, Cleveland, Ohio: Mr. Chairman, it seems to me the resolution of this gentleman is eminently proper at this time, and that we can with consistency adopt that resolution as read by Mr. Kauffman. We are all in favor, of course, of the reform and revision of our present currency system. Now, the Citizens' League, we all know what it is. It is actuated by the best of motives to bring about a much desired change in our currency system. Now, then, this is simply an expression—it does not commit us to anything, does not interfere with the priority of rights of any depositor, but it ſs an expression of this Trust Company Section that we are in favor of this agitation being carried on by the Citizens' League. That is about all there is to it, as I see, and for my part, I am heartily and unequivocally in favor of the adoption of this language as embraced in this resolution, or any similar language that in any way emphasizes our position in the furtherance of this agitation which is now being carried on all over this country.

Mr. Fuller: Mr. Chairman, I just wish to say one word more—that is, that I have no objection to the spirit of that resolution or to the wording of it as now presented by Mr. Kauffman. The objection I have was relative to the pledge, which I understand, we have withdrawn.

The President: Any other remarks, gentlemen?

Mr. Fuller: Question.

The President: You have heard the resolution. It is not necessary to re-read it. Those in favor make it known by saying "aye"; opposed, "no." The resolution is unanimously carried.

What will you do with Mr. Dinkins' report?

Mr. H. P. McIntosh, Cleveland, Ohio: I move it be received and placed on file.

The motion seconded.

The President: The motion is made and seconded that it be placed on file. Those in favor make it known by saying "aye"; opposed, "no."

The motion prevailed.

There is still one report, the report of the Committee on a Proposed Model Trust Law

Report of Committee on a Model Trust Company Law.

[The report is printed on page 176.]

Mr. Sullivan: Mr. Chairman, I move that the report of the Committee, together with the recommendation, be adopted.

Mr. Poillon: Seconded.

The President: You have heard the motion, gentlemen. Those in favor make it known by saying "aye": opposed, "no."

The motion was unanimously carried.

The President: We have now reached the second portion of our programme, gentlemen, and before passing into that I would say that the Committee on Nomination will be called to receive now in the box on the table the nomination of such men as you see fit to nominate for the Committee of Five, which will be elected to-day. I wish also to say that in this discussion I will be very glad, for the sake of the President and Secretary, if those who will speak will announce, not only their name, but the company which they represent so that it may be properly recorded in the minutes. The subject which first comes before us is the Segregation of Savings Deposits held in Trust Companies.

Mr. Wood: Do I understand you declare the polls closed for the Nominating Committee?

The President: Not closed, but I ask for the remaining votes, because there were some delegates who came in. Are there any other votes?

Mr. James: The box is being passed, and I would like to know what it is being passed for.

The President: The five members who will be elected to the Committee suggested yesterday to be nominated. This is merely a suggestion on the part of the floor to get the names.

I want to say to you in connection with this next subject, gentlemen, that it is one of considerable importance and one upon which our members are honestly and sincerely divided. Your Committee on Programme, realizing this, thought it would be well to put it up for discussion and have asked the two gentlemen to lead off in a fifteen-minute talk of the affirmative and negative side of this subject, to be followed by five-minute talks from the floor. In order that there may be a full and satisfactory discussion, the Committee thought it would be unwise to attempt to commit the Sections by a vote. The Chair will therefore not entertain—I say it in advance so there will be no misunderstanding—will not entertain a motion to commit the Section to that. Your remarks may be free and full so as to get at the real merits of the question.

The Segregation of Savings Deposits held in Trust Company. Mr. Pierre Jay, who so ably presented his position at the session last year, is here to present the affirmative side of the case.

SEGREGATION OF SAVINGS DEPOSIT HELD IN TRUST COMPANIES.

Mr. Pierre Jay, of New York, then read the following paper:

SEGREGATION OF SAVINGS DEPOSITS.

I should like to present to you two aspects of the segregation of savings deposits:

1. What segregation means.
2. What segregation does not mean.

Owing to the fertility of the imagination of some of those who oppose segregation, I may take longer to discuss what segregation is not than what it is.

On the liability side, segregation requires the savings accounts to be kept separate from the commercial and other accounts.

On the asset side, segregation requires the notes, mortgages, and bonds representing the savings deposits to be kept separate from the investments of the other deposits. The money received from the savings deposits is not to be mingled with the money received from other depositors. The savings investments are held for the savings deposits, and, in case of liquidation, the savings deposits have a first lien upon their own assets. If these are insufficient to pay the savings depositors in full, the latter then have a claim for the balance on the same footing with other creditors on the general assets of the bank.

This is the law, with slight variations, for all State institutions which receive both savings and commercial deposits—in Michigan, New Hampshire, Maine, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Texas, Idaho, California, and, subject to referendum in November, Colorado.

Nearly all of these States go further and prescribe in what kind of notes, bonds, and mortgages, the savings deposits must be invested.

I suppose that I have been invited to say something upon this subject because I have been Chairman of the Law Committee of the Association, which by instruction of the Executive Council, has been investigating the subject during the past year, and having given hearings, well attended by bankers in Detroit, Cleveland, Chicago, St. Paul, Des Moines, St. Louis, Louisville, New Orleans, and New York, our Committee is supposed to be familiar with the subject and with the sentiment of bankers thereon. Our report submitted to the Executive Council in May of this year and printed in pamphlet form, a number of which are on the table, covers the subject quite fully, and I will therefore only touch briefly upon the matter contained therein.

The Committee found a general agreement that a savings deposit differed materially from a commercial deposit; first, because the bank may defer payment of it for thirty days or more; and, second, because it usually represents all or nearly all of the capital or savings of the depositor. But opinion is evenly divided as to whether the deferrable character of a savings deposit entitles it to its own assets, so that in case of a run on the bank, while the savings depositors are being held at arm's length, the savings assets may not be realized upon to pay off the commercial depositor who cannot be held off while the doors of the bank remain open.

Opinion also seems to be evenly divided as to whether savings deposits should be invested differently from other deposits, because they represent practically all of the capital of the depositor, or because savings depositors as a class are unable to invest their money themselves.

This, it seems to me, is the crux of the whole question. If you are unanimous in the belief that no reason exists in public policy, or morally, or otherwise, to provide the safest possible place where savings may be gathered and deposited, then further discussion is useless; but if one-half of those present to-day should feel as did one-half of those who replied to the queries of the Law Committee six months ago, that savings depositors were entitled to special treatment because their deposits might be deferred, and because their deposits represented practically all of their capital, then clearly there is ground for discussion, and it should begin about this point and should not be obscured by the discussion of details. Cannot we assume that as segregation is in operation in several States, it is unnecessary to discuss its practicability, and confine ourselves to the fundamental idea underlying it? And in our discussions can we not keep clearly before us that the fundamental idea is the special investment of savings deposits, and that the separation of savings from other deposits—commonly called segregation—is merely a plan whereby this fundamental idea may be made effective.

Many of our bankers believe that the savings depositor, because he gets a little higher rate of interest than other depositors, should take this as his compensation, and in liquidation should take his chances with the rest of the creditors; and others feel that as bank failures are relatively few, savings deposits are safe enough under present conditions. These are perfectly reasonable arguments, but it seems to me that they fail to recognize two broader aspects of the question; one, the advantage to the community of the encouragement to thrift, which arises out of the confidence that savings are equally and especially safe in whatever bank they may be deposited; the other, the advantage to the banker, of the stimulation of deposits which such a confidence engenders. Are not the interests of the banker and the depositor inseparable? What is against the interest of the depositor is, in the long run, against the interest of the banker. What keeps away deposits keeps away profits, and, conversely, what increases deposits increases profits, and we should remember that while the loss or impairment of his deposit may be an inconvenience to the commercial depositor, to the savings depositor it is generally a calamity.

These, then, are the real reasons for the special investment of savings deposits:

(1) The advantage to the wage earner from the increased incentive to thrift which it provides.

(2) The advantage to the community from the increased supply of capital.

(3) The advantage to the banker from increased deposits.

The objections seem to divide themselves into two classes: first, the real; and, second, the imaginary.

There seems to be one real objection to the working out of segregation—namely, the danger that unwise investment legislation may drive money out of communities which originated it, and which need it for their development. This is a danger which does not seem to have yet appeared in the various segregation States, but it might readily occur should unwise legislation seek to impose upon the banks and trust companies an unsuitable standard of investment. Pennsylvania, for example, has a savings bank investment law which is so rigid that I believe very few of its savings deposits, even in the mutual savings banks, are invested under it, and it is easy to understand and sympathise with the anxiety of Pennsylvania bankers lest this rigid law should be made compulsory for the savings deposits held by their State banks and trust companies. The Law Committee of the American Bankers' Association, after a thorough discussion with the bankers of the country, is convinced that no investment law for savings deposits is practicable, which to any considerable extent either takes money out of communities originating it, or out of channels in which it is now properly employed. They are agreed that a legal regulation of savings investments not only should not, but need not result in either. They believe that no uniform investment law for the country at large is practicable, and that State legislation on the subject should merely attempt to crystallize into law the best banking practice within its own borders, and to obtain for the savings deposits what are recognized as the best investments available locally.

None of the existing segregation laws seem to have had the baneful effect which many anticipate. Any well-constructed investment law, which while it may permit, should not compel the investment of funds out of the region originating them. In Massachusetts, with whose investments I am the most familiar, I estimate that of the $800,000,000 in the mutual savings banks, at least 80 per cent. are invested within the State. I doubt if many of the trust companies present have a much larger percentage than this invested within their respective States.

When we progress from a discussion of the principle, special investment, to a discussion of the plan, segregation, we almost inevitably leave behind the real objections and begin to deal with the imaginary; for the plan, segregation, has been practically worked out in several States, and many hundred millions of savings deposits are getting along very comfortably under it. But those who oppose segregation delight in portraying the chaos it would produce, and I heartily know which part of the picture to take up first.

Perhaps the highest light falls on the assertion that segregation means nothing less than the segregation and special investment of all interest bearing deposits. This is such a preposterous suggestion—such a frail man of straw—that I should not think it worth speaking of were it not for the persistency with which it is paraded. The basis for it seems to be this statement which I will quote verbatim. "The Monetary Commission classify all interest-bearing deposits, whether on book, certificate, or otherwise, as Savings Deposits."

In this statement the wish has been doubtless, the father to the thought, for it has no foundation in fact. Let me read to you the classifications of the Monetary Commission. (Reads excerpts from report of Monetary Commission.)

No segregation law contemplates any such sweeping segregation, and of course any of those present who live in segregation States know perfectly well that "all interest-bearing deposits" are not segregated.

Our Committee found that in Michigan, as well as in non-segregation States, some of the savings accounts were large, running as high as $50,000 to $75,000. Clearly these are not the kind of accounts for which we are interested in having special investments, and the bankers frankly admitted that if they desired, they might properly establish by-laws limiting the size of deposits they would receive in their savings departments.

The next bugaboo which the opponents of segregation present is the necessity, and at the same time the difficulty of defining savings deposits, and they close their discussion with this crushing epigram: "If men were deposited—not dollars—even heartless bankers could discriminate and segregate." But the fact is that no definition seems to be necessary—at least in only one of the segregation States does the law contain a definition. In the others, several hundred millions of savings deposits are segregated without any definition whatever, and, although it is urged that the courts will require an exact definition, yet the segregation laws of both New Hampshire and Michigan have been carried to and upheld by their highest courts without any need on the part of either the bankers or the judges for a precise definition of a savings deposit. The fact is that in practice the need of a definition is only at the time the law first goes into effect, and the savings deposits are first segregated. As soon as the savings department is created, and such by-laws as the bank desires are adopted for it, all deposits go naturally to their appropriate department, either commercial, savings or trust, and no confusion whatever arises.

But as the average banker has been represented so often by these gentlemen as incapable of telling which of his deposits were savings deposits, the Law Committee, in obtaining the views of the members of this Association last spring, after discussing at some length their views of what constituted a savings deposit, asked the bankers the following question:

"Could you determine which of your deposits, whether on pass-book or certificate, would be classified as savings deposits?"

Twenty-seven hundred and one banks answered this question, of which 80 per cent. said that they could determine which of their deposits would be classified as savings deposits. Having thus established the intelligence of our bankers, it seems to me unnecessary, as such a large percentage of you already know what savings deposits are, to dwell longer on this subject.

Another phantom which they raise is that commercial depositors would soon leave a banking institution which received savings deposits under a law which gave savings depositors a first lien on their own assets, and a general lien in case of deficiency on the general assets, thereby constituting them secured, although not preferred, depositors. Of course, no such thing has happened, and it reminds me of the predictions freely made in Massachusetts at the time the law permitting savings banks to issue industrial life insurance policies was passed. It was said that the people would be alarmed and would withdraw their money from any savings bank which issued insurance policies. The fact is that the two banks which have taken up the plan have been among the three or four banks which have shown the largest increase in deposits. The same thing seems to be true in some of the segregation States. In Michigan, for example, the State banks with segregation have shown a far greater ratio of increase than the national banks without segregation. I received the other day a printed financial letter dated August 25, 1912, from a national bank in San Francisco, in which the following paragraph occurs:

"An interesting situation has developed in Los Angeles where the Clearing House banks, finding that the savings banks and trust companies were attracting too large a proportion of depositors' money, have determined to counteract this tendency by offering to pay interest on time certificates of deposit."

From which it does not appear that the segregation law in California is driving depositors out of the State banks and trust companies.

Again, it is foreseen by the prophets of the opposition that segregation will lead inevitably to banks either discarding all interest-bearing depositors, or, on the other hand, discarding all of its active depositors. The promoter is soon to be at work in the extraordinary field, which will be offered for the creation of purely commercial banks. In this connection it is interesting to note that this was the exact condition prevailing in many parts of California four years ago. The Commercial Bank and the Savings Bank, separate institutions, operated side by side, or even in the same banking room, for the bankers at their State Convention voted almost unanimously for the enactment of a segregation law which permitted the savings and the commercial banks to unite and operate as one, which showed a tendency exactly the reverse of what some would have us expect.

Again, one might almost think that a savings deposit, unless it were invested in the note of a manufacturer or merchant, was a curse to the bank and the community which held it. Does any one think that the mutual savings banks of New York with their fifteen hundred millions of deposits invested in mortgages and bonds, are a blight on the State? Would our Pennsylvania friends tear down the mutual savings banks of their State because their funds are not used in commerce and trade? But the mutual savings banks are not the only ones which are guilty of the crime of investing in mortgages and bonds. Are not the trust companies of Pennsylvania untrue to their calling when they carry a larger proportion of their assets in mortgages and bonds than in loans and discounts, according to the statistics of the Monetary Commission? And is not the same true in other States?

But I am not going to discuss the question of what are proper investments for savings deposits: first, because we have not the time; and second, because the investment question is a purely local one, principle general, and what might be practicable in one section would be wholly unpracticable in another. Here in Michigan 50 per cent. of the savings must be invested in mortgages and bonds; 15 per cent held as reserve, and the remaining 34 per cent. may be invested as the directors see fit. The Massachusetts law, which is cited as anathema by the opponents of segregation, permits one-third of the savings deposits to be invested in commercial and collateral loans, and compels the balance to be carried either in cash or in mortgages and bonds.

But the imagination of the gentlemen has not confined itself to rattling the dry bones of the segregation skeleton. We are indebted to it for some personal characteristics as well. Those who favor segregation are, they say, "amiable gentlemen who live and revel in the midst of theory, but whose feet never touch the ground of practice; dreamers who imagine the cackle of their burg to be the murmur of the world." Gentlemen, we are met to-day in Michigan where segregation has been practiced partially for nineteen years and fully for three years, and the Michigan bankers like it. Here segregation stands firmly on the ground of practice. Here the theorists are the opponents—not the advocates of segregation. May they be amiable, may they enjoy their misty revels; and since they are sometimes forced into Latin quotations to adequately express their feelings, may I say to them in closing: "Si monumentum quaeris circumspice."

The President: I thank Mr. Jay for this very able presentation of the affirmative side of the question, and we will ask Colonel James, President of the Easton Trust Company, Easton, Pa., to present the negative.

Mr. Robert E. James, President Easton Trust Company, Easton, Pa., then read the following paper:

SEGREGATION OF DEPOSITS, BY ROBERT E. JAMES.

Mr. President and Gentlemen of the Trust Section:

Your time is too limited to attempt to discuss the matter under consideration in anything like detail. I shall not attempt to do so, but shall endeavor only to present a few of the salient points which in themselves ought to determine the fallacy of the entire proposition.

I shall not refer to the great inconvenience which would be occasioned to each banking institution by the adoption universally of this plan; I shall not discuss the enlarged expenses which would naturally follow its adoption; I shall not take up the revolution which it would cause in the practice of banking throughout the United States; neither shall I, except casually, refer to the adverse results to the banker, occasioned by the new relation between him and his depositors. All these matters are fruitful topics for investigation, and each head bristles with objections to the plan as proposed by the gentlemen who advocate its adoption.

The first and insuperable difficulty in this entire matter is the absolute inability of the proponents of this plan to define "Savings Deposits." They have abandoned any real effort to define "Savings," and in the report of the law committee to whom this matter was referred they say, "Precise definition is difficult, perhaps impossible." And again they say, "The committee is convinced by talking with them that most bankers know which of their deposits are 'Savings,' and that it is not necessary to define them by law."

Notwithstanding this inability, they propose to erect on this infirm foundation a new system of banking; a foundation which moves at every pressure in any direction, which has neither determinability nor stability; and in consequence, any structure upon such base must be of the frailest character, and subject to every wind that blows.

If you propose to control "Savings" by statute, you must define "Savings." There must be a clear line of distinction between "Savings" and any other class of deposits. The statute must be sufficiently clear for the courts in any case of contest to define and distinguish. If this is not done, the courts will not enforce such a statute. "Savings" in New England means deposits in a Savings Bank. Everywhere else the word "Savings" means money saved, without reference to the character of the deposit, or the character of the depositor; without reference to the amount, whether small or great; without reference to any possible form of deposit, and much less without any reference to any limitation of time or interest increment, or any other feature. The courts, if they find anything, will find "Savings" to be such deposits as are distinguished from active, commercial deposits, and, in fact, the Monetary Commission has included under the term "Savings Deposits" all deposits other than active commercial deposits, and the total so-called "Savings Deposits" as reported by the Monetary Commission, is the total in each State, and in the United States, of all deposits other than active commercial deposits. It will not be possible for the courts to minimize this total. In the report of the Monetary Commission we find that of the fourteen billions of deposits in the United States, almost seven billions, or practically one-half, are denominated "Savings Deposits," and the other seven billions are denominated commercial deposits. These figures, however, are not correct, because they omit from the savings deposits all that great mass of deposits held by National Banks payable on demand upon which interest is paid, and which should be deducted from the commercial accounts and added to the so-called "Savings Accounts," the result of which would be that the total of so-called "Savings Accounts" would exceed one-half of the total deposits of the United States.

If the proposed plan were a plan for segregation or the separation of deposits of different character, there would be little opposition, but what is called by these gentlemen a plan for segregation is not so much a plan for segregation as it is a plan for investment, and the grave difficulty in this whole matter is the difficulty of restricted investments. It can readily be seen that if one half of the total deposits of the United States are to be placed in restricted investments, the difficulty before the banking fraternity would be of an insuperable character, and it is easy further to see that if one-half or more of the deposits of the United States are to be placed in the restricted class of investments, such as bonds, mortgages, etc., that there will be such deficiency of funds for the ordinary commercial purpose, as everywhere to stop the wheels of progress and cause an industrial depression and destruction greater than anything heretofore experienced, or which can now be conceived of.

Under these conditions, let us inquire:

First, what the effect of the proposed plan for segregation would be upon the banks, and Second, what the effect of the proposed plan for segregation would be upon the various communities and upon the country at large.

As to effect on banks:

First, all interest bearing deposits of every character whatever, when received by any institution, National or State, Trust Company or capitalized Savings Bank, under the plan shall forthwith be invested in a restricted class of securities, and treated in all respects as required by this proposed plan.

For the purpose of illustration, permit me to use the data of your sister State, my own Commonwealth, because of the fact that I happen to be more familiar with the statistics than I am with those of other States.

In Pennsylvania, the Monetary Commission, after investigation made, declare in their tabulated and published statement that there are five hundred and twenty millions of savings deposits. This statement is short of the fact. There are at least $600,000,000 of what would be called savings deposits under the law, which these gentlemen now propose to impose upon us.

Of this amount, $165,000,000 is now held by mutual savings banks, of which there are only eleven in existence in the State, seven of

[illegible] are in Pittsburgh and one in the city of Pittsburgh, the other [illegible]

In Pennsylvania there, with a total of interest bearing deposits [illegible] as stated above, if we collect $165,000,000, being the amount of deposits in mutual savings banks in that State, we have a total of over $400,000,000 subject to the provisions of this plan of [illegible]

[illegible] million dollars are amount greater than the total go- [illegible] deposits" in all the national banks of Connecticut, [illegible] Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana com- [illegible]

An amount greater than the total of individual deposits in all the national banks of Kentucky, Arkansas, Tennessee, Michigan, Montana, Wyoming, New Mexico, Idaho, Utah, Nevada and Arizona combined, and almost equal to all such deposits in all the New England States combined, and yet these gentlemen would regulate these vast interests without taking heed.

In the amended proposition (see note 2 on page 16 of bill fixing [illegible] it is proposed that in each State the investments should be such as provided by the law for mutual savings banks.

In Pennsylvania, mutual savings investments are limited to United States bonds, State and municipal bonds, and first bond and mortgage.

Imagine gentlemen, if you will, the enactment of this bill as proposed, and the requirement that in Pennsylvania four hundred millions of dollars must be taken from the ordinary channels of trade, and all the securities or loans represented by that $400,000,000, converted and then replaced in United States securities netting two per cent., and somewhat upwards, or in State bonds, or in municipal bonds now netting four per cent. or less, or in bonds and mortgages, and contemplate the condition that the Keystone State banks and people will have fallen upon. Business would be shaken—credits must be withdrawn, which must be stopped. Interest rates will oppress the business borrower. Municipal and Government bonds would be at such figure as to make it impossible to net more than 3 per cent. on investments, and every bank in the State of Pennsylvania would, as a last resort, be scrambling for first mortgage bonds, which might offer a little larger rate.

And then imagine the Pennsylvania banker endeavoring to realize a sufficiently large sum to pay the current expenses of his institution—to pay a reasonable dividend upon his capital invested, and to pay a large per cent. rate at least to his depositors, and yet, Nomine mutato, haec fabula de te narratur. The Law Committee says several States are in the same predicament as Pennsylvania.

It will be readily seen that a large proportion, indeed, the greater portion, of a bank's deposits must be withdrawn from current loans, from discounting, from commercial paper of any character, and invested as above. This means that the bulk of the bank's deposits must be taken in the first place from its use in the community where the bank is located; second, that it must be invested, probably abroad, the bank seeking the great cities of the East or of the Middle West to find the character of new securities required by law. It means that the rate of income, discount, or interest, which probably in former conditions realized from 5 to 7 per cent. for the bank, must be abandoned, and that a very much less rate, possibly not exceeding 3 to 3½ per cent., dependent upon the character of the investment, and also the premiums required, would be realized from such investment.

It means that the bank with an income of one-half or a greater amount of its deposits, not exceeding in gross 3½ per cent., must pay its current expenses, declare a dividend on its stock, and pay, where interest is paid, at least 3 per cent. to its depositors. A mathematical proposition which ought to reach any banker's mind and attract his attention.

It is easy to see that banking under such circumstances would be impossible. The profits that might be made from the business of the active side of the bank would not meet the absolute loss constantly accruing on the savings deposit side of the bank. By reason of the liquidation of this large amount of deposits invested at home, in home business paper, as the case might be, and its reinvestment in a class of securities which probably would promptly find itself unable to meet the home demand for loans, the bank would be compelled to deny its business depositor the accommodations he was accustomed to getting, because of the fact that they were short of funds. The customer would speedily find a new bank to deal with and the business customer and depositor would be lost to the institution. That is to say, the bank's ability to take care of its customers and the business in its locality would be reduced probably not less than one-half by the stroke of the pen which would approve such a law.

Again, in what amount would this be likely to affect the banks? Our New England friends speak of this matter in a very light mood, as though what they call "Savings Deposits" were insignificant in amount, yet an examination of the statistics shows that in almost every State in the Union, the so-called savings deposits equal or exceed one-half of the total of all deposits. The Monetary Commission has ascertained that "Savings Deposits" include practically all of the classes of deposits I have mentioned above, and in classifying the different kinds of deposits I find that the total called "Savings Deposits" of the Monetary Commission is approximately the total of all those different classes of deposits which I have mentioned above.

It is fair to say that the Law Committee of the American Bankers' Association has seen some light on this phase, and says: "The investment standards of many States seem to be impracticable in operation; as, for example, those of Pennsylvania, Missouri, Indiana, Wisconsin, Minnesota, and West Virginia."

Again how would this proposed plan affect the State as a business community? The withdrawal of a great percentage of the deposits of all the banks from local investment and the sending of such funds to remote points for investment would immediately put upon merchants, industries, etc., etc., the necessity of paying in whole or in large part their loans to the banks. It would debar them in large degree from ability to discount their current paper. It would make it impossible for the general mass of merchants and business men to obtain sufficient accommodations for their business in their own State; would compel them to go abroad to endeavor to get some portion of the money back to the State, by borrowing what was sent out of the State under the process of this law; and if their credit, which while good at home might not be established abroad, was not sufficient to enable them to obtain such loans, it would mean the closing of the doors of the industrial plants, the abandonment of business by the merchants, and the cessation in large degree of every useful activity which goes to build up a State. It would be a mistake to imagine these statements to be either exaggerations or not founded upon facts. Any gentleman who will take the trouble to analyze the conditions, understand the statistics and use his grey matter for a very short period will see that the effect upon the business interests of the State would necessarily be ruinous.

Take the illustration of an industrial institution. Manufacturers as a rule are depended for a certain proportion, and usually a large proportion, of working capital upon their ability to make loans from the banks or upon their ability to discount their business paper promptly, thereby securing from the earnings of their business sufficient funds to renew the output from time to time as required. Under this method their loans in part would have to be called and they would have to settle. Their discounts would have to be largely diminished, because the banks would not have the money. Employes would be put in a seemingly hostile attitude to the conduct of the business, for this reason, that under present conditions the factory pays out large amounts for labor. The laborer monthly pays his household expenses and other current bills and prudently puts the rest into the bank for the rainy day. The bank takes the aggregate of these deposits, reloans it to the factory or discounts the factory's bills, and these moneys make an unbroken chain, benefiting the factory, benefiting the laborer and benefiting the bank and all persons allied to any one of these classes.

Under the proposed law, as soon as the laborer's money goes into the bank, notwithstanding he has earned it in the community, and notwithstanding the industries of the community depend upon it for continued assistance, and notwithstanding the laborer's interests are all with the factory which supports him, yet the bank is compelled by these wise doctors to take his money and send it to New York, Philadelphia or Chicago and buy Government bonds or State bonds or other securities, the result of which is that the funds deposited by the laboring class or the artisan class, whether in small or in large amounts, is forcibly taken from the community where it belongs without benefiting the depositor, and bring distress, if not worse, upon the whole business community.

These conditions are so apparent and plain that it needs merely the mention of them to convince a reasonable mind that the plan is a plan of a theorist and can receive no encouragement from the practical mind, that depends upon its toil for its living, and that knows that in order to live it must directly or indirectly give aid to the employer, who offers the opportunity for labor.

Again, this lack of funds so occasioned in any community necessarily will raise the rate of interest, and the extra moneys must come from abroad. This will not only be a hardship upon the manufacturer and the borrower, or the discounter, but will have the effect of making the large bond houses, the brokers' houses of the great metropolitan cities, a clearing house, or place of exchange, upon which directly or indirectly every rural community in the United States will depend for funds in order to conduct the modest business which heretofore they have conducted with the funds of their own community in their own way. Perhaps there is method in the great interest taken by some metropolitan bankers in urging this scheme.

I think I have heard somewhere something unpleasant said about Wall Street. The present banking system, with its reserve requirements, its lack of short time domestic bills and the consequent flood of idle money to New York, has made and maintains Wall Street, and the provisions of this bill will double its iniquities.

It is difficult to conceive of a greater condition of financial entanglement and distress than must necessarily follow the taking of large amounts from a community where it has been earned and properly belongs and sending it to some other locality for them to farm out at an advanced rate of interest, leaving the community to which it rightfully belongs destitute and prostrate.

It is apparent, then, that thinking along these lines it can be demonstrated that to the banker, the manufacturer, the merchant, the professional man, the artisan, the laborer—to everybody in every community—this new process of business methods would be injurious, distressful and destructive. These features alone are of danger to the banks, and the danger to the community from the enactment of any such bill ought to be enough to make every banker give heed and not treat this matter as a mere academic discussion for the amusement of an idle hour. Segregation is one problem; investment is quite another, and yet they couple the two and try to force results. The end must be disaster.

You cannot divorce the individual from the community. Mutual assistance is the only key to prosperous community life. Adapt yourselves to new conditions, but do not expect the millennium to-morrow.

American banking is a popular growth from the soil of popular need. It is not an experiment or product of greed. It is ruled by experience, and controlled by public demand. It is the finest exhibit of morality in business, and the most notable illustration of fidelity to trusts. It is greatest in the efficiency and honesty of its agents, and weakest in the weakness of its statutory control. It has built up communities, and communities have given it faith and strength. It has built up a great nation by its integrity, its adaptability, its wisdom and its power. It will always tread where wisdom leads, but will not follow a will o' the wisp. It will not tear down what it has builded at fancy's call, nor go back to the weakness of childhood and be garbed in swaddling clothes at the beck or nod of those who do not understand or appreciate its virtues.

Let those who wish to revolutionize beware lest they merely destroy. An accurate understanding of local conditions and community needs will broaden views, eliminate fancies and conserve the best. The only merit in the proposition is separation. Restricted investment is the only panacea in crude banking. Modern methods and moneyed capital have long since relegated these primitive methods to the junk heap. Capital skilfully employed is a vastly better security for a depositor than respectability. The financial world moves forward, not backward.

The President: The Chair suggests that the nominations of the Committee be closed and that the Committee, if they desire, retire, so that they can bring in the names before the adjournment of the meeting.

I have allowed the invited speakers a little more time than was allotted, and I will have to confine those who discuss this question to the five-minute time. I do not want to offend any one, but I will have to ask that, as our time is passing.

Mr. J. C. Drake, Los Angeles, Cal.: Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Trust Company Section, I did not expect to make any remarks whatever, and am not prepared for it, and will ask your time-keeper to cut me off when I reach my five-minute limit. But after the remarks on both sides of the question, I feel that I am going to stand five minutes any way, and especially having come in from that far distant State known as California, and where the interpretation of the law was given to you by one of the speakers. It happened to be my unfortunate duty to be one of the members of the State bankers who worked with the State Legislators in forming that law. We made a special effort by increasing the compensation of the Superintendent of Banks' salary to $10,000 per year to get a practical banker to interpret the law. We had a clause in the law that a man must have five years' experience in banking and at least three years to be in our own State. When it came to the politicians they scratched out the qualifications and we were landed with a politician for Superintendent of Banks. That has been the most hurtful thing to the carrying out of the bank law of that State which requires segregation. My institution was one of the first to adopt or adjust itself to the new method of keeping its books, and we were at once confronted with the question of stopping making commercial loans in order to arrange the segregation. The whole gist of the business is it is difficult to get a logical argument on either side by reason of the want of strict definition of "Savings Account." The legislators want us to see that the deposits of the poor are better protected than the deposits of the rich. The national laws do not permit national banks to loan on real estate and various other well-known securities, nor called long-time loans, which has caused the State banks to make such rapid progress in our country.

Each State should be permitted to designate and define the character of investments best suited for its own community.

The segregation has come to California to stay there. Its defects are due to the fact that we open the door to so-called "Savings Accounts" in excess of the places in which they can be invested. We have the competition of the national bank desiring to get more funds because the inducement to deposit is greater, as they are permitted to withdraw it by check.

It has always occurred to me that one of the proper definitions for "Savings Accounts" was a fund deposited which could not be withdrawn by check or on demand or except upon presentation of the pass-book.

Mr. F. J. Wade, St. Louis: May I ask the Chairman a question? What do you regard a certificate of deposit?

Mr. Drake: A certificate of deposit is a loan to the institution for that length of time.

Mr. Wade: Not a savings account?

Mr. Drake: Not a savings account. That is an investment of the rich man. We have no such people with us.

Now, if we want to legislate for the poor, we should define the amount they are permitted to deposit as a "Savings Account"; then we will get the best rate and can carry investments accordingly. My time is up, gentlemen.

Mr. John G. Reading, Williamsport, Pa.: It seems to me, gentlemen, that the subject should be dropped for two reasons: First, because the Committee of the General Association reported to the Council of the Administration that it was a practical impossibility to secure segregation of deposits in the States generally of the United States, and that suggestion or recommendation on their part was adopted by the Council of the Administration. Therefore, so far as this Committee's report is concerned, it has ceased to be a practical question, in addition to which, the Chair having ruled that no motion would be made for its adoption after this debate, it has ceased to be a practical question. It is one purely of theory, and it is purely of theory notwithstanding the fact that Michigan, New Hampshire and various other States, California included, may have segregation laws for the reason that none of them has been put to the test. Not one of them. They are precisely in the situation that the bank guarantee law in Oklahoma was before that bank in Oklahoma failed. It was a beautiful theory, but it fell down at the first time it was put into practice. And so this segregation of deposit is a theory, and it is absolutely nothing but a theory. And upon what is it based? Upon a demand by the people for the segregation of savings deposits? Absolutely no. No one ever heard of a depositor coming in and asking to have his savings deposit segregated as to assets and investments. Not one of them. And no one ever heard a man or woman come in and say, "I am a poor man: I am a poor woman: therefore, I want my deposit put in some separate investment and separate place and kept in a different box." It is not in response to a demand from the public any where. It is absolutely a response wherever it has been adopted, a response to a theory. Now, what is it, and upon what is the theory based? Upon the anathema of American politics, and you may talk until you are tired and you will get no definition of saving deposit that does not have upon it this earmark, namely, that there is a class of people who put their money in banks or trust companies who ought to be distinguished from every other class. It is precisely the same vile thing that appears in our politics when the laboring class, for instance, says we must have different legislation from that which applies to the capitalistic class. That is the only appeal of segregation of deposits, emphasized upon the class distinction, and class distinction is the last thing on earth that a true patriotic American ought to be willing to foster, now or ever. We are all alike. I don't mean to say that our color is the same; I don't mean that our adornments are the same; but in the eyes of the law we stand upon the same footing or we are not really a democratic republic, and in our legislation with reference to this financial question we should abolish rather than foster the institution of this abominable anathema of class distinction.

Mr. Jay: Mr. Chairman, the remarks of the last speaker make me feel that the imagination is very generally developed in Pennsylvanians, for he has put into the mouth of our Committee a recommendation which we never dreamed of and never made. He said that we have stated in our report that segregation could not be adopted throughout the country. May I say that our early recommendation, and this was adopted by the Executive Council, was the following: "That at the next meeting of the Association in Detroit an entire session be allotted to the discussion of segregation of savings deposits." And that this recommendation, through his efforts and those of others, was tabled. (Applause.)

Mr. W. F. McCaleb, San Antonio, Texas: I cannot sit here and hear a gentleman give utterance to the expressions which are entirely apart from the vital subject before us. The last speaker, for instance, attempted to say that the question of segregation of savings from commercial accounts is a question of class. I cannot see that he knows at all. The man who cannot conceive of there being two special forms of accounts, one savings and one commercial, it strikes me is afflicted with a species of disease that I shall not attempt to analyze. (Laughter.) We have in Texas, for instance, a savings law where there is segregation of the account. A man comes in and says, in my bank, for instance, "I want to open a savings account." He is then given the instructions or rules guiding him in the case, and that is a definite savings account, and we have laws controlling the investment of our savings account. Now, then, the banker in this day faces the postal savings bank and who faces the guaranteed laws in five several States of this country who still sits by and says, "We are not going to segregate the account or offer better security of deposits," is sitting in the dark. Whether or not you approve or whether or not you believe in it, you are certainly on the march towards the segregation; you are certainly working toward the guarantee of security on certain classes of deposit, and when a man comes and says, "I want to open a certain class of account," you are going to open it for him. That is as inevitable as progress along any line. It is inevitable and you cannot avoid it, and I say to you, gentlemen, every one of you bankers, when you face the propositions in the future of postal banks in every city, and a dozen of them, perhaps, in your own immediate town, you are up against the proposition of segregation or guaranteeing or securing of deposits, and your individual depositors are going to come along that line and put their balances in those banks, and they will buy the bond and take over the funds.

Mr. Weed: May I ask a question? You have a segregation in Texas for savings account?

Mr. McCaleb: We have.

Mr. Weed: You have separate investments for savings accounts?

Mr. McCaleb: Yes.

Mr. Weed: Are you allowed to invest in commercial paper?

Mr. McCaleb: Not in our savings deposit; our savings funds are always invested in the first mortgage.

Mr. James: Then, if your money is sent here, you have it sent back for industrial development.

Mr. McCaleb: We have not reached the point that industrialism enters into our affairs to any extent. When we come up against that proposition I hope it will work itself out as it will work itself out in every community, as in the entire industrial system.

Mr. James: May I ask if you know anything about the industrial conditions or financial conditions in Philadelphia?

Mr. McCaleb: My dear fellow—

Mr. James (interrupting): I beg your pardon: I am not "Fellow."

Mr. McCaleb: I beg your pardon. I meant to say, I could not possibly absorb as much knowledge of Pennsylvania conditions as the Honorable Speaker.

Mr. James: I think that is correct.

Mr. McCaleb: Entirely correct.

Mr. Clarence T. McNeille, Chicago: Have you to-day a surplus in your savings bank department that you invest in savings bank securities?

Mr. McCaleb: We have a distinct surplus, and carried as such as protecting the savings department.

The President: I regret to have to call the time.

Mr. Goff: Mr. President, here is Mr. Julius H. Haass, one of the Detroit bankers, who has just come in, and it is very interesting to me to get the practical experiences of those who have had experience operating under this principle of segregation. I, therefore, ask the Chair to call upon Mr. Haass to give us the experience in Michigan, if he would.

The President: Mr. Haass, Would you like to hear from him?

Mr. Julius H. Haass, Detroit, Michigan: I haven't very much to say, Mr. Chairman, except that the segregation law has worked out in Detroit not through any political motives, I think, because it was through popular demand owing to a failure of a bank here in the city in 1902 in which in the commercial department there was a lot of over-certifications, and that was the Old City Savings Bank. The Savings Department was doing business legitimately and undertaking to buy bonds and mortgages according to the State law. They had a certain segregation law but it was not made as firm as to-day. Politics did not seem to have anything to do with it, but the savings department through the decision of the court were somewhat tangled and uncertain, but they paid the savings deposits separately and paid them more on the assets they knew were invested from savings deposits. The law was afterwards strengthened, and in the Michigan Law the savings deposits are invested in mortgages and—well, I think you know all about how they are invested, and it is not necessary for me to say that.

A delegate: Go ahead.

Mr. Haass: They are invested in mortgages and bonds. That is to say, 51 per cent. of the assets. And 15 per cent. in cash, or over, and the balance in collateral loans on commercial paper. Now, the assets and cash and books are entirely separate. If the bank should fail, why, the savings deposit and the savings loan are there. We liquidate those according to your law; your commercial loan and capital and surplus which is invested is also separate. If there should be any choice in the savings bank investments, it will share equally with the commercial deposits out of the capital investment, and so on. And it would seem to me all savings investments are made in a little different character—workingman's money. I don't think that is class legislation. In your commercial department you make loans on credits to business houses and the loans are to a certain extent different, in other words, unsecured loans—business houses require loans and keep balances therefore, and the business, while I don't say it is safe, I like commercial paper very well, but it is in a different class than the loans of a savings department. The assets, however, are quicker, but they are not always collateral loans. Loans on securities, and they are not mortgages. And we consider our real estate mortgages in this city as a prime asset when properly picked out. My experience in Detroit for 25 years while I have been here, since 1889, and I think if a bank should fail to-day you could segregate these savings loans. They are marked plainly on your books, the banking department examines it and sees that it is done plainly, and you could liquidate the savings department separately. That is about all I have to say.

The President: Thank you very much.

Mr. James: I understand, that 49 per cent. of your deposits that are invested are either in actual cash or represent local investments, called "demand" or "short time investments."

Mr. Haass: We can't do that.

Mr. James: As to 49 per cent., they may be of that charter.

Mr. Haass: Yes.

Mr. Thomas W. Swan, Amsterdam, N. Y.: I should like to say a word. I am interested in the discussion and come from a rural community and have done business for several years in the suburb not in the city, and I want to know how this segregation law would affect the business of banks in medium size cities, say, 25,000 or 30,000 population. That would depend greatly, of course, upon the securities in which the investment of the savings account have to be made. Now, if the investments are classified according to the Savings Bank Law of New York State, would it not tend to make the Trust Companies Savings Banks, and would it not be difficult for the Trust Companies to compete? They could not compete on the same basis with national banks, they not being under this law, and I don't see how it would be fair to the Trust Companies to place them under such a law unless some legislation were taken nationally at the same time, for national banks, put them in the same class and having them invest in the same class of securities. It seems to me if such a law affected Trust Companies it might have a tendency to drive Trust Companies into the ranks of national banks. It would simply make the Trust Company another savings bank.

And referring to the remarks of Mr. James, of Pennsylvania, it would seem as though it would tend to bring those investments into a class of securities which would not benefit the community. I have in mind a city in which the accounts are kept in several national banks. They don't pay a cent's worth of interest, because they simply cater to the commercial business, and the savings bank is paying the savings accounts. That doesn't work very well for the accounts, because they are accumulating quite a lot of money—more than the national banks have—and that money goes outside of the State for investment, and in consequence several business men, many of the larger ones, have to go to New York for their balances for their operation, and the Trust Companies working under this segregation law would be simply turned into a class of savings banks and would not help the cities in the least, whereas the Trust Companies operating in that town paying interest on deposit would have the deposit which might be used in the further development of the city.

Mr. Kauffman: Just one word. General Hancock was ridiculed throughout the country in 1880 when he said tariff was a local question. He was not so far wrong, I believe, judging from the general agitation of a politician of the country to-day. It seems to me the question of the segregation might be very largely taken as under General Hancock's mind. The laws and conditions that apply to the New England States that have for years been working under mutual savings bank laws differ entirely from conditions in Western and newer communities. Take the State of Washington, that State from which I come, Tacoma, with some nineteen million dollars of deposits. Fully one-third are savings deposits and would come under the straight definition of Mr. Jay. Without referring at all to the savings deposits evidenced by certificates, I refer particularly to deposits placed and evidenced by savings books. The State of Washington has nearly two hundred millions of deposits to-day. There is not a bank in that State, scarcely one, whether it is a State bank, Trust Company, private bank or national bank, that does not maintain a savings department issuing pass books governed by rules and regulations such as are used in practically every savings bank throughout the country. Of the 180 millions or 190 millions of deposits of that State, the vast bulk of it goes out through the development of that great and prosperous farming country and the building up of communities. We need that money there and the investments are made locally. The laws that might apply to Massachusetts cannot at the present time apply to Washington. It seems to me that is a question wherein every State, every locality, must work out as the individual has to in his own or its own salvation. I believe that the future will ultimately determine that question. I don't believe that this is a question that this Section of the American Bankers' Associaion or that the American Bankers' Association itself has a right to endeavor to thrust upon any particular section of the country a law that will affect disastrously the interest of that Section. It seems to me that ultimately these matters will adjust themselves, but until they do and until that time comes I don't believe that it is wise for this Section of the American Bankers' Association or the Association itself to do much to put itself on record or to have a Committee to endeavor to carry through and force upon the various communities of the country a certain definite uniform method of this particular character.

Mr. Wade: It seems that the proponents of segregation savings deposit place their guidance and theory upon the fact that the poor man is to be protected. It is to protect the savings account because it comes from the rank and file of the people of this nation and country, and nevertheless if we will take the history of the state bank or the national banks where there is no segregation but where there are savings accounts, they will find the percentage of losses less there than they will find in the old fashioned, New England savings bank, if they applied to the doctrine of value to their assets at this present time. Much has been said about national banks not loaning on real estate, and therefore a different institution. Examinine the reports of the Comptroller of Currency and you will find that the national banks of the United States have more loans on real estate or more money invested in real estate than the trust companies. More than 20 per cent. of their capital is tied up in the very worst form of investments—real estate. And again take an institution such as I have the honor to represent, we have commercial accounts and we have savings accounts and we have certificates of deposits and we have a national bank as an adjunct. If I get a particularly slow loan and there is no place to segregate it, it would be segregated to take care of the poor people. If I get a particularly accurate piece of paper or short term real estate loan, I throw it in to the rich so if they want the money they can come around and get it. Now, gentlemen, you are dealing with a problem which I don't believe was ever intended should be taken up by the Trust Company Section of the American Bankers' Association. You are sending at the expense of my institution and others a committee through my State that don't understand conditions to tell us how we should conduct our business, when we have never lost a dollar doing as we are. You come up here and your committee makes a report in a very facetious and sarcastic way criticising us because we have the temerity to express what we believe to be an honest opinion. But they don't give you the reasons which we give them for opposing their views.

You take in Missouri, or take the line of demarcation of States in the United States West of the Missouri River and east of the southern side of California and there won't be one bank, savings bank, in Boston but will have more savings banked than that whole vast territory put together. And I tell you, there is not a distinctive savings bank in the State of Missouri. Why do you want to come and put up new laws against us who have built up at our expense and put our money behind the savings account, not as they do in New England, the many savings institutions but where we have put millions of capital and surplus earnings to protect the savings accounts. Why do you want us to segregate it? I am free to confess I would welcome it because every institution has slow loans. We have a building which we run. It could go into the segregated accounts. We have 880 thousand dollars invested in it, 10 per cent. of our savings account. We will say that is segregated, with every slow bond and with every slow piece of real estate among your active assets; if you are good bankers and good keepers of savings accounts, you will keep the active stuff to meet the other conditions.

Mr. Dinkins: Segregation is a very dry subject, and I think it is rather fortunate than otherwise that it should have some personalities this morning to enliven it. The opposition to segregation, it seems to me, is a good deal like a speech that a very distinguished American delivered once. He said: "The rich are not the poor. Men who have no children and no wives have no family." One gentleman from Washington said: "We don't want you to take the money that is needed to develop Tacoma or Seattle and invest it in bonds issued by Wall Street, a firm down in Wall Street." Nobody who advocates segregation, at least no member of a committee who investigated the matter of segregation, wants to do any such thing. The first speaker stated definitely that segregation was a general matter and affected all banks, but that the investment of the segregated funds was a local matter, and all he advocated was that we should enact into law, crystallize into law the custom of the best banks and bankers in the various States in which savings deposits are to be segregated from general deposits. Here, in Michigan, they invest part of the money in commercial paper; in Massachusetts they invest a portion of the segregated in commercial papers. So it seems to me that the opposition to segregation, those who oppose segregation, they present an appearance a great deal like the colored man who was directed one night to go on an errand, which took him by a graveyard, and his employer found he had not gone and he asked the reason and the man told him about the graveyard. "Why?" he says, "you certainly don't believe in ghosts, do you?" "No, boss, I don't believe in them, but I'se scared of them."

Mr. James: May I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. Dinkins: Certainly.

Mr. James: In your illuminating argument on ghosts I apprehend that——.

Mr. Dinkins (interrupting): Ghosts come out in the dark and are not illuminating, Mr. James. (Laughter.)

Mr. James: May I ask that question? You say this is a local matter and that in the matter of investment it is a local matter which you don't make any claim for, name no pretense to claim for, do I so understand?

Mr. Dinkins: No, sir. I said that the question of segregation was a general matter, but that the question of investment was a local matter and that the Committee had only suggested that such laws be passed as would crystallize the present custom of the best bankers in their communities.

Mr. James: The difficulty, perhaps, is a question of investment. You see, they have one law in Massachusetts, another in Michigan, one for Louisiana, or hope to get one, you have not got it yet; one law for New York, where they hope they are going to get one, have not got it yet; and another law in Missouri. The matter is not confined to State institutions. It is just as applicable to the national as State accounts, for the national institutions which cover the whole broad country. You are going to have one system of investment for those institutions, and if the system by the mere act of Congress differs from the system by the Legislature of the State of Michigan, the State institution is either going to have an advantage over the national institution or it is going to have a disadvantage. How are you going to reconcile those things?

Mr. Dinkins: Mr. James, that question came up at every meeting that the Law Committee held, that same question. It is an old story.

Mr. James: Will you be kind enough to elucidate it?

Mr. Dinkins: Yes. The way that will be handled is a good deal like we will handle national trust companies if they ever come to be. The national government will adopt as law in one state the laws of the trust companies and the savings banks of that state; not a very difficult thing to do.

Mr. James: That is as clear as mud.

Mr. Goff: Will you yield to me just a minute?

Mr. Dinkins: Yes.

Mr. Goff: In view of the fact we have two further copies assigned for discussion and it is now 12 o'clock and we have yet to receive the reports of the Vice-President and to proceed with the election of officers and directors, I move this discussion be closed in ten minutes. Will that afford ample time?

Mr. Jones: I second the motion.

Mr. President: The motion is made and seconded. All those in favor make it known by saying "aye;" opposed, "no."

The motion was carried.

Mr. Jones: This is a meeting of the Trust Company Section, and it seems to me that the interest of this Section in a general sense is to restrict this discussion to subjects that are especially germane to trust companies. I know of no trust companies in this section that are clamoring for a law of this kind. I find a great many defects to this segregation. I won't put it in Latin but there is a maxim that says it is a good policy to keep your sickle out of the other man's grass, or a Spanish proverb that you must not try to cut your leather out of the other man's hide. There is nobody in this Section advocating this law, and if we were to say that certificate of deposit which in character, in my city at least, are about the same as the savings that come from the same class of people, and the banks of St. Louis have as many certificates of deposit as the trust companies have savings—we haven't and trust companies clamoring for savings of that kind, but the banks who would not be affected by it think it would be very nice to have it applied to the other fellow; if we would say that with this segregation of savings there should also be a revision in the law so that time certificates of the banks should be segregated in the same way, this discussion would end and we would hear no more of it. I think from the standpoint of the trust company we can adjust these matters in our own State. We have the suggestion of segregation in our own State and the trust companies there are opposed to it—all are—and we should dislike very much to be met in the legislature by a recommendation of the Trust Company Section of the American Bankers' Association. The work of this Section should be educational, but it should not be the policy of a Section to seek to force legislation out upon trust companies upon subjects that are applicable exclusively to trust companies. This question affects the savings banks more than it affects us, and I move that at the close of the discussion the report of the committee be received and the committee discharged and I make this motion with the highest respect for the gentlemen who have been on this committee, and profound regard for Mr. Jay, but Mr. Jay's institution has no savings to segregate. It is a charming altruistic proposition from a number of these gentlemen, but those affected should have the right to determine the question. I make a motion now to be considered at the end of the debate that the report of the committee be received and the committee discharged.

Mr. President: I would state to the gentlemen that there is no committee and there is no report. It is simply a question brought up at the suggestion of some of our members for discussion so that the motion is unnecessary as there is no committee.

Mr. Cooke: While the general question is under discussion it may be interesting to hear one remark from Missouri. There is one trust company in Missouri that believes in this question of segregation. The institution with which I am connected had a few years ago a very large volume of savings deposits. It seemed wise to segregate it as to the liability and the assets. It was not possible to have them segregated in our own institution under the Missouri law, so we evolved a trust company to receive the savings. Consequently there is therefore one institution in Missouri whose deposits are savings only. The difficulties of doing this in other institutions, however, it seems to me to be somewhat exaggerated. It has been done under the law of the State of Kansas for certain purposes along the lines stated by Mr. Drake. That statute mentions the limits within which the accounts are to be considered savings and the limits of interest that may be paid on those accounts, and, in addition, as Mr. Drake suggests, you could go further and state the funds may be paid upon the production of the pass-book. Then you have a good definition.

Mr. Gray: Mr. Cooke, do you say you have your savings segregated?

Mr. Cooke: Yes. Organized a separate trust company.

Mr. Gray: And you own the stock of that company?

Mr. Cooke: The Fidelity Trust Company owns half the stock of the Title & Savings Trust Company.

Mr. James: What kind of trust do you administer in that particular trust company?

Mr. Cooke: We administer none.

Mr. James: Why do you call it trust company?

Mr. Cooke: Have to, because there is no practical savings bank law in the State of Missouri. I haven't time here to go into the reason why. There is a savings bank law in the State of Missouri, but no savings bank has ever operated under it except one which failed in six months. They had to operate under the savings bank law.

Now, if I am not exceeding my time, I should like to refer to one objection mentioned here this morning which includes the possibilities along the line of segregation of deposits. It seems the gentleman who raised this question did not push his analysis far enough. He said when a workingman walks into a bank he does the same thing a business man does when he walks in and makes his deposit. He does not. He is wrong. It is no more the same thing than to ship a carload of cattle and shipping a carload of coal. You get different vessels. If you ship cattle you get one class of car and if you ship coal you get an open gondola. There is no more danger in creating class distinction by segregating savings accounts in State banks than there is by establishing separate savings banks. (Applause.)

Mr. Jay: May I be permitted to add a word? It has been suggested by a number of those who have spoken that our Law Committee was advocating the passage of a law in various States [illegible] into States and advocating the passage of a law there. For the Committee I want to deny such suggestion most emphatically. My Committee, which includes two of the members of your Executive Committee, were instructed by the Executive Council to investigate the subject and to report the views of the committee as well as the views of as many members of the Association as we could gather. We made such report. We have no recommendations whatever in it except the subject shall be discussed here at Detroit, which the Executive Council decided to [illegible].

The President: Gentlemen, under the motion passed the discussion is closed. The next subject is also of interest to many of those present—"The advantages of co-operative publicity of trust company functions." What is your pleasure in reference to this discussion? It is now 12 o'clock.

By a Delegate: I move the discussions be continued for one hour.

The President: Is that seconded?

Mr. Dinkins: I amend that motion and suggest we discuss it for thirty minutes.

The President: Is that motion seconded?

Motion seconded.

The President: All those in favor make it known by saying "aye"; opposed, "no."

The Chair is unable to decide. I will ask it again. The Chair thinks it is lost.

We are ready for discussion on "The Advantages of Co-Operative Publicity of Trust Company Functions." What will you do with it?

A Delegate: I think the only thing we can do is to pass it up, and I offer that motion.

The President: If there is no discussion of that we will take the third subject. "Annuities and Pension Funds for Employees." Is there any discussion of this subject?

A Delegate: I move the two subjects be referred to the Committee again. Motion seconded.

The President: You have heard the motion. Those in favor make it known by saying "aye": opposed, "no."

Motion carried.

NEW MEMBERS OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Mr. Ralph W. Cutler, Hartford, Conn.: Mr. President, your Committee, having collected the names presented, begs to submit the following names to serve until 1915: Uzal H. McCarter, President of the Fidelity Trust Company, Newark, N. J.; Herbert A. Rhoades, President of the Dorchester Trust Company, Boston, Mass.; John W. Platten, President of the United States Mortgage & Trust Company, New York City; Sam W. Reyburn, President of the Union Trust Company, Little Rock, Ark.; E. D. Hulbert, Vice-President of the Merchants' Loan & Trust Company, Chicago, Ill.

Mr. Jones: I would like to move that the Secretary cast the ballot expressing unanimous sanction of the Trust Company's Section that the rule be suspended, being the unanimous sentiment of this Section for the election of the gentlemen named.

The motion seconded.

The President: The motion is made and seconded. Is there any objection? Without objection, the Secretary is authorized to cast the ballot for these gentlemen.

Mr. Philip S. Babcock, Secretary: The Secretary casts the ballot as instructed.

The President: The next on the programme is the general discussion. Is there any subject that any member would like to bring up at this time for the discussion of the Section? If not, the next is the roll-call of States.

I want to say, in explanation of this, gentlemen, that it was very much hoped by the Committee of Arrangement that there would be ample time to hear from the Vice-Presidents of the different States. This roll-call embraces a call now of forty-odd States, and what is your pleasure in reference to it? There are a great many men as Vice-Presidents who came upon invitation of your Section prepared to make a report of conditions of Trust Company affairs in their own States. If they have prepared a paper they have been asked to hand it in, and upon notice have a right to discuss the conditions in their States for five minutes. I make this plain so all may know the conditions of this roll-call.

Mr. Dinkins: I move that the roll-call be suspended and the various Vice-Presidents be requested to send in reports.

Motion seconded.

The President: The motion is that the roll-call be suspended and the various Vice-Presidents hand in their reports. Those in favor make it known by saying "aye"; opposed, "no."

The motion has been carried.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

The election of officers is next in order. Nominations. The President and Vice-President are nominated from the floor of the Section.

Mr. Oliver C. Fuller, Milwaukee, Wis.: I desire to nominate for the Presidency of this Section the gentleman whose active, earnest and effective work in behalf of this Section for a number of years past entitled him to recognition as our leader at this time, and whose charming personality has endeared him to every member of this Section who has come in contact with him since his membership, and I refer to Mr. William C. Poillon, of the Bankers' Trust Company of New York City, whom I nominate for President.

Mr. Jackson: I desire to take great pleasure in seconding the nomination of Mr. Poillon.

The President: Are there any other nominations?

Mr. Jackson: I move the nominations be closed.

Motion seconded.

The President: Gentlemen, you have heard the motion. Those in favor say "aye"; opposed, "no."

The motion is carried.

Mr. Fuller: I move the rules be suspended and the Secretary be instructed to cast a ballot of election of Mr. Poillon.

Motion seconded.

The President: You have heard the motion, gentlemen, those in favor make it known by saying "aye"; opposed, "no."

The motion is carried.

Mr. Babcock: The Secretary reports the ballot has been cast for the election of Mr. Poillon to the Presidency.

The President: The President appoints Mr. Fuller and Mr. Cutler to escort Mr. Poillon to the Chair.

Gentlemen, your new President.

It gives me a great deal of pleasure, sir, to welcome you on this platform and confer to you all honors of the position and turn over to you the affairs of the Section.

Mr. Goff: Mr. President, may I have just a moment, President Fries, before you retire?

Permit me to say a few words on behalf of the members of the Section. Fourteen years you have served this Section with distinguished fidelity and zeal. The records of the proceedings of our Association will confirm that you have ever stood for the highest ideals, for the best standards, standards that make for trustworthiness in the administration of Trust assets in the highest sense of the word. High honors have been conferred upon you—the highest in the gift of this Section. They have come to you not by self seeking, but as a recognition for your faithful service.

A very agreeable duty has been commissioned to me, to present to you on behalf of the members of the Section a slight token of their appreciation for your services, which it is the trust and wish of us all may be cherished by you even down to the sunset days of life as a remembrance of our affectionate regard. (Unveils loving cup.)

Mr. Fries: This is a difficult speech to make. I am—my feelings got the better of me. My heart is full of thankfulness and appreciation.

Mr. Poillon: Mr. Chairman, Gentlemen, and members of the Trust Company Section, this is one of the happiest moments of my life, and I thank you sincerely for the great honor you have shown me by electing me the President of the Trust Company Section. I promise you that I will do everything possible to make the coming year as successful as have been each of the past 15 years since the organization of this Section, and I know that this can be accomplished only with your earnest support and co-operation.

Again I thank you.

The President: It is now in order to nominate members for First Vice-President of the Association for the coming year.

Mr. Dinkins: I desire to place in nomination a man of conspicuous ability, a good lawyer, a good trust company man, a good citizen and a man who is well qualified to make presentation speeches, Mr. F. H. Goff, of Cleveland.

Mr. Sullivan: Mr. Chairman, I take very great pleasure in seconding the nomination of Mr. Goff. In doing so I know that I not only express the sentiment of the Bankers of the City of Cleveland, the home city of Mr. Goff, but I also express the sentiment of the entire Banking Fraternity of the State of Ohio.

And I am sure that Mr. Goff—I have known him well and favorably for many years—will faithfully and intelligently discharge every duty incumbent upon the position for which he is nominated, if you elect him here to-day.

I move, as I am on my feet that the rules be suspended and the Secretary cast the vote for the Section as a whole.

Mr. Fuller: Second the motion.

The President: You have heard the motion, gentlemen. All those in favor say "aye"; those opposed say "no." The motion is carried.

Mr. Babcock: The Secretary reports that he has cast a ballot for Mr. Goff for Vice-President of the Section.

The President: I announce that Mr. Goff has been duly elected the First Vice-President of this Section for the ensuing year.

Mr. Goff: Mr President and gentlemen, I am deeply grateful to the Section for the honor conferred upon me. I feel under personal obligations to my fellow townsman and fellow banker, Colonel Sullivan, for the kind things he has said of me. I will undertake to do my utmost for the service of the organization.

The President: I will say that the first meeting of a new Executive Committee will take place immediately after the adjournment of the Convention. Will the members of the Committee please remain.

The by-laws of the Trust Company Section provide that where the State delegations have not already elected their Vice-Presidents for the various States for the ensuing year that the Executive Committee shall elect such Vice-President. We will be very glad to receive any nominations that the members of the various States may make for this office of Vice-President of the various States.

The President: If there is no further business before the meeting, a motion to adjourn will be in order.

THANKS TO DETROIT.

Mr. J. J. Sullivan, President Superior Savings and Trust Company, Cleveland: Mr. President, it seems to me it would be proper for us before the motion to adjourn to place ourselves on record expressing our thanks to the banking fraternity of the city of Detroit, and I offer this resolution:

Resolved, That the thanks of the Trust Company Section of the American Bankers' Association are hereby tendered to the banking fraternity of the city of Detroit and to the newspapers and the citizens generally for the many courtesies and kind hospitalities which have been tendered to us and which we have seen the evidences of during our stay in this beautiful city.

Mr. Dinkins: I second the motion.

Mr. President: You have heard the motion. All in favor of Mr. Sullivan's resolution signify by saying "aye"; opposed, "no."

The resolution is unanimously carried.

Mr. Goff: I move we adjourn.

Motion seconded

The President: All in favor say "aye"; opposed, "no"

Motion is carried.

The Convention stands adjourned sine die.

The Postal Savings Bank and the Banks.

By THEODORE L. WEED, Director of the Postal Savings System of the United States.

After an agitation that lasted for all of forty years the postal savings bill became law on June 25, 1910.

The successful organization of the Postal Savings System and the rapid extension of what has been called "the poor man's bank," was one of the important events of the year immediately following. On January 3, 1911, the Postmaster General opened depositories experimentally at a single post office in each one of the 48 States and Territories then existing in continental United States.

Within a year after the conclusion of four months' experiment with these offices 12,000 additional depositories were designated, including the 7,500 important post offices of the presidential class. Additional offices will be selected at the rate of 1,000 a month.

The receipts at 6,000 of these depositories are being deposited in local banks, which also receive the funds from the remaining 7,000 offices situated for the most part in small places where there either were no banks or none willing to qualify. The total amount to the credit of depositors of the System on September 1 is estimated at $23,200,000. This sum stands to the credit of about 270,000 depositors, or an average of about $85 for each account. The figures given do not include $1,314,140 that have been converted by depositors into postal savings bonds.

It is needless to remark that the deposits are radically influenced by the restrictions contained in the Postal Savings Act, limiting the amount that may be deposited by one person to $100 a month and restricting the total balance receivable from one depositor to $500. It has been already demonstrated that the amount of money which the Postal Savings System causes to be withdrawn from banks is a negligible quantity, and that a very great proportion of the millions now on deposit represents money that would never have found its way into any bank. Practically speaking, therefore every dollar deposited by the Postal Savings System in the banks of the country is so much gain in deposits. This being true, it is clearly to the interest of the banking institutions to encourage and stimulate this new branch of the Federal Government. The present limitation on deposits in the United States is much lower than in nearly all of the European countries, although the per capita wealth and average income here are much greater.

Many foreign countries place no limitation on the amount that may be deposited in the postal savings bank; others, although having a limit on deposits, place it much higher than $500. In Italy, Holland, Belgium, and Sweden and several other countries there is no limit on the amount that may be deposited, but it is provided that no interest shall be paid on the deposits in excess of a certain sum. When the postal savings bank was established in the Philippine Islands by the American Government this plan was adopted, and I believe that the next step taken in the development of the Postal Savings System in the United States should be the amendment of the present law, so as to do away with the limitation on deposits, with the proviso that no interest shall be paid on any sum greater than $1,000. The proviso would remove all incentive for the transfer of accounts now deposited in banks, and would at the same time enable the System to receive large sums of money now hoarded by persons who will not avail themselves of the ordinary banking facilities, and to whom the question of interest is an unimportant consideration. If the law is modified in this manner I am convinced that when the System is fully established many millions of dollars now in hiding will be added to the circulating medium of the country and become useful in the channels of trade.

Instances of the inconvenience to patrons and loss to the Postal Savings System and to the banks from this unfortunate restriction might be multiplied indefinitely. The exact amount of deposits refused has not been recorded, but it is certain that the total amount aggregate millions. At Philadelphia, in the space of four months, during which a partial record was kept by the postmaster, $25,000 was refused. Such occurrences are reported almost daily from every part of the United States, most frequently from rural and mining districts and from city stations located in foreign settlements. The sums offered range from slightly in excess of the limitation to $20,000, an amount that was once offered in a Western town in the form of canvas sacks containing long-unused and tarnished coins. The sources from which this money comes and to which unfortunately it is now being returned by the hundreds of thousands of dollars are not the banks, but the homely hiding places of timid people unfamiliar with business and financial institutions. If the Postal Savings System could receive this money and the vast amount that has not been offered for deposit because of the limitation, the circulating medium of the country would be benefited to the extent of many millions, and the System would be in a position to perform a very important mission in times of panic when usually confidence is lost in the ordinary banking institutions. In such cases, it is reasonable to assume that frightened owners of savings and other accounts will withdraw their money from banks and deposit it with the Postal Savings System, by which it will be at once redeposited in the banks and made available for their use.

The Postal Savings System, as organized by Postmaster General Hitchcock, is essentially American, conceived in America by Americans and put into operation by them. The experience gained from observation of the European systems was of value, in that it taught us what was good to adopt and what was good to avaid. The result is we have a homogeneous system carefully wrought out, fitted to the especial needs of America, to its vastness, its progressiveness, its desire for promptness, its intolerance of needless delay.

The Postal Savings Act provides that the funds received shall be deposited in solvent banks that are organized under national or State laws and subject to national or State supervision and examination, it being stipulated that the word "bank" shall be held to include savings banks and trust companies doing a banking business. It is provided that the sums deposited shall bear interest at the rate of not less than 2¼ per cent. per annum. The Board of Trustees has fixed the rate at 2½ per cent. per annum, which is uniform throughout the United States. As security for the safety of such deposits and their prompt repayment on demand, banks receiving the funds are required to deposit such public bonds or other securities supported by the taxing power as the Board of Trustees may prescribe, approve and deem sufficient and necessary. The Board has divided into three classes the bonds considered to be acceptable for this purpose. The first class includes bonds of the United States, the Philippine Islands, the District of Columbia and Porto Rico. These are received at their par value as security for deposits. The second class includes bonds of any State of the United States and those of the Territory of Hawaii, which will be received at 90 per cent. of their market value, not to exceed their par value. The third class comprises bonds of any city, town, county or other legally constituted municipality or district in the United States which meet certain requirements. These are received at 75 per cent. of their market value, not to exceed their par value.

It will be observed that no bonds are acceptable except such as are supported by the taxing power, this being a requirement of the law.

Of the $53,000,000 in bonds now on deposit with the Treasurer of the United States to secure postal savings deposits, 69 per cent. are municipal, 14 per cent. United States, 12 per cent. State and 5 per cent. territorial.

The question will at once occur: What method is provided for apportioning the postal savings funds to the banks desiring to receive them and how is the amount which each bank receives ascertained? This is determined by the Postal Savings Act, which provides that:

> "The funds received at the postal savings depository offices in each city, town, village, and other locality shall be deposited in banks located therein (substantially in proportion to the capital and surplus of each such bank) willing to receive such deposits under the terms of this Act and the regulations made by authority thereof, but the amount deposited in any one bank shall at no time exceed the amount of the paid-in capital and one-half the surplus of such bank."

Under this provision the Board of Trustees has no authority to select any particular bank in a locality as a depository for the postal savings funds, but all banks located in each city that are eligible under the law are entitled to qualify and receive deposits in proportion to their capital and surplus. In many of the smaller cities only one or two banks have qualified, but in the large commercial centers so many banks have applied to receive the funds that their proper apportionment has become a somewhat complicated feature of the System's administration. For example, the postal savings deposits of the Chicago post office are now deposited among forty banks in that city in proportion to their capital and surplus. Thirty banks have qualified for the funds of the Philadelphia office and nineteen for the receipts of the New York office. In a number of other cities there are between ten and twenty qualified depositories among which the funds must be apportioned.

In order to prevent the embarrassment that would result from a continual readjustment of those apportionments owing to application from new banks, the Board of Trustees decided that after the first apportionment of funds had been made in any given locality no other banks should be allowed to qualify except on the first days of the months of January, April, July and October, it being required that applications shall be received before the 15th day of the months preceding those mentioned.

An apportionment of postal savings funds applies in the case of each bank only to funds deposited after the date on which it qualifies. Were it not for this regulation injustice would be done to the banks first qualifying as depositories through the transfer of what would frequently amount to a large portion of their deposits to banks which were not willing to receive the money while it was accumulating. Obviously it would be unfair to permit a bank to wait until the accumulated deposits amounted to a considerable sum and then on qualifying to demand the transfer of perhaps the greater part of the account which had been built up at more or less expense to the banks that have co-operated with the Postal Savings System from the beginning.

Now a word as to the procedure followed in bringing the System to the attention of banks as the service is extended. On the designation of a post office as a depository it has been the practice to send a letter to each eligible bank in the community where the post office is located, enclosing copies of the regulations explaining the operation of the System, and a blank form of application. On return of this form propertly executed showing that a bank is eligible under the law and is in a solvent condition, the application is approved and the bank is requested to forward the necessary security direct to the Treasurer of the United States, who passes on the acceptability of all bonds so tendered. The minimum initial amount of security that will be accepted from banks qualifying for the funds of first-class post offices has been fixed at $5,000, face value. In the case of second and third class offices the minimum amount is $1,000, while small country banks located in towns having fourth-class post offices are permitted to make an initial deposit of bonds to the amount of $500. Several banks in the larger cities now have over $300,000 in bonds in the hands of the Treasurer, and hold over $200,000 each of the postal savings funds, with the deposits growing steadily. On acceptance of the necessary security the Treasurer of the United States issues a formal receipt in duplicate, one copy of which is sent to the bank and the other to the Board of Trustees. The postmaster concerned is then directed to begin depositing in the bank to the maximum amount for which it has qualified.

All deposits of postal savings funds are made to the credit of the Board of Trustees Postal Savings System, except an amount designated as an emergency credit for use by each postmaster in meeting withdrawals by depositors when he has insufficient funds on hand for that purpose. The amount thus fixed for each office is deposited by the postmaster to his official credit in a depository bank especially designated for the purpose and is subject to his official check as postmaster. In the case of withdrawals the emergency credit is replenished from the next receipts and is thus maintained at the maximum authorized.

The law provides that if no bank desiring to receive the funds exists in any city, town or locality, or if none will receive such deposits on the terms prescribed, the funds shall be deposited in the qualified bank most convenient to the locality concerned. In such cases the postmaster is instructed after depositing the amount of his emergency credit in the designated bank to remit his subsequent receipts to the postmaster where the depository bank is located, who includes them for deposit with his own receipts. This procedure lessens the labor of the depository banks in acknowledging remittances from outlying offices and maintaining separate accounts with them.

In the operation of the System it frequently happens that one bank receives the deposits of several post offices which in some instances amount to but little, although in the aggregate they represent a considerable sum. Under such circumstances it is necessary for the bank to deposit bonds to secure the anticipated receipts from each of these offices. It sometimes happens that the aggregate amount of bonds that a bank has on deposit is out of proportion to the funds received, because as a matter of administration it is necessary to assign a certain amount of security to cover the Emergency Credit Fund of each office. A plan is now under consideration by the Board of Trustees, which, I feel sure, will meet with its approval, whereby the Emergency Credit as a separate account will be abolished and all funds deposited to the credit of the Board of Trustees. Funds received at offices situated in towns where no local bank has qualified will be forwarded for deposit to a postmaster where there is a qualified bank. Under this procedure a bank now holding the accounts of several post offices will deal only with the local postmaster, who will be authorized to withdraw from the account of the Board of Trustees not to exceed a definite sum in any one calendar month, which will be sufficient to meet withdrawals not only at his office, but at those of postmasters depositing their funds through him. Under this plan it will be possible to fix the amount of bonds which a bank is required to deposit with the Treasurer of the United States at a sum that will be in proper proportion to the deposits that the bank receives. As a further result of this change a bank will be required to keep but one account and to submit but one monthly report of postal savings transactions, no matter how many postmasters may be depositing funds with it indirectly.

Time will not permit of a further discussion of the details of administration, but I wish to refer briefly to a few questions of interest that have arisen in the operation of the System. The Federal Act provides that a bank to be eligible to receive postal savings funds must be organized under national or State laws and subject to national or State supervision and examination. The laws of the States of Arkansas, Mississippi and Tennessee were found to provide for no State supervision and examination of banks, and banks organized under the laws of those States are ineligible to qualify as depositories. The laws of Kentucky, although providing for supervision, did not require the examination of banks, but the difficulty has since been remedied by the enactment of a comprehensive banking law in that State. In California, Wisconsin, Michigan, South Dakota and Massachusetts laws were in force prohibiting any bank from pledging its assets as collateral security for deposits, and these restrictions naturally prevented banks in those States from qualifying under the law. The Legislatures of California, Michigan and Massachusetts have by recent legislation removed this obstacle so far as the Postal Savings System is concerned. In the remaining jurisdiction State banks are permitted to qualify by depositing securities owned individually by their directors or stockholders. The law is held to contemplate the deposit of funds in banks that are incorporated or clothed with the essential attributes of corporations by virtue of legislative sanction. Private banking firms are therefore not eligible to receive the funds. Savings banks may qualify unless prevented by State restrictions, but as the deposits in any bank must not exceed the amount of its capital and one-half its surplus, mutual savings banks having no capital stock are limited to the receipt of deposits to the amount of one-half of any surplus fund that may have been accumulated.

Many depository banks have asked if they may advertise as United States depositories. By long usage this term has become understood to refer to a bank that has been designated by the Treasury Department as a depository for public moneys of the United States. Banks are informed that there is no objection to the use of the expression "United States depository for postal savings funds" to indicate that they have qualified to receive such deposits.

Under the regulations interest on postal savings funds deposited with banks is payable semi-annually. At first, interest was computed on the average monthly balances; that is, on the average amount held by a bank on the last day of each month within an interest period. This method was thought to be simple and effective, but was found to be inequitable on account of the steady increase of deposits during a month. In order to remove any ground for complaint on the part of the banks the regulations were changed and interest has since been computed on the average daily balances; that is, the average amount on deposit each day during an interest period. While this method of computation necessarily involves a large amount of additional work in the central office, the Postmaster General was glad to make the change which has proved to be a more accurate basis for computing interest and one that seems to give general satisfaction.

In conclusion, gentlemen, let me assure you on behalf of the Postmaster General that the officers of the Department will always welcome an opportunity to co-operate with the bankers of the United States in promoting the welfare of the banks as well as of the Postal Savings System.

European Land and Rural Credit Facilities.

By Edwin Chamberlain, Vice-President San Antonio Loan and Trust Company, San Antonio, Texas.

My subject is so large and wide-reaching that I cannot hope to do any more than to touch on a few of its chief points of interest in the brief time assigned to me.

The movement to finance the farm and improve the rural credit system of the United States owes its inception to Hon. Myron T. Herrick, now Ambassador to France, who championed the idea by speech and pamphlet some three or four years ago. This interest originating from his experience as president of one of the largest institutions of that nature with over sixty millions of deposits, "The Society for Savings," Cleveland, Ohio, a mutual organization without stock.

It has spread over the country, and capable and enthusiastic advocates in almost every State are devising ways and means to supply the American farmer with money on easy terms of repayment, equitable interest, and give mobileness and fluidity to real estate mortgages. No financial question of recent time involving the common welfare has of a sudden enlisted such strong and disinterested support as that which is now backing this movement. The National Council of Commerce at Washington has indicated a decided interest in it. The International Institute of Agriculture at Rome, with representatives from over fifty countries, the United States now being represented by Hon. David Lubin of California, is devoting much of its efforts to issuing valuable literature regarding it. Hon. J. B. McKinley of Illinois, has introduced a bill in the House of Representatives for Federal appropriations for one of its objects. Hon. A. J. Gronna of North Dakota has introduced another bill in the Senate for the appointment of a commission of three experts to make an investigation of European methods. I understand that this bill was passed in the Senate by an unanimous vote.

The Southern Commercial Congress is urging the legislatures of each State to provide for the expense of two delegates to a general committee for the same purpose. The leading political parties have indorsed the movement.

President Taft is mapping out a definite campaign for government action with the assistance of Ambassador Herrick; and I bring to you to-day the direct assurance from the Ambassador that wherever the United States or any duly authorized and accredited body is prepared to study the rural and land credit systems and institutions, which have proved so effective in the most enlightened nations of Europe, their officials will see to it that every courtesy and kindly aid shall be granted to facilitate the research.

Such is the marvelous headway gained by this movement as a result of the appointment of the standing Committee on Agricultural and Financial Education and Development by the American Bankers' Association at New Orleans last year upon the motion of Ambassador Herrick and his earnest efforts.

Although the movement is now advancing by leaps and bounds, it cannot reach its consummation any too soon. The United States, with all its natural resources and the superior intelligence of its people, is backward and retrogressive in agricultural affairs. Farms by the thousands have been abandoned in the older States. Vast areas of arable lands lie untouched by the plough in the South and West. Irrigation, drainage and reclamation projects that could supply sustenance to millions are undeveloped. Reckless methods of cultivation have robbed the soil of its creative values. The price of foodstuffs has been so enhanced that complaints are heard on all sides of the unbearable cost of living.

The time has arrived for action. It is altogether fit and proper for bankers, like ourselves, to consider if the financial system is in any way at fault, and responsible for the situation, and if such be the case, devise some means to remedy the troubles that have arisen.

In the United States there is no company, national in its scope, that makes a specialty of farm mortgages; nor is there any credit arrangement especially adapted and devoted to the American farmer. The landowner or the farmer, if he wishes to borrow, is confined to the restricted money market of his immediate vicinity. The latter is receiving, through the Agricultural Department of the Federal and State Government, the fullest information regarding the best methods to follow to cultivate his farms, but one of the most important needs, that of capital, is greatly lacking.

This works well enough in some of the older sections of the country, but in the great producing areas of the South and West there is a scarcity of money that is seriously felt, and I, for one, believe that if we should adopt good systems for farm credits and put in operation institutions to afford an outlet for farm mortgages the situation would be materially improved at once.

In Europe, particularly in those countries which are most prosperous from the agricultural point of view, such systems have existed for a long time, while securities, based on real estate, have been made as liquid and convertible as Municipal bonds. Germany and France furnish the best examples. I will employ the few minutes that now remain to the agricultural co-operative credit societies of Germany, the Landschaften of the same nation, and the Crédit Foncier of France.

The first agricultural mutual credit society was started in 1849 in Germany by Herr Frederick William Raiffeisen. He was a poor and humble burgomaster of the village of Weyerbusch, partially blind and so weak and sickly that he was forced to resign from the public service. But in spite of his poverty and bodily afflictions his energy and philanthropic devotion were unbounded, and before his death, in 1888, he had the satisfaction of knowing that the idea for Europe which he had struggled so long and hard for had taken root all over Europe and in various other quarters of the earth.

The pure, so-called "Raiffeisen bank" is simply a co-operative association in which all members bind themselves to be jointly and severally liable without limit for all the debts it contracts. The chief features are that the association is absolutely local—its membership and business being confined to a restricted neighborhood. Its officers and employees must be members and give their services gratuitously, except the cashier, who is allowed a small salary. The value of the capital shares is nominal, only small dividends are paid. Most all the profits are put in the reserve. The societies accept deposits from members and outsiders and have savings bank regulations as to withdrawals. They lend only to members and when they have no money on hand for this purpose they borrow on the collective guarantee of their solidarity and their reserves. The older banks that have accumulated more deposits and larger reserves than they need make investments in the open market, but always avoid speculation.

Loans may run from a month to ten or even twenty years. Mortgages are not uncommon, but personal credit is preferred with one or two sureties. Short time loans, i. e., those granted up to one year with possible renewals up to two or three years, are sometimes repayable by instalments. Long time loans are invariably extinguished by amortization.

There is no delay or red tape in getting a loan. The farmer submits his application to the board of management. Inquiry is made into the solvency or rather honesty of himself and guarantors, and as to what use the money is intended for. If all this is approved he gives his note, properly endorsed, to the association and receives the money. It is absolutely required that the loan be used for a productive purpose, and in the way specified in his application, under penalty of immediate recovery and his dismissal from the society. The dates of payment are so settled that the periods and amounts fixed agree with the probable receipts of the borrower.

Reckoned by averages, the size of these loans is insignificant, while each bank has only about $445 of paid-up capital and 92 members. But the totals are stupendous. The 15,526 banks in 1910 had over $500,000,000 of working capital, with which they made $1,500,000,000 of loans.

Such are the simple working methods but enormous results of the small rural credit societies, which, as Kaiser William said to Ambassador Herrick, have brought prosperity to the Empire.

The business methods of the local banks need no further explanation, but the marvelous centralized system into which these units have been organized is elaborate and intricate. It took years to reach its full development, and before attempting to adopt it in the United States, careful study perhaps should be made in order to find out to what extent its success depends upon the peculiar habits, temperament and conditions of the German people.

In studying this question it must be remembered that Germany is the birthplace as well as the home of co-operation. There are co-operative societies for every conceivable purpose of production, transportation, preservation, and sale of agricultural supplies. They cover the Empire. There is one for every 2,600 of its inhabitants. They are grouped into federations. The largest one is the Imperial Union, to which most of them, including the credit societies belong. This centralization idea is also followed by the credit societies for themselves, and now there are thirty-five central banks and two general central banks in the Empire which equalize their funds and act as clearing houses for the whole system.

Co-operation in Germany was originally founded on the principle of self-help, but the State finally came to its aid. One of the general central banks referred to above was founded for this very object. The Province of Prussia gave it around $19,000,000, with which it makes cheap advances to the federations; and these in turn lend money to the societies at interest below the market rate.

The entire system of agricultural co-operative credit of France is also aided by the State, and has been brought by law under the supervision and management of the National Government through a bureau of the Department of Agriculture, called "The Credit Agricole." In 1896, when the charter of the Bank of France was renewed, it was compelled to advance $8,000,000 for the use of agriculture without interest and to pay in addition for the same purpose an annual tax of not less than $400,000, but which, in fact, has amounted to $1,000,000 in a year. This fund is distributed by the Bureau among regional banks who lend it to local banks at a rate that enables their members to obtain money at 3½ per cent. per annum.

During my trip abroad I learned of considerable complaints against the French agricultural mutual credit system; the charge being that politics had crept in and favoritism was being shown in the distribution of the funds. But I heard nothing but praise for the German system. There is no doubt that the credit societies there are entirely adapted to the small peasant farmers of the Empire. They are very accessible, work cheaply, grant loans at a low rate of interest, encourage thrift and prudence, afford a safe deposit for savings and have educated the rural population in the uses of credit. The interest rates vary in the different societies and countries, but it averages about 3½ and 4 per cent. for all Europe.

In the early days banks were created simply by contractual agreement, but now wherever they exist they can be organized only under general laws which contain strict provisions for their inspection and methods of doing business. As you may know, Massachusetts has enacted a law authorizing the organization of mutual banks. The Province of Quebec in Canada also has a similar law, but farmers have not yet resorted to them there. Japan and Mexico are putting similar methods into effect.

Several failures have occurred among the co-operative credit societies in Germany. But the "Credit Agricole" in France has never lost a dollar, due to the fact the societies prefer to form on the unlimited liability plan. This has made them careful in selecting their members and in making loans.

Under the laws, too, a loan must be paid by the borrower or his fellow members promptly when it falls due, or steps are taken to dissolve the society. So there is no accumulation of "dead ducks" among the assets of a co-operative credit society, thanks to rigid State and Federation inspection.

The co-operative credit societies deal only with personal or rather "Character security." The loans, as I have said, are quite small. The money for them is obtained mostly from the savings and deposits of the more thrifty members. So they stimulate in purpose the building and loan associations of America and do not come in contact with general banking business except where large central banks have been formed, or the State has intervened with its aid.

The Landschaften of Germany, on the other hand, take only real estate security. They are, however, founded on the principle of co-operation. There are twenty-five of them in Germany. Five were formed directly by the State, nine were formed by the Provinces. The rest were formed voluntarily. Besides these, there are five private land mortgage companies that have adopted the Landschaften principle of co-operation. The only nation that has copied these peculiar German institutions is Austria-Hungary, where they are called Boden-Kredit Institutes.

The Landschaft is the most ancient form of a mortgage-bond company. The first one was formed in Prussia in 1770 by royal decree of Frederick the Great, who forced all the princely but impoverished landowners of that Province to combine together in order to obtain funds to rehabilitate their run-down estates.

A description of this first Landschaft will serve for them all. It is a syndicate of borrowers, an association of landowners who are jointly and severally liable without limit for all debentures issued by it. Its sole object is to obtain cheap and facile credit for its members. It has no capital and pays no dividends, all profits being placed to the reserve. It is financed by debentures. These debentures are secured first by the mass of underlying mortgages, next by the reserve and finally by the unlimited liability of its members, and the amount outstanding must never exceed the face value of these mortgages. They are made payable to bearer, have no fixed time for maturity and are recallable at the option of the association, which is done by lot. All loans are for long periods—30 to 75 years—and are gradually extinguished by half-yearly installments which include, with the interest, a portion of the principal under the amortization arrangement that is common all over the continent.

When a landowner joins the association his title deeds are examined, his property inspected and given an estimated value. Should he wish a loan it cannot be denied provided he complies with all the strict formalities required. The maximum is two-thirds and the lowest one-half of the appraised value. The procedure of granting the loan is cumbersome, but absolutely assures against frauds and mistakes. All expenses are borne by the borrower. When everything is settled he executes his note and mortgage to the association which gives him not cash, but debentures exactly representing his loan, which must be a first lien.

If waste is committed or threatened the association may take possession of the mortgaged premises. In the event of default it may levy on all personal property and sell the same simply by serving notice. If the proceeds of the sale be insufficient, it may then attach the land, and if its managers cannot get enough out of it to pay up the over-due installments, it may obtain an order of sale simply by showing the arrears from its own books. The court cannot go into the merits of the case.

The characterizing features then of all the old Landschaften are co-operative credit, unlimited liability of members and the right of the association to take possession of the property of a debtor and force a sale without resort to regular foreclosure proceedings. This legal anomaly is owing to the fact that the Landschaften are practically Government institutions, and their officers quasi-public officials endowed with judicial and executive powers on all matters between themselves and the members, and these members are subject to their orders and are bound under heavy penalty to perform all duties imposed upon them. Thus the business of the associations is transacted at the lowest cost.

In 1893 nine of the old Landschaften founded a central Landschaft to which eight still adhere. It buys the debentures of the Provincial ones, taking an assignment of the underlying mortgages and issues against them its own debentures, which find a ready sale in the international market.

The interest the debt pays to the Landschaften from ½ to 1 per cent. higher than what their debentures yield. The highest return paid by debentures is 4 per centum. The total outstanding debentures exceed $700,000,000. The proportion of these funds that reached farmers is not specified. The Landschaft of Saxony does a heavy business in farm mortgages.

The success achieved by the Landschaften in mobilizing real estate securities in Germany excited emulation in her adjoining neighbor, and brought about the founding of the "Crédit Foncier of France," the greatest land credit institution that ever existed. Its promoters discarded the principle of co-operation, but adopted the business methods of the Landschaften, and also obtained for it the privileges that made those associations so effective. It is purely a joint stock company, and its chief object is to earn dividends for shareholders, but it stands high in the favor of the people, and has done inestimable good in France and the colonies, while it has served as a model for similar concerns in all other European countries, and in several South American Republics. The role of a regulating establishment which the great central bank of France plays in regard to commercial credit devolves, in effect, upon the Crédit Foncier in the matter of real estate credit.

At the time of its formation land and rural credit facilities were in a bad shape in France. Agricultural societies and conventions, prominent citizens, and the Legislative Assembly had discussed plans of ameliorization and voluminous books had been written and projects proposed without number. The outcome of the agitation was a national association of persons most deeply interested who framed distinct proposals for the establishment of a land bank. Then the Government took up the matter, made an official inquiry of all projects, examined economists, financiers, public officials and lawyers, and appointed a commission to carry on the investigation and make a report. The result was the enactment in 1852 of a general law for land mortgage banks, under which the Crédit Foncier was immediately formed.

This law provided for government control by the departments of Agriculture, Commerce, and Finance, and allowed the State and arrondissements to assist the banks by investing in their debentures. In 1854 the Crédit Foncier was given a monopoly of all rights under this law, and a subvention of $2,000,000 as a guarantee fund. The Government also bought a quantity of its debentures and permitted the other political divisions of the State to do the same. Furthermore the original triple system of control by the departments of Agriculture, Commerce, and Finance was abolished. In place thereof a simpler form was substituted. The monopoly was not renewed, but it lasted long enough to put the Crédit Foncier above the reach of all possible competitors and start it on the highway of success, where year by year it has steadily advanced under honest and capable management.

The legal privileges that the Crédit Foncier enjoys and the safeguard that have been thrown around it are these:

1. Its Governor and two sub-governors are appointed by the President of the Republic.

3. Three members of the directorate must be chosen from the chief officials of the Government treasury.

3. It may use the Government treasuries for the receipt of its dues, and the deposit of its surplus funds.

4. The taxes and stamps for registration and the transfer of its debentures are less than for others.

5. Its debentures may be made payable to bearer and the courts cannot recognize any claims by a third party for these bonds, except only in cases of loss or theft.

6. Trust funds may be invested in its debentures.

7. The mortgages it holds are not required to be registered every ten years as the general law provides.

8. By a special law it is afforded a cheap and speedy method of freeing the title to real estate of all possible claims of third parties. This proceeding is called "the purge," and when taken makes the mortgages absolutely prior liens.

9. It does not have to resort to ordinary foreclosure for the recovery of a loan. The court cannot grant the defaulter any delay. The mortgaged property may be attached by order summarily obtained from the local civil court. If a dispute arises it is also forthwith decided by the court. During attachment it has the right to all rents and returns of the estate, subject only to that of the Government's and the court costs. It can proceed without attachment to sell the property after due notice is given and published, in the event that interest or dues are not paid, or if waste or deterioration occur, the sale being made at public auction at the civil court, or by the court's permission—at a notary public's office. The proceeds of the sale are handed over to the company up to the amount of its claim, no adverse claim being allowed. Installments paid to it by a debtor cannot be attached by order of any court in behalf of a third party.

10. Its debentures may be issued payable to bearer and have no fixed time for maturity.

11. Its debentures may be made repayable with prizes and bonuses.

12. The amount raised by the issue of debentures must not exceed that of the loans due to the Company.

13. It can make loans only upon a specified portion of the value of lands.

14. The shares issued by the Company must be kept at the ratio of at least one-twentieth of the debentures in circulation.

15. The maximum rate of interest to its debtors is fixed by law.

16. It cannot buy or make advances on its own debentures.

The Governor of the Crédit Foncier receives a salary of $8,000 per year, and holds office for life. The two sub-directors receive salaries of $4,000 per year. Their tenure of office is also for life.

The Board of Directors are not salaried, but are paid for attendance at each meeting. None of their decisions are valid unless approved and signed by the Governor. They are not personally responsible for acts done by them as officials.

The Crédit Foncier grants mortgage loans only on first liens. The property must yield a certain and durable rent. It avoids loans on theatres, mines, quarries, and on properties of which the title is divided. The amount of the loan must not exceed that of one-half of the value of the property, or one-third of such value for vineyards, woods, or plantations.

Factory buildings are estimated only at their intrinsic value.

A borrower may repay in whole or in part any time, either in cash or with debentures of the company of the same series as the loan. The loan is liable to recall only if he sells the property without notice to the company or allows it to deteriorate. Interest is paid at the rate fixed by the Board of Directors.

The short term loans of the Crédit Foncier are repayable in lump, or by installments. The long time loans are repayable by annuities, which include the interest and the contribution to the amortization fund. They are payable half yearly in advance. They are determined by the interest rate in combination with the duration of the loan and are calculated to extinglish the debt within a period of ten years or more.

The Crédit Foncier may also make loans to municipalities without mortgage. The laws and regulations are the same in both cases. The loan accounts on mortgages and to municipalities are kept separately and the sums due thereon are preferentially assigned for the payment of the "land mortgage" and the "communal" debentures that are issued against them.

In addition to these two operations the law allows the Crédit Foncier to use any other system, with the Government's sanction, to improve the soil, develop agriculture, facilitate loans to immovable property and extinguish existing debts thereon. Under this clause of the statutes the powers have been extended so that now it takes the bonds of the big contracting and building company, and also lends money to a land mortgage bank in Algiers.

The Crédit Foncier may also receive deposits up to $20,000,000, one-fourth of which must be placed at account current with the treasury at a rate fixed by the Minister of Finance. Securities may be handed over in lieu of cash if he consents. The balance of the deposits must be invested in Government or Treasury bonds, or (with a few exceptions) in such paper as is accepted by the Bank of France.

In no other cases can the company enter into transactions not strictly connected with loans to municipalities or land-mortgage debentures business.

The capital of the Crédit Foncier now stands at $40,000,000 represented by 400,000 shares of $100 each. Its market price stands around $168. It paid a dividend of 5 per cent. of its profits and turned the balance over to the obligatory reserve in accordance with the law that requires not less than 5 per centum and not exceeding 20 per centum of the profits to be thus put aside each year until it equal one-half the capital stock. All amortization annuities, and such other sums as the Board of Directors may decide, also go into the reserve. It now amounts to about $55,636,000.

The total outstanding debentures of the Crédit Foncier now amount to $920,000,000. They were issued in series, the oldest of which dates back to 1899. They have no fixed time for maturity. But the annuities from the mortgages have been so calculated as to bring in funds equal to their face value within 60 years (in most of the 13 series outstanding), but as far off as 98 years in some cases. As soon as this happens individual debentures are drawn by lot and the holders are paid the principal, along perhaps with a handsome portion of the prize money that has been set aside to make the drawings lively. Without doubt they tell the secret of the great market value of these obligations. A $1,000 bond recently drew a prize of $50,000.

In conclusion, we see that the co-operative credit banks serve for providing personal credit facilities usually for small amounts and short terms. The Landschaften and mortgage banks deal exclusively with landed proprietors. It is impossible to learn in advance whether any one of the various classes of European banks could be adopted in its entirety here. It probably could not. This is not a one-idea country. It has many varying conditions, and what would do for one part, might not be good for another part. But there is no doubt that models can be found in Europe that might be used as a basis for devising systems and institutions suitable to the needs of the American farmers.

Provision for the establishment of mutual credit banks seems to be a matter of legislation solely for the different States, just as Massachusetts has already done. The organization of land credit is a question that involves national as well as State legislation. In order to give fluidity to farm mortgage securities, and afford them an outlet at home and abroad, a large central land bank with a Federal charter would, theoretically at least, be the ideal institution provided State laws regarding titles, foreclosures, and investments were made uniform.

The distribution of the millions of dollars that are pouring in an increasing stream into the postal savings banks presents a serious problem. The land bank might be employed to divert an equitable portion of these funds to agricultural uses.

The Savings Bank and the Community.

By John J. Pulleyn, Comptroller of the Emigrant Industrial Savings Bank, New York City.

No more important element in the economic life of the country exists than the resourcefulness, individual independence and character represented by the four and one-quarter billions of dollars on deposit in the savings institutions of these United States. This is true both in their bearing on the character and worth of the depositor as an American citizen and on the nature of the service performed by these savings in the hands of those who are entrusted with the conduct of these banks of the people. And if the men charged with the welfare of these institutions do not become awake to changing conditions, these institutions may lose much of these funds, now absolutely free from the combination of capital interests and serving the depositor solely. The loss in that contingency would be primarily a community loss.

To define this contingency and to point out the needs of the situation become a duty to one who can speak on savings banks. The desirability of applying the laws of New York to other States, the question as to the rate of dividend to be paid, the amount of surplus required as absolutely essential, the need of co-operation of mutual and stock banks and the necessity of watching banking legislation of all kinds are among the factors in a discussion of the problem now before savings bank officials. Do they realize for what the great system under their control stands? Are they mindful of the public's interest when they state that 3 or 3½ per cent. is all the people should receive as interest on their deposits? Should they not receive all that is earned, be it 4 or 5 per cent., after reserving a sufficient amount each half year to maintain a surplus that should be 10 per cent.? Such are some of the questions to be faced. We should, for example, take the public into our confidence, let them know the reason why a certain rate of dividend is paid and permit them to understand the application and workings of the law. The savings bank system is not nearly so generally known as it should be, and the activities of national and State banks and trust companies in establishing special interest departments indicate that the business is worth while. Postal savings are valuable because they act as kindergartens for other savings bank systems. Then they have drawn out of hiding many millions of dollars. As nearly 25 per cent. of all the money in circulation is supposed to be hidden away, the chance of some of this money being deposited where the rate is ½ to 1½ per cent. better lends itself to reasonable comment. Furthermore, there is the astounding disparity between the work performed by the savings banks in upbuilding the country at large and the comparatively negligible influence exerted by these institutions in public matters.

A comprehensive view of the situation demands an orderly statement of the origin and development of the problem. First, in order, is needed a short statement of the beginnings and purposes of savings institutions, together with their influence in inculcating thrift, as becomes the banks of the people. The evolution of these institutions to their present day status and their four and one-quarter billions of dollars on deposit come next, together with a brief classification, showing how these deposits are largely concentrated in the States with the most careful laws, and particularly in New York and Massachusetts. The duty of safeguarding deposits, the nature and conditions of the rate of dividend or interest paid upon deposits and the creation of surplus as a margin of safety need to be treated in turn, after which comes the high desirability of progressive management, facing frankly such questions as the advisability of branch banks and the function of postal savings. The benefits to the neighborhood and to the country in the investment of savings funds in local improvement liens and in public securities must be enumerated and discussed with reference to what would be the economic meaning of a transfer of these funds to the melting pots of the financial centers of the country, because savings bank officials were not alert to their public duty in its broader terms affecting the sound development of the national wealth and welfare. Foreign investment methods which might be imitated in the United States to the detriment of savings bank deposits require analysis, as does the delicate question of how far trustees of savings institutions are awake to the possible perils of new tendencies, perhaps inimical to the banks in their care. A few carefully framed queries to trustees, leaving the answers to be made by themselves, ought to suffice. Then the relation of conservative laws to strong savings institutions should be exhibited in the light of the remarkable illustration afforded by New York State. These points discussed in this order will give the problem and the remedy.

Savings banks or institutions for savings are of comparatively modern origin, both in Europe and America. They had their beginnings in efforts to better the conditions of the poor. In large part their purposes were in the nature of a charity, and the consequence is that they have come to be considered philanthropic or eleemosynary institutions.

The first savings bank of which we know in authentic manner was established in England in 1804. The first to be chartered in America was started in Philadelphia in 1816, the second in Boston in 1817, and the third in New York in 1819.

Regardless of the primary purposes of the founders, these institutions have in their results outgrown their early character. To-day they take their proud place in the front rank of the monetary powers of the country. In this development they have retained the provident and beneficial features characteristic of their first years, so that to-day in them may be found the savings of the humblest toiler with his hard earned, carefully saved pennies, as well as the funds of the frugal man who resists temptation to indulgences that he may put safely away the means which would have given him improvident luxury.

In a spirit of justice, therefore, to the millions of depositors savings banks should be regarded no longer as charitable institutions, but as banks of the people. Depositors in these institutions are not objects of charity, but the bone and sinew of our people, whose accumulations we point to with pride as evidences of our national growth and prosperity. They are the producers of wealth through labor effectively applied. They consume what they require. Their surplus is laid aside as an accumulating fund for future investment. Thus are the savings banks proud monuments, deserving well of the fostering care of the State.

Four and one-quarter billions of dollars are on deposit among the savings banks of the United States, and this vast sum represents the fruits of toil, the evidence of power, industry, thrift and independence.

Like most enterprises having their start in the natural economic order, savings banks have far outgrown in significance, usefulness and power the comparatively narrow scope and purpose of their original intent. They have become an important factor in our political economy. Having no special rights nor privileges, they affect no combinations of capital and they have their existence only in their original capacity. They become public benefactors. Yet they acquire no favors and have no monopoly of savings business. Their depositor is a better citizen, neighbor and friend because of the restraint imposed upon him by the possession of property. His savings are not merely deposited. They are invested in his behalf in the bonds of the United States, in the bonds of his own State or town or county or municipality, in the bonds of well-conducted railroads, or in mortgage loans on real estate in his own city.

Is any local improvement projected? The savings bank is often the capitalist who advances the necessary funds. How many public or corporate enterprises have been carried to successful completion through the agency of savings we may never know, but the character and kind of securities in which the moneys of savings banks are invested will be a suggestive indication of the power of these institutions in promoting public improvements and in aiding in the discharge of public obligation. The mechanic and the artisan have at the beginnings of their labor possessed the ambition to succeed in life and they have contributed out of their weekly wage a sum, no matter how small, to establish a fund which some day would mean a capital large enough to enable them to branch out into business for themselves. Most of the savings banks number among their depositors men who began in this way, who are successful largely to-day and who as a matter of sentiment retain a sum of money on deposit with the bank where they made their start.

On August 1, 1912, the aggregate savings deposits held by 3,100 of the 7,400 national banks amounted to about $85,000,000 or 12 per cent. of the total. The depositors numbered about 2,300,000. The total capital of the 7,400 banks was about $1,055,000,000.

The number of savings banks in the United States in 1912 is estimated at about 2,000, the amount on deposit four and one-quarter billions and the number of depositors about 9,800,000, or practically 10 per cent. of the entire population of the United States. These four and one-quarter billions of dollars of savings bank depositors were distributed as follows:

Six New England States	$1,375,000,000
Eastern States (New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey)	1,980,000,000
Southern States	95,000,000
Middle West States	360,000,000
Western States	15,000,000
Pacific States	395,000,000
Total	$4,220,000,000

These statistics show that 80 per cent. of all the deposits are in the Eastern banks and 20 per cent. scattered over a vast territory, thus demonstrating that adequate facilities are not provided for a large proportion of our people. In the State of New York, with its most carefully guarded savings bank law, 40 per cent. of the savings of the people of the United States is deposited. This important fact is due to the confidence inspired by a good law faithfully executed. The significance of this fact is accentuated by the realization that about one-fifth of the wealth of the Union and not quite one-twelfth of the voting population are in New York State.

Under the stringent provisions of the New York law and the extensive savings facilities accorded, we have an illustration of the best thus far provided for the safety and accumulation of the people and because of such features of safety and convenience the savings banks of that State are liberally patronized by the masses.

Massachusetts ranks next to New York in excellence of statutory provisions relating to savings institutions, and as a result of the confidence thereby inspired, such banks in that State hold one-fifth of the aggregate of all the savings deposits in the banks of the United States.

The people of New York and Massachusetts have on deposit in savings banks something more than 60 per cent. of all the savings deposits in all the country.

The New England States generally have very carefully guarded statutes with reference to savings banks, because institutions of this kind there, and likewise in New York, are organized on what is known in common parlance as "the old style"—that is, institutions organized under the law without capital, purely mutual and managed by trustees who serve without compensation. According to the intent of the law in these States, depositors should receive all the earnings less necessary expenses of administration.

In the eastern section of the United States almost every other person has a savings account. In the Middle West and Far Western States probably one in 500 of the population has a savings bank book.

In these outside sections we find savings banks organized as stock companies, where the interest of the depositor is equal to that of a stockholder and where the depositor secures a fair rate of dividend.

Outside of New England, New York, and a few other States we find statutory safeguards less carefully thrown about the depositor or laws not sufficiently strong to protect this great trust. Undoubtedly in other locations savings banks are as conservatively managed and conducted on as sound and safe a basis as in New York or New England.

Outside the sections discussed and in sparsely settled regions private capital cannot be expected to establish and maintain savings institutions for the mere purpose of encouraging habits of thrift among the community. Capital seeking investment in any profit-yielding venture does not as a rule adopt benevolence as a primary motive.

Since it is conceded that savings facilities, coupled with confidence in the banks, will encourage thrift, keep money in circulation, insure more home comforts and develop better class citizenship, the question naturally arises as to why an effort should not be made to extend the beneficent influence of sound savings institutions to the large percentage of our population which does not now enjoy the advantages common to those residing in or near the great centers of population.

The duty of the State or Federal Government is to provide safeguards for the protection of the depositors of chartered savings banks and postal savings to the full amount of their claims. Every dollar deposited, together with what that dollar earns, must be held as a sacred trust, and no laxity in this or in the administration of the law can suffer it to become a loss.

The increase and development of this great business should be guarded by wise enactments and by rigid and careful supervision. The great body and mass of patrons of these banks are poor, and their deposits are the sole accumulation they could make during years of toil and privation. There are exceptional cases here and there of persons of ample means who are depositors, but the number of such accounts is comparatively low. In a number of institutions, in the amount of pecuniary interest involved, in the character and ability of those interested and in point of honest and capable administration savings banks are on a par with every other moneyed institution or interest in the State or country. Their claim to wise, considerate and conservative legislation embracing rigid and thorough censorship of their affairs must not be denied.

If the conduct of the affairs of savings banks were not marked by prudence and strict integrity they could not have commanded the generous confidence of the people or grown to their present proportions, making them relatively one of the largest monetary groups in the United States.

Whatever faults are found in the management of savings banks, outside the human element, are due to the exercise of powers conferred by inconsiderate legislation. The great good which these institutions are doing in behalf of great public interests—Federal, State, municipal and local—should not be impaired now or in the future, nor should the confidence of the public be impaired or undermined. If there could be shown to exist errors in management or direction, or if the safety of the banks were jeopardized by too liberal a distribution of profits the safest and most expedient method of correcting such defective condition would be through the intervention of the State executive, acting through his Commissioner of Banks, armed with the proper authority and charged with the obligation to correct the errors at once.

The theory of every savings bank is that so long as it is solvent all the depositors will not want their money at the same time, and that a large portion of the deposits will be required to be kept permanently invested to meet the running expenses and interest to depositors.

Thus the greater the freedom from petty restrictions upon the judgment of officers and the trustees of these institutions the more beneficent the results, so long as the fundamental laws of the State adequately safeguard solvency and provide for sufficient supervision of the comparatively unrestrained judgment of the men entrusted with the conduct of the banks.

Legislation limiting the amount of dividends would result in injustice to depositors and is entirely against the spirit of the law creating mutual savings institutions. But compulsory law as to the amount of surplus each bank should maintain would be entirely consistent with public policy.

The problem of dividends and surplus is engaging the best thought in New York State and a solution of the problem may be found in a compulsory regulation of the surplus required of each individual institution. The active competition for savings accounts by national and State banks and trust companies has placed the savings institutions at a disadvantage, since to hold their deposits a rate of dividend on a par with the other monetary institutions is needed.

Notwithstanding legislation prohibiting other than savings banks from advertising as savings institutions, an evasion of the law gives these banks the opportunity of obtaining savings accounts under the title of special interest accounts and interest departments. Unless New York State should insist on legislation compelling savings institutions by statute to maintain a 10 per cent. surplus regardless of the judgment of the trustees, the result cannot be foreseen. But the mutual savings bank would be finally forced out of business, and the stock savings bank become the bank of the future, unless the trustees of the mutual banks should then come to a realization that a standard surplus of 10 per cent. must be maintained. The intent of the law regarding mutual banks is that depositors shall receive all the earnings less the necessary expenses of administration, but it lacks force as a compelling influence in building up and maintaining surplus.

The problem in regard to surplus was much accentuated by the prosperous times following the close of the war with Spain, when savings banks deposits within four years increased about 11½ per cent. At the same time an economic tendency towards higher rates of interest the world over set in, thus bringing about a fall in the market value of outstanding investment securities. While this decline bore no relation to the intrinsic merit of the bond, this wall was accompanied by an additional increase in savings bank deposits. Inasmuch as these banks are not allowed to retain their funds in idleness awaiting the favorable market, the statutory requirements to invest at once compelled the purchase of bonds in a constantly falling market. On the first of July last year deposits had increased to such a point that by further reason of the fall in bond prices the margin of safety had declined from 18 6-10 per cent. to 7 16-100 per cent. of the liabilities in a period of eighteen years. In 1909 and again in 1910 Superintendent Cheney of the New York State Banking Department commented upon the growing unsoundness of the situation and the need for very serious consideration of remedial plans.

In his report sent to the New York State Legislature last January Superintendent Van Tuyl of the State Banking Department had this to say:

"I wish to call your attention to the necessity of affording further protection to the depositors in the savings banks of this State by requiring every savings bank to accumulate an adequate surplus. While officers and trustees are usually judicious and conservative, the rivalry that almost necessarily exists between different savings institutions and the competition for deposits with national and State banks and trust companies that has resulted from those institutions paying high rates of interest upon what are denominated 'special interest accounts,' accentuates and increases the natural desire of the officers and trustees of savings banks to make as large a return as possible to depositors. This desire to make a large immediate return to depositors by way of dividends, usually miscalled 'interest,' is, of course, in direct conflict with the even more important purpose of accumulating a sufficient surplus to safeguard beyond question the deposits themselves and cannot be harmonized with it."

Superintendent Cheney in 1909 put the problem in this form:

"For twenty years or more there has been an almost unbroken decrease annually in the percentage of surplus on market value of investments to deposits, such percentage to-day being less than one-half of what it was in 1890. The safety of our savings banks is indeed undoubted, and there can be no successful challenge of the principle that every dollar of net earnings that can be so apportioned with prudence should be distributed to depositors, for whose sole benefit the savings banks have been established. But the qualifying words 'with prudence' deserve to be emphasized. Absolute safety of savings funds should always be the primal consideration. The surplus of a savings bank represents its margin of safety. Moreover, surplus adds to the earning power of the bank and the statute itself guards that surplus with jealous care by permitting no part of it to be paid out in dividends to depositors. It cannot be overemphasized that the management of every savings bank whose deposits are increasing should carry proportionate sums to its surplus fund at every dividend period."

The margin of safety for deposits is of more importance than the rate of dividend and that which tends to preserve and still further strengthen the security of deposits is of more primary value to the genuine savings bank depositor than the income. The average savings bank account in New York State last January was $530.60 and the difference between 3½ and 4 per cent. on that amount is only $2.65 a year.

The management of savings banks has not yet reached the highest state of efficiency, neither have savings banks throughout the United States yet realized the highest possibilities of these institutions.

Administration should be progressive. To that end a system under more uniform laws should be established and a more sympathetic feeling fostered in all the States, so that the best features of the laws and the practical rules of management might be made the common property of all. Progress would then be steady and wholly beneficial.

Each State should organize its system under the standard of New York experience. The individual banks should form groups, just as national and State banks are doing at the present day. After the formation of State associations and a national body the individual bank would remain the unit.

To start a savings bank, establish it in public confidence and build up its business to the point where its deposits make an impressive total; demand, besides a favorable field of operation, strict economy and careful attention and the exercise of wise judgment on the part of its management.

Branch banks were first considered in New York State about 1904, and the Banking Department then considered it feasible to establish branches in the counties throughout the State where no savings bank existed as a benefit to the community. Sparsely settled sections are not attractive fields for new endeavors, and profits would not warrant operation. The strength of savings institutions may be impaired by the additional liability incurred by establishing branches. The cost of obtaining business and maintaining branches might not compensate either the mutual or the stock bank, and, further, the confidence of a sound, going concern may be jeopardized by this additional liability. It would be better to extend the facilities in all States for the convenience of the people and attract deposits before branching out in thinly peopled districts. Let the first consideration be the security of the savings. The less the expense of office maintenance the smaller the necessary initial drain upon the earnings of the deposits.

The individual savings bank, which possesses a long record of vigilance, good judgment in handling investments and economy of management should not be curbed in dividend rates or hampered in its admirable and loyal service to its depositors, because some other savings banks have not done so well and are not in so good a condition. The rate of interest should be based upon the net earnings of any six months' period, after deducting a reasonable sum to maintain a 10 per cent. surplus, and the net profits distributed to depositors. The maximum interest rate of 5 per cent. named in the New York State law is as much of a barrier as should be erected. It can hardly be contended that for a relatively weak bank to have to lower its interest rate below that of its stronger competitor injures the smaller bank. The bank is not injured. Depositors who withdraw are paid in full, so that they are not injured. There is that much less liability for the bank.

The growth and prosperity of the postal savings bank is a sure indication that part of these vasts deposits will some day find their way into the State savings bank. The postal savings offices will thus become feeders to the previously existing institutions. The depositor who hoards and hides his savings, because of lack of knowledge of the savings bank system, will gradually become educated to the fact that this money can command a higher earning rate than that paid by the Government postals. Whatever opposition existed to the establishment of these postals by banking institutions generally arose from a misunderstanding of their purposes or from purely selfish motives. This opposition is now practically eliminated. No other agency could restore to the channels of trade the great horde of money known to be in hiding. Many of the foreigners are ignorant of our language and institutions, and have no knowledge of the standing and responsibility of our banking system, and they will not deposit in our national or State banks. This class is timid and has faith only in Government institutions, and they must have a Government depositary. The absolute guarantee of safety furnished by the United States Government has made a strong appeal to thousands who had never made use of the State savings banks. None of the postal savings bank deposits has been gained at the expense of the regular savings banks. The margin of safety between assets and liabilities to attract these postal depositors to the savings banks must always be evidently sufficient to assure the depositor that his account can be liquidated at any time beyond any doubt.

In France the average savings bank account figures hardly $75, but the Frenchman buys a Government security, in small denomination, where the foreigner here opens a savings account, provided he has overcome his timidity as to any but Government institutions. In the absence of ability to put his savings directly into the gilt-edged securities of the country, his course of action is likely to prove that the postal savings will not only increase thrift where it is most needed, but will in turn prove to be a feeder to the savings banks.

The tendency to thrift as exhibited by savings bank deposits among the working classes is far more marked in the United States than in Germany, Great Britain, Austria-Hungary or France. For instance, in the United States in 1908 there were about $3,660,000,000 on deposit in savings banks, and the average deposit was $420. In 1905 Germany had about $3,016,000,000 of savings deposits, and an average deposit of $168. In Austria-Hungary in 1906 there were deposits of $1,086,000,000, and an average of $191; in the United Kingdom in 1907 deposits of $1,020,000,000, and an average of $82, and in France $921,000,000 of deposits, averaging $74 per individual account.

In twenty years the number of savings institutions in the United States increased from 801 to 1,453, and the number of depositors from 3,800,000 to 8,700,000; the amount of deposits from $1,364,000,000 to $3,660,000,000, and the average individual deposit from $355 to $420.

The very fact that in France the savings bank figures do not show the thrift of the industrious small man is coming to have a significance here. The Frenchman's ability to buy not only Government but other gilt-edged securities in small denominations has a tremendous effect upon the investment tendencies of that nation. The cab-driver in Paris is as likely to own a railway bond as to have a savings bank account. When American railways of the first rank place bonds in France the bonds for foreign consumption are issued in $100 equivalents, while at home as yet only a comparatively few bonds of real security amid proper safeguards may be had in small enough denominations to be available for the poor man's savings. But right here lies a menace to the continued aggregate strength of the savings banks in the continued search of the great concentrated moneyed interests of the country for new resources to tap. In the very size of savings deposits—four and one-quarter billions of dollars—lies an element of financial possibility which they might begin to attract to an extent that would draw the savings of the poor to the financial centres at the expense of the industrial uses of the land in the localities where the savings funds are amassed slowly from the earnings of the thrifty poor. To-day only a portion of these funds—that part directly invested by the savings institutions—find their way into railway investment. A great work has been done in the United States by these banks of the people by investing in Federal, State, city, county, town or school district bonds and in real estate mortgage loans. And the continuance of this work is needed in the future more than the country could benefit by the diversion of the small man's savings from his local bank to the bond counters of the financial centres.

The savings bank officers and trustees need to be awakened to the situation, and also those whose interest are wrapped up in the sound real estate development of the communities where the banks are established. If they do not meet the problem, the diverse interests of railway bankers may set in motion a tendency too strong to be counteracted later, whereby funds which are now deposited in the banks of the people and loaned locally on real estate or used to buy city, county, town and other local improvement bonds, will be used more and more in the purchase of securities financed in the money centres, thus taking the use of the funds from the locality in which they are saved and transferring that use of those funds to the financial centres to the lasting detriment of the local thrifty communities. As to mutual banks and stock banks, it has been contended that the banker who may make a fortune for himself by serving his stockholders well would strive harder for dividends than the banker who sits at the head of a board of trustees and must be content with a moderate income because all net earnings outside of surplus considerations must be paid to depositors. This point brings us to the question of the personnel of the trustees. A few pertinent queries may cover this phase of our subject.

Do the trustees of savings banks realize the obligations imposed upon them?

Have they a general knowledge of the extent of the New York standard investment law of 1906 with its automatic workings?

Do they fulfill their whole duty when they declare 3 or 3½ per cent. interest is sufficient for the depositor to receive on the funds which he voluntarily brings to the bank?

Banking by mail is one outcome of conveniences which custom and time have found necessary. It began by a depositor moving away from the city in which he deposited. In his new locality he lacked facilities and bethought himself of his New York bank where his account was formerly kept. This out-of-town mail business has grown among the larger class of institutions. The cost of doing this business is practically nil at present.

There is also a desirable tendency in some large corporations to give their employees a savings bank book containing a credit of his share of the profits of the corporation.

The enactment of a general law in each of the several States of the Union for the conformity of savings bank charters to one statute, for uniformity in investments, for periodical examinations and semi-annual reports is needed. The New York law is admirably conservative. Its only disadvantage is the discretionary power given to individual institutions to name what amount shall be placed in a surplus account to guard against unforeseen contingencies. The wisdom and expediency of creating and maintaining a large surplus fund must appeal to all sensible conservative trustees who witnessed the depressing circumstances surrounding the panicky condition which existed at the close of 1907.

Whilst the New York State law does not insist upon a stated reserve in the shape of surplus it allows earnings to accumulate after the payment of dividends to depositors to the extent of 15 per cent. of the total amount on deposit based upon the par value of securities. When surplus earnings exceed this percentage the excess must be paid to depositors in the shape of an extra dividend.

In New York the policy of the State is one of rigid control and inspection, semi-annual detailed reports, yearly examinations by the Banking Department, limitations of investments, no capital, no stock, and, above all, a thorough provision for the absolute security and safety of funds on deposit.

Sharply in contrast stand the laws in many States, where legislation as regards savings institutions rests upon the assumption that they are business undertakings for profit to stockholders and gives them a latitude of management common to banking as a business and a freedom to employ funds in profitable channels, such as are sought by commercial banks of discount. About one-half of the States of the Union, as a matter of fact, have no savings bank laws whatever.

In 1906 the State of New York adopted a new standard law for the investment of the funds of a savings bank. This law works automatically. Its enactment marked a long step forward in the progress of the sort of legislative supervision best calculated to strengthen savings institutions, not by restrictions tending to reduce them to the position of suppliants for needed powers, but by granting to them, within the limits defined by the State as necessary, freedom to invest without the approval of special legislation. That this freedom of investment has been granted by way of the establishment of a standard by which conservative investors of trust funds may safely judge securities in the market ought to serve still another purpose. The railroad corporations whose financial showing entitles their securities to be considered safe and desirable investments for the deposits of the thrifty should thereby hold a right beyond comparison with any other railroad corporation in its title to the confidence of the community.

Previous to this amendment to the New York State banking law in 1906, any syndicate or group of men could control a large block of railway bonds and then apply to the State to legalize the issue for investment of savings funds. The effect of the amendment was to standardize investments. The provisions of the law are automatic in their workings, in that the new general statute does away with the continually recurring need of going to the legislature in regard to specific securities.

There is a limit imposed on the proportion of its funds which a savings institution may place in railway bonds in New York. Not more than 25 per cent. of the assets may be loaned or invested in railway bonds, nor more than 10 per cent. in the bonds of a New York railway corporation or another railway corporation controlled and operated by a New York company, nor more than 5 per cent. in the bonds of any other railway corporation.

Throughout the provisions of the banking law of the State of New York it has been borne in mind that savings banks exist there in order to encourage thrift and to inculcate the spirit of saving in the hearts of the working classes. That the resources of these institutions continue to play their economic part in full measure is a public duty laid upon the men in charge of these institutions and dependent upon their ability to be alert to the changing money conditions of the country.

Committee Reports—Savings Bank Section.

Mr. President and Members of the Savings Bank Section:

Your Committee on Methods and Systems begs to report that three matters have occupied its attention during the past year; namely, the Savings Bank Centennial in 1916, the mechanical methods employed by Savings Banks of different size in handling their every-day transactions, with the idea of presenting same to our members as a matter of general interest, and practical value to many, who in the system of others may find something which can be adapted with profit to their own methods, and the Campaign of Education which was referred to this committee by the Executive Committee of the Section at Briarcliff last May.

Savings Bank Centennial.

The suggestion that there should be a proper celebration of the Savings Bank Centennial in this country in 1916, which was made by our former secretary at the New Orleans Convention and referred to this committee, has been continually before us, but feeling that a too early agitation of the matter would in a measure tend to defeat the success of such a celebration by a waning of interest before its date, it is our opinion that while this centennial should be observed upon a scale commensurate with the importance this country has attained in all things, the arrangements may wisely be deferred until 1914, although we respectfully recommend that it be continually referred to some committee who will keep this important matter before our members.

Method of Handling Deposits and Withdrawals in Banks of Varying Size.

In presenting a brief description of the method of handling daily transactions in various Savings Banks, we have chosen the following, not as being applicable or preferable to systems now employed in banks of similar size, for we feel that each bank knows better than others what is best adapted to its especial needs, but with the idea of showing how Savings Bank depositors are handled in banks of varying size, from the largest in a great city to the small bank in a country town, trusting that our members will find something of interest and possible value therein.

Philadelphia Saving Fund Society, Philadelphia, Pa.	Deposits	$108,000,000
	No. open accounts.	277,500
	Average daily transactions ..	2,026

Deposits.—Initial deposit slip (of a different color from ordinary deposit slips), signature card, passbook, index card and ledger card all have number printed thereon. New account slip has perforated stub numbered in duplicate, which is handed by teller to depositor, who hands it to a register clerk, who takes signature upon a correspondingly numbered card. Name is then typewritten in book and on deposit slip by carbon paper, and amount entered in book. Amount is then listed upon adding machine, which serves as new account teller's cash book and is verified on another machine from original slips. Index cards are typewritten from signature cards, as are also headings of ledger cards, the latter proven by bookkeeper, who posts from deposit slips.

Subsequent deposits are made with regular receiving teller, who enters amount upon slip and passes same with passbook to assistant to be entered therein. Book and slip then pass to clerk who makes a duplicate slip of still another color with day of week printed at top, entering thereon number and initials of depositor, omitting amount but listing same upon machine using said list for a cash book. Book and original slip then pass to a clerk who enters number and name upon latter, verifies entry in former by depositor, and returns book.

Fifty listings of machine constitute a column of cash book, and that number of slips which are machine numbered and dated by teller are collected and verified upon a second machine; they are then distributed to bookkeepers, who post therefrom and list amount for each ledger. Postings and verifications are assigned daily by head bookkeeper, no bookkeeper having same ledgers two days in succession. Verifications are made by taking postings from ledger upon duplicate slips, listing same, and handing to head bookkeeper who has previously listed original slips. Total deposits are then checked off from receiving teller's cash book and settlement.

Withdrawals.—Two weeks' notice is required for all withdrawals. Notice is taken on receipt with carbon for duplicate. Receipts with perforated duplicate are printed consecutively in amounts from one dollar to six hundred dollars, and thereafter in hundreds to one thousand dollars. When all the money is wanted, the book is kept for settlement, and a card bearing the number and date when due is given the depositor. After a receipt is signed, the amount is entered in the passbook, the duplicate placed in a locked receptacle, and the depositor takes the book and the receipt to the paying teller. The latter compares the entry with the receipt, pays the money, and gives the receipt to a listing clerk in a separate cage. They are verified on another machine outside the department, and handed to the accountant, who holds the key for the duplicates; both are arranged numerically for the bookkeepers and pursue the same course as deposits.

Bowery Savings Bank, New York, N. Y.	Deposits	$161,000,000
	No. open accounts.	145,000

Deposits.—Deposits are taken by receiving teller, the depositor being required to present passbook with same. The teller enters the amount in passbook and also makes out deposit slip, giving book number, name and amount deposited. He then hands the passbook with deposit slip to deposit cash book clerk, who enters number, name and amount therein. This desk adjoins the teller's cage, and the depositor in the meantime having passed along to the deposit cash book clerk's window, responds to the call of his name, and is asked by the clerk the amount of deposits made, which the clerk verifies both as to passbook entry and cash book entry before handing passbook back to depositor. The deposit slip then passes to the classification clerk, who has an indexed portfolio containing one sheet for each ledger in use. He enters on the sheet for the ledger indicated by the number on the ticket, the number, name, and amount (the amount being entered on a detachable portion). The deposit tickets are later posted by a bookkeeper, who at time of making entry places at the folio a black card marker. At the close of the day's business, the total of the day's sheets must prove by cash book and teller. The perforated portions are then detached and turned over to the head bookkeeper, and the larger portions, containing the account numbers and names of depositors, go to a bookkeeper who has not made ledger posting, and who, guided by the black card markers in ledger, verifies the account number and depositor's name and enters the amount he finds posted in ledger to said account. Having found and entered amounts for each of the items called for on his sheet, and having examined his ledger to see that in doing so he has cleared his ledger of all black card markers, he foots the sheet and enters the total on summary sheet at head bookkeeper's desk. The total of the summary sheet must prove to the total of the day's deposits. The detached portions bearing the original entries of amounts are used by head bookkeeper to locate any difference in case of failure to prove.

New accounts are handled in exactly the same manner in a separate department requiring a teller and cash book clerk. Signatures are taken in signature book and upon signature card, and description upon card only.

Withdrawals.—The draft and passbook are taken from depositor by draft clerk, who puts the test questions to the depositor and verifies the signature on draft. The passbook and draft then go to the bookkeeper, who enters any interest credited since passbook was last in bank, proves the passbook with the ledger account, and enters the draft both in passbook and ledger, placing a red card marker in folio of ledger when entry has been made. The passbook and draft then go to draft cash book clerk, then to draft classification clerk, and then to paying teller, who makes the payment, returning passbook to depositor and retaining the draft for his voucher. The operation of checking withdrawals is exactly the same as described for the deposits.

Williamsburgh Savings Bank, Brooklyn, N. Y.	Deposits	$58,000,000
	No. open accounts.	102,000

New Accounts.—Desk operated by teller and assistant. Teller receives amount, noting same on deposit slip and signature card, also takes signature and description of depositor in signature book. Assistant simultaneously writes description on card, then enters name and amount in passbook from card, records same item upon journal sheet, asks depositor amount of transaction and delivers book. Cash balanced at end of day with total of journal sheet after deposit slips have been called back.

Deposits.—First to receiving teller, who receives money and passbook, notes amount on slip together with surname on book, then passes both slip and book to assistant, who spindles slip, enters amount in book and on a listing slip and passes book to journal clerk, who enters number of account, surname and amount on a sheet corresponding to ledger number of passbook, asks depositor amount deposited, and delivers book. Cash balanced at end of day with totals of assistant teller's listing slip and aggregate of totals of journal sheets, which must agree.

Withdrawals.—Passbook is presented to draft clerk, who makes out draft for desired amount, secures signature, enters amount in book, verifies balance, initialing amount as O. K., and passes draft and book to test clerk, who verifies signature, initialing same, and passes both to journal clerk, who operates as in receiving teller's department, making entries from the book, and then passing draft and book to paying teller, who counts out the money as per draft, calls the name upon book, and if the person responding states the amount signed for, delivers book and money to them.

At end of day machine list of withdrawals is made, total of which must agree with total of journal sheets in order that cash may be balanced. All postings are made next day, and proved by placing upon the journal sheets the present and previous balances of each transaction, difference in the totals of which must equal amount of transactions on each sheet or ledger. Checkers are required to place a check upon each item checked in order that if duplicate postings occur, and are not discovered until trial balance, a reference to ledger will quickly reveal the item unchecked.

Worcester County Institution for Savings, Worcester, Mass.	Deposits	$23,000,000
	No. open accounts.	49,000
	Average daily transactions	300

Deposits.—Method of handling new and old accounts is the same, slips of a different color being used for deposits on either. Cards for signatures and card ledgers are used. Teller receives money and enters amount upon slip and stub of same, which is perforated. He retains stub for his proof, and passes book and ticket to counter clerk, who, in case of new account, obtains description and signature, makes out new book and delivers same to depositor, retaining slip, or, if an old account, simply makes entry and returns book. In either case name and amount and amount are verified before delivery of book. Slips are delivered to bookkeepers, who make out cards for new accounts, and withdraw cards upon which postings occur from ledger boxes, and keep said cards out until close of day for making proof.

Withdrawals.—Different colored forms are used for partial payments and amounts closing accounts, each form having a perforated stub. Book is presented to counter clerk who makes out draft, secures signature, verifies same, also amount on book with ledger, removing ledger card from box. He then makes entry in passbook and passes same with draft to teller, who verifies amount and name of depositor and delivers money and book, holding perforated stub for his proof, and delivering receipt to bookkeepers for posting.

This provides three checks on daily transactions—tellers prove with total of their stubs, and a proof is made from ledger cards which have been withdrawn during day wherever transactions occur. The following day all transactions are checked back, and cards sorted back in ledger boxes. Wherever cards are temporarily withdrawn a dummy card of conspicuous color is put in its place.

Farmers and Mechanics Savings Bank, Minneapolis, Minn.	Deposits	$14,000,000
	Average daily transactions	725

Deposits.—For making a deposit (assuming that the depositor has already opened an account), he presents his passbook and deposit at the first deposit window. The first teller receives them, counts the deposit, verifies the amount with the depositor, makes out a deposit slip, hands the passbook, the deposit and deposit slip to a second receiving teller by whom the money is again counted, and the amount entered in a blotter and in the depositor's passbook. The passbook is then handed to the depositor. Later the deposit slips are checked with the blotter and the deposits are then entered upon the card ledgers from the deposit slips. The total of the day's deposits are again checked with the totals shown on the blotter.

Withdrawals.—For making a withdrawal, the depositor presents his book at the bookkeeper's withdrawal window. The passbook is compared with the depositor's account in the card ledger. If the two agree, the bookkeeper makes out a withdrawal receipt and enters the amount of the withdrawal in the blotter, with the number of the account, and passes the passbook with the withdrawal receipt (unsigned) to another clerk, who enters the amount of the withdrawal in the depositor's passbook, hands the withdrawal receipt to the depositor, who signs it, and hands the passbook with the signature card, which is pulled, to the paying teller. The depositor passes with his receipt, which he has signed, to the paying teller, who compares his signature. If the comparison is favorable, the receipt is taken up and the passbook and money are handed to the depositor. Later the withdrawal receipts are posted in the card ledgers and subsequently the amounts posted are compared with the blotters.

Excelsior Savings Bank, New York, N. Y.	Deposits	$11,000,000
	Average daily transactions	234

New Accounts.—Cards used for signatures and ledgers. Depositor goes first to signature clerk, who ascertains if account is desirable, takes signature and description upon signature card, also signature upon both sides of ledger card, and makes out passbook. The depositor then makes out deposit slip, and presents same, together with money, to receiving teller to whom book has been passed. Teller enters amount (initialing same) in passbook, gives depositor a card bearing a number, duplicate of which, together with book, is placed upon a shelf from which they are taken to bookkeeper's desk. Bookkeeper enters number of account and amount deposited upon a daily ticker, initialing same, goes direct to ledger, and upon ledger card, which has already been placed there by signature clerk, enters and dates deposit, which he likewise initials. Bookkeeper then steps to his window and calls number upon card received by him with book; depositor holding corresponding number responds and book is delivered to him upon stating name and amount entered therein. Deposit slips are delivered to bookkeepers, listed in deposit journal according to ledgers, and aggregate total of day's work transferred to cash book and journal and posted to general ledger. Subsequent deposits are handled in same manner, eliminating signature clerk.

Withdrawals.—Depositor presents passbook and draft which has been obtained from counter, filled out and signed by him, to clerk next to teller. This clerk balances book with ledger, enters amount in passbook, initials amount on draft and delivers book and draft, together with a printed number, to paying teller, delivering to depositor duplicate number. Paying teller verifies signature, calls number of depositor, who surrenders duplicate and upon giving name and amount receives money and book. Drafts are placed upon spindle and then delivered to bookkeepers, after which they are handled in same manner as deposit slips.

Hopkins Place Savings Bank, Baltimore, Md.	Deposits	$9,000,000
	No. open accounts.	22,000

Deposits.—The depositor presents book to receiving teller with deposit, who verifies same and enters on passbook, passes it on to the entry clerk, who records on daily deposit sheet the number, the name of the account and the amount deposited. The postings are made from this sheet by the bookkeepers to the individual ledgers and the total amount of deposits is credited to controlling account in the general books. Each bookkeeper checks off the postings of the other, daily, and in addition is changed to different ledgers every month.

In order to locate trial balance errors in individual ledgers, the accounts are divided into fifteen sections. A summary book, specially ruled for a month's transactions, is operated, in which is entered the totals of daily deposits and withdrawals of each section. This is footed up at the end of the month, and to the total amount of deposits of each section for the month is added the balance brought forward from previous month; from this total is deducted withdrawals for the month, the balance showing totals of the respective sections. As the balances are run off of individual ledgers, each section is listed separately and must agree with corresponding section in summary book. This enables one to locate an error in a comparatively small number of accounts.

Home Savings Bank (Stock), Washington, D. C.	Capital	$100,000
	Deposits	4,000,000

Deposits.—The savings deposit slips are taken from the spindles, listed on the adding machine, and turned over to the savings bookkeeper, who after posting them by merely bringing down the new balance instead of noting the amount of deposit, makes a notation in his scratcher of the amount of the deposit, and the totals of all such deposits are proved from said scratcher with the totals of all of the teller's slips. These deposits are then written on deposit tickler sheets, the number of the account, the party's name, and the amount is extended on a coupon attached to said tickler, and the totals of these amounts proved with the totals of the tellers and savings bookkeeper. The general ledger bookkeeper takes the amount from the savings bookkeeper's scratcher to post in the general ledger. A proof is made the next morning of all of the entries on savings accounts by detaching the coupons from the deposit tickler sheets, the employee who makes the proof only having the name and number from which to check the amounts deposited, noting at the same time the amount of the deposit on the ledger card, and at the same time on the column of the deposit tickler sheets. These totals are then added and compared with the totals on the coupons above mentioned and any differences are then adjusted by a third man.

Fitchburg Savings Bank, Fitchburg, Mass.	Deposits	$6,000,000

Deposits.—Book and money are presented to teller who makes entry and slip and returns book. At close of day slips are footed by machine, which total is used to balance cash. Another clerk posts slips, lists same in a deposit book and foots them. Slips are then sorted into numerical order for a six months' period, when trial balance is taken.

Withdrawals.—Drafts are handled in same manner; however, no clerk handling deposits is permitted to handle withdrawals. Ledgers are divided into subdivisions for purposes of trial balance, and all slips sorted according to such subdivisions.

CITIZENS' SAVINGS BANK, Woodstock, Vt.	Deposits	$2,000,000
	No open accounts	5,000
	Average daily transactions	35

Deposits—Cards used for signatures and ledgers. Money and book are passed directly to teller, who makes out slip, enters amount in book and returns same to depositor.

Withdrawals—Teller makes out draft, enters same in book, compares signature and pays the money.

At night deposit slips and drafts are entered in journal and cash balanced from this record. Postings are made next day from slips. Each month postings are verified from journal entries by an auditor.

CAMPAIGN OF EDUCATION.

Following a suggestion by our present secretary that this Section take the initiative in the matter of instituting a campaign of education in savings banking and thrift among the people throughout the United States, the matter was referred to this committee, as stated, and preliminary steps have been taken toward instituting such a campaign, the committee feeling that it is a matter deserving of our most serious consideration and effort.

We conceive the highest purposes of the American Bankers' Association to be constructive, and believe the economic conditions of our country, which at present are the subject of so much discussion, cannot be appreciably improved until its general thrift is far greater and the acknowledged extravagance of the people curtailed; and we believe there is no nobler work for our Section to attempt than to carry the "gospel of thrift" to the children in the schools, the women in the home, the farmer, mechanic, clerk and business man throughout the land, through every available agency, for it has been observed that ignorance of the nature and functions of Savings Banks and departments permeates all classes, leading some who would be thrifty to bury their savings in the ground because of a distrust of all banks, and others into further extravagance because they imagine the banks despise the small deposits, to say nothing of that great army who have never given the necessity for saving a thought. No, we have not overestimated the necessity for such a campaign, as a study of conditions in most communities will prove, although it has been suggested that we have done so by one, writing from a community fortunate in having a much larger ratio of savings depositors than the country at large.

Our first step was to address a communication to all of our members, bringing this matter to their attention and requesting their views and suggestions as to methods of procedure, for we early recognized the complex nature of this problem, rendered so by varying conditions of locality and population and the various forms of institutions accepting savings deposits. The response was most gratifying, coming from bankers representing forty different States, and with but half a dozen exceptions, all most enthusiastic in regard to taking up such a work, and supporting our theory of its necessity. About fifty per cent. of these letters, while approving the movement, contained no suggestions, but from the remainder were received about thirty different suggestions, interesting as reflecting just so many angles of vision according to local conditions.

Apparently most minds turn naturally to advertising when considering any phase of public education, and hence the suggestions regarding individual and community advertising containing a human interest element, are most numerous. A very close second in the matter of number received comes from those who believe we should begin with the children, both on the farm and in the cities, and work through the schools. Third in rank is the suggestion that articles of an educational nature should be prepared by our office, as well as advertising letters addressed to various classes of people, and furnished to magazines, county and daily papers free, and to banks using the letters, at cost. Next in prominence is the suggestion that free public lectures should be given through the agency of boards of education, Chautauqua gatherings or wherever practicable. And then in the order of number received come the following: Use personal solicitors and letters. Furnish advertisements from our office at cost. Issue booklets from our office in several languages. Issue bulletin of sample advertisements from our office to be paid for by banks using same. Organize a committee in each State or secure co-operation of State associations to push the work. Utilize motion pictures. Advertising novelties. Publishing of small magazines by individual banks. Publish paper from our office to be supported by advertisements. Issue free dime banks. Issue pay envelopes. Publish interviews with prominent men. Encourage small deposits. Emphasize banking by mail. Offer prizes for and publish best letters on methods of saving. Make especial effort to educate foreigners. Make especial effort to offset "wildcat" advertising, offering large returns. Secure co-operation through clearing houses.

The committee feels that these suggestions may most effectively be applied in various localities by those most familiar with local conditions; therefore, before making any recommendations as to method, we respectfully suggest that the committee who shall be designated to carry forward this work next year (and we sincerely hope that it will be carried forward) be authorized to perfect a working organization in every State of the Union by appointing, or through State associations securing the appointment of, a committee in each State for the purpose of devising ways and means of prosecuting the work in a manner best adapted to their respective localities.

This is the only recommendation we desire to make at this time, feeling that when this organization is perfected and in close touch with our secretary, the next steps will be a matter of evolution. However, we are sure that in compliance with our last letter, sent out in reply to all those who had written us, many have been giving this subject continued thought, and possibly new ideas have been evolved in regard thereto; therefore, as time for brief discussion has been allotted to us at this point upon our programme, we sincerely hope that many will take advantage of this opportunity to express their views, either for or against, and also give us the benefit of any new ideas which may have occurred to them.

COMMITTEE ON METHODS AND SYSTEMS.

Report of the Executive Committee of the Savings Bank Section.

Mr. President and Members of the Savings Bank Section:

On behalf of your Executive Committee I have the honor to report that, although during the past year we have been deprived of the splendid services of both of the executives of our affairs in the New York office, the work of our Section has proceeded in an uninterrupted and ever increasing efficient manner.

On February 1 last Mr. Kniffin, who had so ably administered the affairs of the Secretary's office since the previous March, resigned to accept the Treasurership of the Onondaga County Savings Bank, of Syracuse, N. Y., and at the same time his very efficient assistant, Miss Muishine, resigned for the purpose of taking upon herself the bonds of matrimony.

However, the condition was satisfactorily met, after serious deliberation, by the President appointing E. G. McWilliam, of New York, as Secretary, and Miss G. M. Waine as office assistant. Mr. McWilliam is a savings bank man of long experience in New York City, having had an acquaintance with the late Mr. Hanhart, and being intimately associated with Mr. Kniffin in the savings bank work of New York Chapter, American Institute of Banking, of which Mr. McWilliam is now President. At the meeting of the Executive Committee held at Briarcliff Lodge, Briarcliff Manor, New York, last May, it was decided that the work of the Section demanded the entire attention of its Secretary, who previously had given but a portion of his time therein, and on June 1 Mr. McWilliam began to devote his services entirely to our interests, and is in constant attendance at our New York office, No. 5 Nassau Street. Miss Waine was connected with the office of the American Bankers' Association some time prior to taking up the work of the Section, which enabled her to assume her new duties with a degree of familiarity.

The meeting of our Committee at Briarcliff Lodge was most interesting and profitable. There were present Messrs. Aiken, Blaffer, Creer, Curney, Hawley, Johnson, Knox, Palmer, Robinson and the Chairman, with the Secretary recording. After listening to a report for the Secretary, resolutions upon the death of Colonel Charles E. Sprague, formerly President of the Union Dime Savings Bank, of New York, and Chairman of our Methods and Systems Committee last year, were adopted and ordered engrossed and forwarded to his widow.

The financial condition of our Section was carefully considered and recommendations made which will result in the material lessening of expense in some directions, permitting the conduct of our business in a more efficient manner, with no added expense.

Reports were received from all committees, namely, the Committees on School Savings Banks, Methods and Systems, Membership and Law, which exhibited a satisfactory degree of activity, and an important suggestion was made by the Secretary relative to instituting a campaign of education in savings banking among the people throughout the United States. This matter was referred to the Committee on Methods and Systems, and their report will be awaited with interest.

This is but one feature of the constructive work carried forward by our Section this past year. Pamphlets have been issued upon swindles, finger-print identification and ethics, and every opportunity taken advantage of for the fostering of all that is best in our profession.

The reports of our various committees will illustrate better than anything else our Section's activities during the past year, and I simply desire to add the hope that next year's Executive Committee will accomplish more than any other toward constructive work and co-operation among savings banks, and the general upbuilding of the American Bankers' Association.

Respectfully submitted,

J. F. SARTORI.

Chairman Ex. Com. Savings Bank Section.

Report of the Secretary, E. G. McWilliam.

Mr. President and Gentlemen.

The Secretary's report will be brief, though I trust none the less interesting for stating concisely the activities of our Section as observed from the "firing line." The first five months of our year, namely, from September, 1911, to February, 1912, the Secretary's office was still under the very efficient management of my predecessor, William H. Kniffin, Jr., who resigned upon February 1 to again take up the reins of bank management as Treasurer of the Onondaga County Savings Bank, of Syracuse, N. Y. I desire to publicly express my admiration of Mr. Kniffin's personal worth and the ability with which he administered the affairs of this office, and can only hope that in time I may merit, in a measure, some of the expressions of appreciation which have been uttered in reference to his work.

During these five months the constructive policy of this office was assiduously carried forward, school savings banks, especially, fostered, and the matter prepared for a pamphlet entitled "Some Savings Bank Swindles and Suggested Safeguards."

From February 1, when I was appointed to this office, to June 1 of this year I was enabled to give but a portion of each day to the work, being still connected with a savings bank in New York City. However, during that period we issued the "Swindles" pamphlet, which had been prepared by Mr. Kniffin, a pamphlet upon "Finger Print Identification," which I found necessary to prepare in order to reply to the many inquiries received relative to this method, which has up to this time been adopted by about fifty banks, and a pamphlet upon the "Ethics of the Savings Bank," by William E. Knox, of the Bowery Savings Bank, New York City. Also efforts were made toward increasing our membership by preparing circular letters for a number of our Vice-Presidents, who sent them throughout their respective States. These letters, besides bringing members to the Section, were of considerable value in bringing members into the American Bankers' Association at large, as in States where there are few savings banks, all banks were circularized with good results. Also during this period we were enabled to be of assistance to the Standing Law Committee in their efforts to secure information relative to the question of the Segregation of Savings Deposits, by sending out for them circulars to all banks, and receiving and tabulating replies thereto, besides handling our daily correspondence, which was large.

As you have already been informed, the Executive Committee at the May meeting, having decided that the work of the Secretary's office demanded one's whole attention, on June 1 I severed my bank connection and since that date have devoted my entire effort to this work. During the period of moving and alteration, incident to the occupation of our new offices in May, there, of course, was more or less confusion, but, thanks to our very efficient office assistant, Miss Waine, the routine was not seriously affected, and we were speedily settled and systematized according to our new surroundings. Our clipping service, from which often many duplicates were received, was temporarily discontinued, and has been arranged to cover only the matters pertinent to savings banks, and will be classified and indexed by the Librarian, thereby being instantly available, all of which will result in a material saving of expense. The services of an office boy were dispensed with as superfluous, and no printing or other work is done without competitive bids. This year each Section will publish its own Convention proceedings, which in our case, will result in a saving of at least one thousand dollars.

Since June 1 our most important work has been that in connection with the Campaign of Education, and we trust you will receive its impetus at this Convention. Besides which the booklet, "What It Can Do for You," has been issued, and the New York State Bankers' Convention at Buffalo visited, at which Mr. Knox delivered an address reflecting great credit upon our Section. All of the savings banks in Buffalo were called upon by me while there.

Our membership, detailed report of which is appended, is now 2,060, and shows a gain of 172 during the year.

Our financial statement, which is also appended, shows that total appropriations made by the General Association for our work amounted to $9,500, and that our expenses were $9,343.23, leaving a credit with the Association of $156.27. However, of these expenditures $1,134.50 were last year's, charged against this year's appropriations.

We have at present on deposit with banks $2,024.29. I might say that this is the only Section which is permitted to handle its own money. This money has arisen, as I said here, which represents the proceeds for sale of books of printed forms to date.

We are constantly endeavoring to promote co-operation between individual banks in communities, as well as our Section, and the measure of success with which we are succeeding is evidenced by the ever increasing amount of mail received, through which we are taken into the confidence of banks upon almost every conceivable question not relating to policy, and are therefore able to be of real service in many instances.

This is our aim—to be your servant and play some small part in securing the co-operation of you who are the strength of your respective communities, in fortifying our great country with principles of saving and thrift.

Respectfully submitted,

(Signed) E. G. McWILLIAM, Secretary.

Report of Law Committee.

There being no business officially before this Committee, the Committee has no report to make, but nevertheless takes this opportunity of inviting the attention of members of the Savings Bank Section to the report of the Law Committee of the Association in the matter of Segregation of Savings Deposits.

The Chairman of the Law Committee of the Savings Bank Section is ex officio a member of the General Law Committee of the Association, and as such has participated somewhat in the large amount of work which has been done by that Committee, under instructions of the Executive Council in further investigation of the general subject of Segregation of Savings Deposits and separate investment of savings.

Respectfully submitted on behalf of the Law Committee, Savings Bank Section.

(Signed) J. H. STURGIS, Chairman.

Mr President and Gentlemen:

Last year down at New Orleans, when President Robinson called on Governor Herrick (who, by the way, as you all know, now adorns the position of Ambassador to France) for a report of the Membership Committee, perhaps some of you remember that the Governor admitted that he did not have any report at all, though he made a most interesting address.

This year, the position of the Membership Committee is somewhat different. On account of the change in the Secretary of our Association, and other unavoidable reasons, we were not notified of our appointment to the Membership Committee until about March. As one of our Committee, Mr. Gurney, came from Fremont, Nebraska, it seemed inadvisable to attempt to call a meeting of our Committee, as the season was so far advanced, and we knew that the Association would circularize all the non-member banks in August. As a matter of fact we have not had a meeting of the Committee until this Convention.

Shortly after our appointment to the Committee, Mr. Edwards, of the Dollar Savings Bank, called on all the non-member banks in New York, but only one has as yet responded.

Immediately after my appointment, I wrote a letter to every non-resident savings bank in Massachusetts that did not belong to the Association about joining. While as the immediate fruits of our labor only four Massachusetts savings banks joined, the Westboro Savings Banks, the Uxbridge Savings Bank, the Springfield Institution for Savings and the Worcester Mechanics' Savings Bank, yet the seed was sown, and I still have constant inquiries, and I feel confident that ultimately practically all the savings banks of our State will join. Our Massachusetts Bankers' Association has been doing fine work in this line, impressing on all the banks the great advantages to be derived from membership in this splendid association.

Mr. Gurney, of Fremont, Nebraska, did all that he could, but a tremendous pressure of business did not allow him to spend as much time as he desired in the matter.

We are exceedingly sorry that your Membership Committee has not until this Convention been able to hold a meeting to talk over these matters, but, as you know, there has been prepared an excellent circular, of which the credit should be entirely given to our most efficient Secretary, Mr. McWilliam, and which has been sent to all the savings banks in the country. This, coupled with the individual efforts which the members of your Committee have made, I am sure will show more satisfactory results next year.

We are inclined to think it would be well if the new President in appointing his committees would appoint men on the Membership Committee who would be in the same vicinity, if the Committee must consist of but three members, or better that the Committee should be enlarged so there shall be one mmber from each State. We recommend that the Executive Council give careful consideration to this suggestion, which we strongly favor, believing that the best results can be obtained in securing new members by a large Committee, who can appeal directly to their non-member neighbors.

Respectfully suubmitted,

(Signed) FREDERICK C. NICHOLS,
Chairman Membership Committee.
GEORGE E. EDWARDS.
E. R. GURNEY.

To the Savings Bank Section of the American Bankers' Association:

Your Committee is of the opinion that it is not only a proper educational function to teach the children of the public schools the habit of economy and saving, but also that the inculcation and practice of this habit has a decided cultural value and will improve the character of children to a marked extent, and at the same time will conduce greatly to the ultimate prosperity of the country.

Your Committee believes that the work of establishing savings bank systems in our public schools should take one of the foremost places in the efforts of the Savings Bank Section and of the American Bankers' Association also.

While in France and Germany the general government has established the inculcation of the habit of saving as a part of the educational curriculum, in this country the Committee finds that little is known, either among banks or among legislators or government officials, regarding the plans in use, or the plans proposed for school savings. It finds little interest among school authorities either in establishing or in persistently carrying on this branch of education.

On account of the general absence of statutes authorizing the system, in the face of the lack of knowledge regarding it, and in view of the small interest among school authorities, the Committee feels that our Section has a great work before it, yet one that will repay persistent and energetic endeavor.

The Committee recommends the following:

First: That the Secretary of the Savings Bank Section of the American Bankers' Association be made a member of this Committee.

Second: That the Committee be authorized to make investigation and recommendations respecting the statutes existing and proper to be proposed adaptable to the conditions in the various States, and in respect thereto to ask the co-operation of the Law Committee of the Section.

Third: That the Committee be authorized to ascertain the facts regarding the school savings systems in operation and to make recommendations as to the best plans and agencies for their operation having regard to local banking and educational circumstances, and in respect thereto to ask the co-operation of the Committee on Methods and Systems.

Fourth: That the Committee be authorized to print and disseminate such portions of its findings and reports as it may deem will best serve its purposes.

Detailed Report of Proceedings.

Eleventh Annual Meeting SAVINGS BANK SECTION, Held at Detroit, Sept. 11 and 12, 1912.

Detroit, Mich., September 11, 1912.

President Aiken: The Convention will please come to order. It has been the custom, in the opening of the Convention of the Savings Bank Section, to have the meeting opened with a prayer. Such an arrangement was made for this gathering. I regret to say that we have received the following telegram this morning, addressed to Mr. William Livingstone, the President of the American Bankers' Association: "I regret exceedingly it is impossible to be with you to-morrow morning." Signed, Bishop Kelly. As it was too late for the members of the Committee to find some one to take his place, that will have to be dispensed with.

Mr. Creer: Rather than dispense with the usual order of opening our Convention, I move you, sir, that we all rise and recite the Lord's Prayer.

The Convention arose and recited the Lord's Prayer.

President Aiken: The first thing on the programme is an address of welcome by President Livingstone, President of the Dime Savings Bank of Detroit, and of the American Bankers' Association. (Applause.)

Address of Welcome, by William Livingstone.

Mr. William Livingstone, Detroit, Mich.: Gentlemen of the Savings Bank Section, it gives me unmitigated pleasure to greet you in my home town and bid you a most hearty welcome. Amidst the cares and anxieties of life that come to each one of us, it is the little bright spots of life that make life endurable. I want to say to you to-day that this will always be one of the bright spots in my life in having all of you gentlemen present in my home town. I want to say also, just by way of interpolation, that if any of you gentlemen of the Savings Bank Section have your ladies with you, or if there is anything you want in the way of enjoyment that has not been provided for you, I will have a little leisure time for the next two days. I have been very crowded so far. But I will be most pleased to try and assist you in every way possible, so that if you want autos or anything to entertain your ladies, I will put it that way, if you will just kindly let me know I will be more than pleased to help you. I think possibly that I could furnish almost anything that you want. This, of course, is just by way of interpolation.

My first love, perhaps, as you know, all of you know, would naturally go to the Savings Bank. I am a savings bank man, started as a savings bank man. Although we have quite a commercial business now, at the same time I think that we don't differentiate, but it is like the difference between old friends and new, it isn't that you don't like the new friends, but somehow or other there is a certain indefinable something with the older friends, that as the years roll by we cling a little closer to the old friends and we don't make new friends quite as rapidly as we did in earlier years. You have the largest Section in the American Bankers' Association, something over 2,000, I understand—2,060. You have a very large increase this year. I haven't any doubt in the world but that you will continue to grow, and be as you are now, one of the most powerful factors; one of the most powerful Sections we have in our whole American Bankers' Association. As I mentioned yesterday, fifteen years ago, when the Convention met here of the American Bankers' Association, the Association had a little over 2,800 members, and now we have over 13,000. Those figures speak for themselves.

I know that you have been delayed very much this morning in the opening of your Section, and you have, as I notice by your programme, quite an extensive programme, and for that reason I will not detain you with a multiplicity of words which would not possibly add to the great delight that I have in having you here. I will simply say to you now that we shall be more than glad to have you come to Detroit either singly, in numbers or in any other way. I want to assure you, in the very strongest possible manner, as strongly as words may express, that for you our welcome ever smiles and our farewell goes outside. (Applause.)

President Aiken: Mr. President, on behalf of the Section, I want to express to you our deep appreciation of all that you and your associates have done here for our entertainment, as well as for our instruction. The city of Detroit has always been known for its hospitality, and that reputation has certainly been maintained. In addition to that, there is the romantic historic interest that attaches to this old town that was one of the frontier posts, which makes it a Mecca for every one who is interested in the early history of the United States. We have never anywhere had a more cordial welcome, or been more hospitably received, than we have been here. I am sure in expressing this I simply express the feelings of every member who is here. We thank you very much for your cordial welcome. (Applause.)

Mr. Livingstone: I assure you, Mr. President, the pleasure is ours.

President Aiken: The next business is the President's address.

Annual Address of Alfred L. Aiken, President.

Gentlemen of the Savings Bank Section:

It is a pleasure to report the continued growth of our Section through the tenth year of its existence. Starting from modest beginnings in 1902, the Savings Bank Section has grown steadily until it now has a total membership of over 2,000. The detailed figures of this growth will be duly reported in the Secretary's report at a later time in the Convention, but the Section has justified its existence as measured by standards other than by the mere matter of membership. Ever since its organization it has not only stood for whatever was good and sound and conservative in banking affairs, but it has also enabled its members to profit by close personal contact and interchange of personal experiences as varied as the various sections of the country.

The usual meetings of the Executive Committees have been held, and have been well attended with profit to the Section and to the members of the Committees. The Chairman, Mr. Sartori, will later report in detail of the Committees' doings.

During the past year the Section has seen a change in the personnel of its central office staff, as Mr. W. H. Kniffin, our former Secretary, resigned some months ago to accept a position with the Onondaga County Savings Bank of Syracuse, N. Y. No better evidence of the efficiency of Mr. Kniffin's services can be asked for than his selection for such a responsible position as that which he now occupies. The Section is under distinct obligations to him for all that he did to increase its usefulness and further its growth. We have been most fortunate in obtaining as his successor, Mr. E. G. McWilliam, for some years connected with the Irving Savings Bank of New York, and actively and successfully interested in the New York Chapter of Institute of Banking. He has already demonstrated that he will prove a worthy successor to the late Mr. Hanhart and Mr. Kniffin.

The activities of the various Committees of the Section will be reported by their Chairmen.

In this connection I would earnestly commend the work of the Standing Law Committee of the General Association on which we are well represented. The Committee, under the chairmanship of Mr. Jay, has made a most thorough and exhaustive inquiry into the matter of the Segregation of Savings Deposits, and I would commend to you a careful consideration of their report. The fact that the matter is not to be pressed to a definite conclusion is no evidence of lack of general interest. It is but natural that such a serious change for banks that are not at present under the jurisdiction of a Segregation law should meet with serious opposition, but we believe that this campaign of education will in the end prove effective. The rapidly growing feeling of moral and social responsibility that is so much in evidence in our political and economic life must of necessity work in favor of this cause and will bring home to the bankers of the country a growing feeling of peculiar responsibility as to the custody of the savings of the thrifty wage-earners who, in these extravagant times, have had the moral strength to save something from their earnings. They are obviously entitled, both because of their worthy endeavor and because of their lack of experience in such matters, to peculiar consideration.

I would also call your attention to the campaign of education in matters pertaining to the encouragement of thrift which the Association is carrying on under the supervision of the Committee on Methods and Systems and the Committee on School Savings Banks. Such a campaign should be of far-reaching influence, and should do much to encourage the practices for which we all stand.

It is unfortunate that political conditions have been such the past year as to make it impossible to achieve anything in the way of Currency Legislation. The campaign for such improvement has, however, but just begun, and I would bespeak most earnest co-operation from all the members of this Section to the end that our banking system may be brought to a condition that will meet the demands of present business and economic needs. This question is broader than one of Sections, had broader than any simply of banking, and it behooves us, one and all as good citizens, to put our shoulders to the wheel to do what we can to see that satisfactory banking and currency legislation is enacted at the earliest possible date.

It is but fitting in ending my term of service as President of this Section that I should express my deep appreciation of the uniform courtesy and help extended to me, not only by the members of the various committees and the Executive Committee, but by the members of the Section as well.

Before beginning on our regular programme I would ask the gentlemen present in rising to speak or who wish to make a motion that they plainly state their name and the State from which they come. This simplifies the duties of our stenographer very much.

The next business is the report of the Executive Committee, of which Mr. J. F. Sartori is chairman, and also is President of the Security Trust & Savings Bank, Los Angeles, California. (Applause.)

Mr. J. F. Sartori, California: Much of this report has already been referred to and covered by the remarks of our President. He has also stated that the work of the committees in detail will be shown by the report of the Secretary.

Report of the Executive Committee.

[The report of the Executive Committee appears on page 204 of this publication.]

President Aiken: Gentlemen, you have heard the report of the Executive Committee. What action will the Convention take upon this?

Mr. J. H. Johnson, Michigan: Mr. Chairman, I move that it be received and filed.

This was seconded.

Thereupon, this motion was put to a vote by the Chairman and the motion prevailed.

President Aiken: The next business is the report of the Secretary, Mr. E. G. McWilliam.

Report of the Secretary.

[We print the report of the Secretary on page 205.]

President Aiken: Gentlemen, you have heard the report of the Secretary. What action will the Convention take upon it?

It was thereupon moved and supported that the report be received and filed.

Thereupon this motion was put to a vote by the Chair and the motion prevailed.

President Aiken: The Chair would like to call the attention of the members to the fact that the financial statement of the Section appears on page 57 of the Book of Reports of the Association, which are here for the members.

The next business is the report of the Law Committee. Mr. John H. Sturgis, Treasurer of the Franklin Savings Bank, Boston, Chairman of this Committee, was unable to be present. Mr. Sartori, as a member of that Committee, will report on Mr. Sturgis' behalf.

Mr. J. F. Sartori, California: Mr. President, this Committee consists of Mr. Sturgis, Mr. Knox and myself. Both Mr. Sturgis and Mr. Knox being absent, I will read the report of the Chairman.

Report of the Law Committee.

[We print the report of the Law Committee on page 206.]

President Aiken: You have heard the report of the Committee. What action will the Convention take upon it?

It was moved and supported that the report be accepted and filed, which motion was put to a vote by the Chair and prevailed.

President Aiken: The next business is the report of the Membership Committee, which will be made by Mr. F. C. Nichols, Treasurer of the Fitchburg Savings Bank, Fitchburg, Massachusetts.

Report of the Membership Committee.

[The report of the Membership Committee will be found in page 206.]

President Aiken: Gentlemen, you have heard the most excellent report of the Membership Committee. What action will the Convention take upon it?

It was moved and seconded that it be received and placed on file, which motion on being put to a vote by the Chair prevailed.

Mr. Frank H. Briggs, Colorado: Mr. Chairman, wouldn't it be well for this Section to endorse the suggestion contained in that report, and also emphasize it, that the Membership Committee be enlarged so as to include one member from each State? I make that as a motion.

President Aiken: Mr. Briggs moves that the Membership Committee be enlarged so that it shall consist of one member from each State. Is the motion seconded?

The motion was seconded.

President Aiken: The President would like to ask Mr. McWilliam to say a word in regard to that. I have talked with Mr. McWilliam about it, and he is well posted as to the general efforts made in obtaining members and as to the most effective and economical method to pursue. I will ask him to say a word with regard to that.

Secretary McWilliam: Mr. Chairman, in that connection I would simply say that we have a Vice-President in every State now, whose special function it is to help the Membership Committee in obtaining new members in their respective States. It seems to me that adding to this Committee would make it a little unwieldly. I would, therefore, suggest if you want to increase the size of this Committee that you increase it, say, to five instead of three, and then let them get into personal touch with the Vice-Presidents in each State, whose special functions it is to foster these matters.

Mr. J. F. Sartori, California: Mr. Chairman, that is just the point I desired to make. I was Vice-President for our State at one time, and when letters were sent to me as such Vice-President, I felt it my duty to send a personal letter to every banker in the State soliciting his membership. I think that is the idea of not only this Section, but of each of the other Sections of this Association, and that that is supposed to be the duty, one of the duties, of the Vice-President for each State of these various Sections.

Mr. H. P. Beckwith: Mr. Chairman, I occupy the same position as Mr. Sartori and happen to be a Vice-President in North Dakota. I agree with him entirely. I understand that the chief function of a Vice-President is to kind of look after the interests of the Savings Bank Section. I know I have tried to do something, with fair success. If it is in order, I would move you, sir, as a substitute motion, that the Membership Committee be increased to five members, and that this membership Committee should get into communication, of course, with the natural channels, the Vice-Presidents, as they act in their different States. With five members you can get three together most any time.

President Aiken: The Chair would say that there is no limitation on the number of members of this Committee. I will say that the power to appoint five, or seven or any number is lodged in the appointive power.

Mr. Beckwith: I didn't understand that.

President Aiken: Is the amendment seconded?

The amendment was here seconded.

President Aiken: Mr. Briggs, do you accept the amendment to your motion?

Mr. Briggs, South Dakota: I shall be very glad to.

President Aiken: Are there any further remarks? The question is as to the amendment to Mr. Briggs' motion that the President appoint a Membership Committee of five, as I understand it?

Mr. Beckwith: Yes, sir.

President Aiken: Who are to co-operate with the Vice-Presidents in the States in obtaining new members for the Association. Are you ready for the question?

Voices: Question, question.

Thereupon, the amendment was put to a vote and prevailed.

President Aiken: The next business is the report of the Committee on School Savings Banks, of which Committee Mr. N. F. Hawley, Treasurer, Farmers & Mechanics Savings Bank, Minneapolis, Minnesota, is Chairman.

Mr. N. F. Hawley, Minnesota: Mr. Chairman, this Committee was appointed in March, and since that time, while there has been considerable correspondence by the Chairman, the Committee as a whole have had little more time than to become impressed with the magnitude of the work that has been put upon them. The report is as follows:

Report of the School Savings Bank Committee.

[This report appears on page 206 of this publication.]

President Aiken: Gentlemen, you have heard the report of the School Savings Bank Committee. What action will the Convention take upon it?

Mr. Stephenson, Indiana: I move that it be received and filed, and also would suggest that we approve of the recommendations made in the report.

Which motion was seconded, and on being put to a vote by the Chair, prevailed.

President Aiken: The Chair cannot but express appreciation of the evidence of interest in the proceedings of this Section. In the seven or eight years he has been attending these meetings I think there has never been any such attendance as this at a meeting of the Savings Bank Section. As an evidence of gratifying interest in the things that we are pursuing, it is most satisfactory. The Chair feels confident it is partly prompted by the interesting speakers that the Committee on Arrangements has asked to come here. They decided, after some deliberation, that they would invite the Post Office Department to send a representative here to speak on Postal Savings Banks. Many members of the Association, probably a majority, were opposed for various reasons to the establishment of the Postal Savings Bank in this country, but an omnipresent Congress passed a law providing for such savings banks, and they are now in successful operation. It seemed to your Committee that, as liberal minded men and as public spirited citizens, as well as bankers, it behooved us to have at least an intelligent knowledge of the method of conducting these banks, so that perchance it might be demonstrated to us that our fears were groundless, so that we might be in a position both to recommend or to criticise the operations of these banks, looking, in co-operation with the Post Office Department, toward the encouragement of the very objects for which the savings bank stands. The Post Office Department was good enough to designate the gentleman at the head of the Bureau of Postal Savings Banks, Mr. Weed. Mr. Weed has come here at considerable personal inconvenience to tell you what he has done there. Mr. Weed has constructed the Postal Savings Banks of the United States as they exist to-day. The responsibility was put on him, and he has been largely responsible for the carrying out of this law. Whatever our feelings may be, those of us who know what the operations of the Postal Savings Bank are to-day know that it is an administrative task which has been one beyond the imagination of the average business man's experience, it is so wide in extent, and the detail of its operation is so overwhelming. We are to be congratulated that we have with us a man who knows just what has been done, what it is proposed to do and what the Postal Savings Bank will probably accomplish in the future. I have great pleasure in introducing Theodore L. Weed, Director of the Postal Savings System in the United States.

Mr. Theodore L. Weed: Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen: The Postmaster-General had looked forward with a great deal of pleasure to addressing you gentlemen until only a short time ago, when Congress, after an unusually delayed adjournment, passed the Parcel Post Bill and thereby added one more to the many burdens we are now carrying in the Postal Department. As you probably recall, Congress adjourned about the end of August and allowed us only four months in which to prepare for that stupendous new undertaking, and necessarily it required the entire time of Mr. Hitchcock in Washington, so much so that he has had to forego any plans for a vacation that he might have had in mind. You know that Congress is not usually considerate of the plans of any officers in the Executive Departments of Washington. Perhaps you gentlemen yourselves have had some little experiences with Congress in that respect. I know I did have an experience of that kind two years ago when they passed the Postal Savings Bill on June 25, 1910. At that time we were in the midst of the tremendous fight we had with the magazines. You will remember that we made a determined effort to change the rates on second-class material, and the opposition it aroused from the publishing interests of the country was gigantic.

But, however, two years ago on June 25, 1910, the Postal Savings Bank Law became a law after an agitation that had lasted for all of forty years in this country.

The Postal Savings Bank and the Banks.

[Mr. Weed's address in full will be found on page 190 of this publication.]

President Aiken: Mr. Weed, we are all very grateful to you for your interesting and enlightening talk. Gentlemen, in regard to questions which Mr. Weed will be kind enough to answer, it seems to me it is but fair to Mr. Weed to say that it would hardly be fair to ask him controversial questions as to the merits or demerits of the Postal Savings Bank. Mr. Weed is anxious to answer, so far as he can, any questions as to the operation of the law, so in asking questions the Chair would ask the gentlemen to please refrain from asking controversial questions.

Mr. A. W. Johnston, New York: I certainly appreciate the information that Mr. Weed has given us here. I would like to ask a few questions which would add to our knowledge, and the questions I think will appeal to all present. First, is there a method of report by which the nationality, age and so forth of the depositors in the Postal Savings Bank is kept?

Mr. Weed. Yes, sir.

Mr. Johnston: Does it ask them the question when they make their deposit as to whether they have any deposits in other banks?

Mr. Weed: No.

Mr. Johnston: What means, then, could be had of ascertaining whether they were bank depositors previously or not?

Mr. Weed: Well, so far as the records are concerned, none.

Mr. Johnston: Then, let me ask you, after they have taken out this account, at any time, while the limit is only $500, can they take up bonds in any quantity between that time and still keep up their maximum of $500, no matter how many bonds they take up of the United States Government?

Mr. Weed: Yes, sir.

Mr. Johnston: Then it is practically unlimited and they can take up bonds at any time they choose for this money?

Mr. Weed: Yes, but to the extent of $1,000 a year. A man might, by making his deposit of $100 a month, start in January, reach the maximum in May, convert this into a bond at the end of that time and then begin over again.

Mr. Johnston: Is there a public report? Has there been a public report giving such statistics as the Postal Service has taken?

Mr. Weed: Yes, under the law there is. I thought I had a copy of it with me, but I find I have left it downstairs. Under the law the Board of Trustees is required to submit annually at the close of the fiscal year, which is, as you know, in June, an annual report, showing the amount of money on deposit, the money withdrawn, interest paid and receivable and many other statistics of a similar nature regarding the nationality, age and sex of the depositors.

Mr. Johnston: In a number of Postal Bank offices that have depositors, what is about the present receipts, the total amount per month?

Mr. Weed: In banks?

Mr. Johnston: In post offices, money?

Mr. Weed: Well, it varies, of course. It varies very widely. In some offices we have not received a dollar a month.

Mr. Johnston: Well, of all the offices per month of the United States, or per week.

Mr. Weed: Oh, I understand. I can answer that question. We are receiving now monthly approximately $2,000,000, $2,000,000 a month, with 12,000, pretty nearly 13,000, offices in operation. We find our receipts are increasing normally. That is, they increase about between 6 and 8 per cent. a month. Of course, we intend to extend the system monthly, as I said a while ago, at the rate of 1,000 offices each month, until we have designated every money order post office in the United States, which will mean over 50,000 branches in operation. But we must not lose sight of the fact that now, having covered 7,500 offices of the Presidential class, and by that I mean, what are known as first, second and third class offices in the larger cities, we are going into these small fourth-class offices, in the rural communities, where no banks exist and where there are banks who do not care to qualify, and where the receipts at best must be very small.

Mr. Johnston: May I ask, then, what are the withdrawals, the total withdrawals for the same period?

Mr. Weed: I think I am giving you the net figures now. I should say that the total withdrawals thus far, so far as our observation goes, would amount to about 33 per cent. of the total receipts. The withdrawals are very, very heavy, and they are very extensive, but I do not see how the United States Government can do otherwise than we are doing now. The suggestion has been made that we accept an account only with a proviso that no money shall be withdrawn short of thirty days' notice, not because we haven't the money on hand, but in order to, in effect, force the people to save. But the broader view is that it would destroy confidence in the system, and that is something that the Government as a Government should not attempt to do.

Mr. Johnston: Are there statistics giving all the general expense that the Government has incurred or is incurring in Postal Banks?

Mr. Weed: Oh, yes.

Mr. Johnston: Will you give me the total?

Mr. Weed: No, I could not yet, because we are not prepared to give it out. But a very accurate cost keeping system is employed in our Bureau, and we know what it costs to maintain our headquarters. There is a more indefinite proposition, however, in the post offices. With very few exceptions we have not employed any additional clerks in the post offices. We have simply taken up the slack time, as we term it, of clerks in most of these post offices. In post offices where there are money order clerks it stands to reason that people are not standing there in line waiting to buy money orders at all hours of the day. So it happens in these periods, when the clerk is not working on money order business, these money order clerks devote their time to the Postal Savings work. Just what that involves is an unknown quantity, but we are getting reports from the postmasters. When these are received I can give you more definitely the figures on that proposition.

Mr. Johnston: Have there been any serious losses, burglaries in the Postal Savings System?

Mr. Weed: No, there cannot be. You understand that our postmasters are bonded, so that in any event if our largest post offices were looted, the Government would lose no money, the bonding companies would suffer the loss.

Mr. Johnston: If a safe is burglarized and $50,000 is taken from it, is that considered to be the postmaster's loss?

Mr. Weed: It is between the postmaster and his bondsmen entirely. The Government cannot lose a thing. There have been, and, of course, always will be, some minor robberies. We have ourselves, though, a very important detective force, known as the Post Office Inspection Service, about which you have read. You are quite familiar, too, with those operations within the past two years in running down many of the fraudulent enterprises in the country. So it happens when these small burglaries occur, as a general proposition, our post office inspectors catch up with the thieves. I might state the instance of the Richmond Post Office about a year and a half ago where about $90,000 was stolen, and we recovered it all but a very small amount of stamps. But, if not recovered, as I say, the United States Government can lose no money, because our postmasters are all bonded.

Mr. Johnston: Is there any account of what disposition is made of the funds deposited with the banks after they have been deposited with the banks as to whether any of it goes in local mortgages, or what proportion of it goes in local mortgages?

Mr. Weed: No, no. You mean after we turn our money over to the national and State banks.

Mr. Johnston: Yes.

Mr. Weed: Not at all, no. That is a matter with which we are not concerned.

Mr. David McK. Lloyd, Pittsburg: What I would like to ask Mr. Weed is this in particular. I have never opposed the Postal Savings Bank Act. I have been invited to go down to Washington to fight it and so forth, but I have not done so for this reason. I have always claimed that the largest amount of depositors that the Postal Savings Bank could receive would be from the foreign element, because they are trained up, you know, in their governments to rely on the government, and that in time if the savings banks would pay a very larger amount of interest, that the government would train them up, train up this foreign element, and eventually that the savings banks would get the benefit of their training. The reason I would like to ask the question is this: You were naming over some of the cities that had deposits, had depositors, and the amount of deposits. I come from Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, where we have the coke ovens and other industries, and we have a very large amount of the foreign element there. I would like very much to know what success you have had in Pittsburg in the amount which has been received in deposits.

Mr. Weed: Pittsburg, to a certain extent, has been a disappointment. (Laughter.)

Mr. Lloyd: That is because we pay 4 per cent.

Mr. Weed: When we started a Postal Savings System the Postmaster General was most careful to go into only those offices where the postmaster, in the first instance, had a good rating. You know we rate our postmasters just the same as we do our clerks, and if they are no good they are usually put out of office. Well, as I say, we went into the offices where the rating was good. The next consideration was the foreign element of population, and the foreign money order business. Do you know that last year about $100,000,000 was sent abroad through the money order system? Well, it was our great ambition to hold as much of that money in this country as possible, because this destination in Europe is unnecessary. Some of it undoubtedly goes to the foreign postal savings banks. Some of it, and a good deal of it goes to the relatives of immigrants, who bring it back to the United States again. Through our desire to hold all that money in this country, as I say, we selected those offices where the foreign money order business was successful. That naturally took us into Pennsylvania, into your coke and coal regions. I am very frank to say that many of those smaller places in Pennsylvania have responded most gratifyingly, but for some reason Pittsburg is a disappointment. I haven't even got it rated here in the twenty-seven largest cities, the twenty-seventh of which is Louisville, Kentucky, with $110,000. Therefore, I judge you have about $100,000 there.

Mr. Frank N. Briggs, Colorado: I want to ask one or two questions of Mr. Weed. I would like to ask, and I presume he knows without any trouble, whether the foreigners who are depositors in this system exceed in number the Americans?

Mr. Weed: No, they do not. About 25 per cent. of them are foreigners.

Mr. Briggs: The Americans then are the greatest depositors in this system?

Mr. Weed: Yes.

Mr. Briggs: Another question I wanted to ask was this: Isn't it a fact that the capitalization of the national banks, the capitalization and surplus in the United States, is a great deal larger than that of the State banks of the United States, so that your deposits in national banks, which are based entirely upon capital and surplus, is much larger in the national banks than in the State banks.

Mr. Weed: I wouldn't undertake to answer that.

Mr. Briggs: I believe that is true. There is another question which came to my mind, which may not be entirely a question, Mr. Weed: Was the statement you made in the beginning of your address, that you personally favored the taking off of the limit on deposits that could be made, provided the interest rates were reduced, correct?

A Member: No, that wasn't it.

Mr. Weed: No, it was provided that the amount at which interest was paid was limited to $1,000.

Mr. Briggs: I will accept that and I beg your pardon for the misstatement. I did not intend to make a misstatement. It amounts, however, to a reduction in interest. It is a reduction of the amount that will draw interest. It is a maximum of $1,000 on which interest can be paid.

Mr. Briggs: Now the total limit of a deposit is $500?

Mr. Weed: Yes.

Mr. Briggs: For any one individual?

Mr. Weed: Yes.

Mr. Briggs: You advocate the withdrawal of that limitation and leave it at an unlimited amount providing that no interest shall be paid above $1,000. Is that it?

Mr. Weed: That is substantially it, yes. I would advocate this act—well, let me tell you the story comprehensively. The law limits depositors to depositing $100 a month.

Mr. Briggs: Yes.

Mr. Weed: And restricts the maximum balance to $500.

Mr. Briggs: Yes.

Mr. Weed: I advocate no limit on deposits. I advocate that because of these tremendous sums of money which we are apparently turning down and sending back to their places of hiding every day. But, I would restrict the sum upon which interest may be paid to $1,000. The reason I entertain that view is because I believe that would prevent money being drawn from banks by people who are more or less timid, especially from savings banks, who would place it with the United States Government in order to get a fairly good interest, and putting it where they consider they have the security of the nation.

Mr. Briggs: Now, Mr. Weed, I may be slightly out of order in what I am going to say. I will give you an illustration for the purpose of fixing this in your mind——

President Aiken: Mr. Briggs, I am very sorry, but the Chair must rule that out of order. That opens up a controversy over which we can talk indefinitely. Mr. Weed is simply to answer questions as to the operation of the law, and not to discuss the merits or demerits of the system.

Mr. Briggs: At a later time, then, in this Convention I shall offer a resolution voicing our sentiment against the taking off of the lid on savings deposits. I am of the opinion it would be a very dangerous thing.

President Aiken: That will be within your rights, sir.

Mr. Fred W. Hyde, Jamestown, N. Y.: It is an axiom that a safe made by one man can be cracked by another man. You state that your certificates are practically perfectly safe.

Mr. Weed: Yes.

Mr. Hyde: We have so many drafts and checks forged and misused that I would like to know the method by which you make that absolutely safe.

Mr. Weed: I will be very glad to tell you, which requires a description, of course, of our operation. Our certificates are issued in duplicate. They bear a statement upon the face that they are neither negotiable nor transferable. When the depositor makes a purchase say of a $100 certificate he signs a duplicate in the presence of the clerk. That duplicate is placed on file in the post office in a jacket, on which, speaking of the jacket, he has likewise signed his name and answered a number of strictly personal questions, his age, his father's name, his mother's name, his place of birth, whether married or single, if married his wife's name. He takes away the original of that certificate which is his evidence of deposit. Now, a month passes and he wishes to draw down his $100. He brings that original certificate and the postmaster asks him to endorse it on the back, in the place that is provided for his signature. He does so. That endorsement is compared with the one on the duplicate certificate that has been on file in the post office, and if it does not agree, other questions are asked him of a personal nature, the questions for instance, that around this jacket that is on file with the postmaster, and it becomes readily apparent that the man is a fraud. Of course, in the very first instance, if the man attempted to forge the signature he would have to be pretty clever to do it. But if he could succeed in forging the signature, and bear in mind he has nothing on this original certificate in the nature of a signature, nothing to go by, if he should find it, he wouldn't have the slightest idea how to sign the man's name. But, assuming that he was some intimate of the man, some member of the family, and that he could forge it, why then, he must be in a position to answer these questions accurately that are on the file with the postmaster.

Mr. Hyde: But, if he were a member of the same family wouldn't he be in a position to answer all those questions?

Mr. Weed: That thought just occurred to me as I spoke. (Laughter). That is an illustration that I never used before. I can conceive that such a thing might be possible. It might be that the man was clever enough to forge that signature, and clever enough to answer all these questions, and happen to be a man whom the postmaster did not know, why, then the fraud could be perpetrated. Of course, those are a number of important "ifs."

Mr. N. F. Hawley, Minnesota: Would that be the postmaster's loss or the government's loss?

Mr. Weed: That would be the postmaster's loss (Laughter).

Mr. J. F. Sartori, California. Suppose that the depositor can neither read or write. What is your system?

Mr. Weed: He may deposit by mark, witnessed by two individuals. The same questions and answers are taken and given, and certain information applying to the witnesses, so that every possible safeguard is thrown around that transaction.

Mr. Sartori: You must bring the witnesses in?

Mr. Weed: He must, yes. We have some difficulty on the Pacific Slope with Chinese and Japanese depositors. Frequently signing in their own characteristics, and we require the presence of witnesses in order to verify the account.

Secretary McWilliam: In that connection, have you ever considered the feasibility of using finger print identifications?

Mr. Weed: Yes, we considered it. We considered it at the time, but we believed that it was unnecessary. We believe it is unnecessary. It may prove that it is not. It may prove desirable one of these days. That remains to be seen.

Mr. Elias A. Smith, Utah: You stated that the depositors, that is, of savings funds, were permitted to use the Sign "U. S. Depository."

Mr. Weed: "For Postal Savings Funds."

Mr. Smith: Should the words "Postal Savings Funds" be attached as a part of that advertisement?

Mr. Weed: Yes, they must be; otherwise it would conflict with the ruling of the Treasury Department.

Mr. Smith: Where such a condition exists where they have not used it what would be your remedy?

Mr. Weed: Where they have not used it?

Mr. Smith: Where they have not used it.

Mr. Weed: I do not represent the Treasury Department.

Mr. Smith: I represent a savings bank and I know of another one who does not use the words "Postal Savings Fund."

Mr. Weed: Well, of course, that is a violation of our regulations, the spirit of it is not the letter of it.

Mr. Creer: There seems to have been a little laughter aroused at Mr. Weed's description of the safeguards thrown about identification. If any banker here present uses any greater or better safeguards, or anything but what is practically identical with what Mr. Weed has described I would like to hear of it.

A Voice.—And I.

Mr. Hyde, New York: That was just the purpose of my question, sir.

President Aiken: If the Chair may interpolate a little personal experience in connection with the bank over which he presides of between fifty and sixty thousand depositors, a great many of whom can neither read nor write. In my experience I remember of no single case where money has been fraudulently obtained through answering the questions Mr Weed states were asked, by a person other than the one who had originally made the answers.

Mr. Ed. L. Robinson, Baltimore, Md.: I recall a case where all these questions were answered satisfactorily, and the claim was made that it was a forgery. The jury decided that it was not. But, I can conceive that a member of the family could answer such questions. Have you had that experience, Mr. Weed?

Mr. Weed: Well, it is conceivable; but you, gentlemen, have had so much greater experience than any of us. We are mere beginners—amateurs, if you will—but it seems to me this, that it is extremely unlikely. In the first place there are so many elements must agree. A man must be a capable forger in order to reproduce the signature accurately. In the second place he must know the answers to the questions which his brother or his uncle or his father has made, and that is not necessarily a sure thing that he does know. But even admitting that he does, and that he is an expert forger, then a third element enters into it. He has got to be unknown to the clerk at the window. Now, all that is a simple matter in New York or in Philadelphia or Chicago, in most of the communities it is a very difficult matter, because patrons of the post office are well known to the clerks, especially if they go to the Banking Section, just as in your own banks, I think that your receiving tellers become pretty well known. You see the money cannot be withdrawn under our present regulations unless it is actually presented at the post office where the funds are on deposit. It might be a simple matter if he could go to some other city, but he cannot. That money will only be cashed at the office of origin; so there are three elements that must come together: The expert forger, his accurate knowledge of the answers given by his relative, and the fortunate circumstance of his being unknown at the window; and I think you will agree with me that those three elements could rarely come together in any such sequence as that.

Mr. Robinson, Baltimore: I simply wish to state that, as a matter of fact, in our banks those elements did come together, and we have known of several forgeries that have taken place where questions such as these were answered exactly and the signature was very cleverly imitated. We ask the man his residence, his birthplace, his mother's maiden name, his age and his occupation. Of course, that is not done in every case, but practically in every case every depositor is required to answer his residence, birthplace and his mother's maiden name. In this particular case the individual who presented the pass book was acquainted with the handwriting of the depositor, made a very clever imitation of it, answered the questions satisfactorily and obtained the money. I simply want to throw out a suggestion that even with the safeguards that the Department has placed around it, a forgery is possible; and the statement that you made a little while ago that it was almost impossible would seem incredulous to some of us who have had that identical experience. Now, Mr. Weed, may I ask you this question: I live in Baltimore, and should I desire to open an account to the amount, say, of a thousand dollars in Baltimore, $500 in Baltimore and $500 of it in Washington, could I not do so?

Mr. Weed: No. The law forbids it. Perhaps there would be no way that we could detect what you had done, and to that extent we would not suffer, because we would have just so much more money on deposit.

Mr. Robinson: Would I be penalized in any way by having accounts in several cities?

Mr. Weed: Probably not, although the form that you sign, the form of application in opening the account, contains a statement, presumably a sworn statement from you, that you have no other account.

Mr. Robinson: Is it a sworn statement?

Mr. Weed: It should be. It should be. It is not. As a matter of fact, it is not.

Mr. Robinson: I don't want to quibble about it.

Mr. Weed: No. That would be a violation of the law, but I don't know that we would do anything except close out one of your accounts. We have done that already.

Mr. Robinson: Take a traveling man who goes from various points, from one place to another in the country regularly, and he has the power to open an account in any city he wants. But, as I understand it, these certificates can be cashed only at the post office where the deposit is originally made.

Mr. Weed: Exactly.

Mr. Robinson: Some of us are not familiar, Mr. Weed, with the character of that certificate that you issue. How is the payment of interest arranged upon these certificates? Say I make a deposit of $100 in a Postal Savings Bank and receive a certificate. When would I get my interest?

Mr. Weed: One year after date.

Mr. Robinson: It would be presented at the post office?

Mr. Weed: Yes.

Mr. Robinson: And there paid?

Mr. Weed: There paid.

Mr. Robinson: There is no way by which it could accumulate and compound?

Mr. Weed: It could accumulate but not compound. There is a table on the back covering a period of ten years that shows just how much interest is due at the end of each one of those ten years. If you wish to keep it, not present it for payment, the interest accumulates, but does not compound. However, if you should withdraw the interest, in an amount such as $1.00, you could immediately deposit that dollar and get interest on that; so actually your interest would be compounding during the years. But, just to answer or to illustrate the point that you raised a moment ago about two accounts, not long ago a man in California did it, and he did it with his eyes open, because he happened to live in one town, and nearby was another to which he frequently went, perhaps twenty or thirty miles away. So he opened his account in each town until he had deposited at the rate of $200 a month, a total of $1,000, and then he applied for bonds. He converted each of his $500 in each office under his own name, mind you, and those two applications came to us at Washington with his signature, and we caught him in that manner. Now you will ask what did we do. We put it up to the Attorney General. I wanted a legal decision. He said that the law provided no penalty, although it stipulated that two accounts should not be opened in one name. So the only thing to do was to cancel one account, return him his money, and to give him his bond for the other account. So there you are.

Mr. A. W. Johnston, Schenectady: Can a person make a deposit in the name of himself or herself as trustee for any member of the family after they have made the first deposit?

Mr. Weed: No, sir, they cannot. The law stipulates that there can be no trustee account nor society accounts or anything short of an individual account. A married woman can deposit free from any interference on the part of her husband; a child, likewise, if the child is over ten years.

Mr. Johnston: In the case of death do you take the same course that we do in regard to administration?

Mr. Weed: Yes, if the amount exceeds a hundred dollars. If the amount is a hundred dollars or less, it is turned over to whomever the depositor signified. But if it exceeds a hundred dollars then letters of administration are necessary. I want to say that I appreciate the suggestion you made a little while ago about asking the depositors, especially the foreign element, if they had any other accounts if they ever had any other accounts. I am going to adopt that idea. I am very glad to get it, and to get any other suggestions from you gentlemen.

Mr. Johnston: I would like to ask if you will give me the information what percentage of the 33 per cent. of withdrawals are for government bonds?

Mr. Weed: None, none. I have not that in mind at all

Mr. Johnston: That is outside.

Mr. Weed: That is outside of the government bonds

Mr. William C. Harris, Missouri: Touching the question of identification of the depositor, has it ever occurred to you Mr Weed, or do you use the method upon the identification certificate, which is issued by the office, of taking a word picture of the depositor as to the color of his hair, eyes, height and general contour?

Mr. Weed: No. That would be all right, too. Be a good idea. It was discussed in the beginning, but we thought that it might prove unnecessary, and certainly it would involve considerable value and in the larger post offices the men are pretty well trained as it is.

President Aiken: Mr. Weed, we are most grateful to you for this most interesting and enlightening talk. (Applause.)

Mr. Henry S. Henschen, Illinois: Mr. Chairman, I feel that the address by Mr. Weed has been one of the most interesting that this Savings Bank Section has ever listened to, and I am only sorry that the entire American Bankers' Association could not hear it. I feel that we have been instructed and edified by his remarks, and I move you, Mr. Chairman, that we thank him with a rising vote of thanks.

The motion, being seconded by Mr. Greer, was put to a vote by the Chair and the motion prevailed unanimously, the Convention rising.

President Aiken: Among the prerogatives of the Chair is the appointment of a Nominating Committee to report to-morrow. The Chair will appoint Mr. Edwards, of New York, as Chairman; Mr. J. H. Haas, of Iowa; Mr. Nichols, of Massachusetts.

The Chair would call the attention of the members of the Association to the fact that the meeting for to-morrow is on the programme for 9.30. This is a little early as your Committee knows, but we would ask for as prompt attendance as possible. I think that we can be assured of an equally interesting session. The Chair will entertain a motion for adjournment until 9.30 to-morrow morning.

Thereupon, on motion of Mr. Henschen, of Illinois, duly seconded, the Convention was adjourned until the next morning at 9.30 o'clock.

SECOND DAY'S SESSION.

September 12, 1912.

The meeting was called to order by President Aiken.

President Aiken: The first business on the programme this morning is the report of the Committee on Methods and Systems, by V. A. Lersner, Chairman, Assistant Cashier Williamsburg Savings Bank, of Brooklyn, New York. (Applause.)

Mr. V. A. Lersner, Brooklyn, N. Y.: Mr. President and members of the Savings Bank Section: Your Committee on Methods and Systems is very happy to report that these matters have engaged its attention during the past year. One was the matter of savings bank centennial, arranged for 1916; the second one was the question of mechanical methods of handling over-the-counter business from banks of varying sizes; and the third was the educational campaign, which was referred to this Committee at the May meeting of the Executive Committee at Briarcliff. The report of the Committee has been very kindly printed by the Executive Committee and distributed for your easier pleasure in reading. But I would like to read two sections of our efforts, that which refers to the centennial item, and also to the education. I will skip the matter referring to Methods ad Systems in view of the fact that it is largely statistical, and can be much better read and digested at your leisure.

Report of Committee on Methods and Systems.

[The reader will find this report printed on page 202.]

President Aiken: I am sure the members of the Convention are much interested in the most interesting report of this Committee. What action will the Convention take on the report?

It was moved and seconded that the report be received and filed, which motion was supported, and, being put to a vote by the Chair, was unanimously adopted.

President Aiken: Provision is made on the programme for a discussion of this report at this time, but it has developed that some of the gentlemen who are going to speak to us this morning have other engagements in connection with the work of the Association, and the Chair is going to take the liberty of placing this discussion after the addresses.

No one who has been interested in the economic development of the United States can but have been impressed by the great agricultural changes that have been going on here in the last twenty or thirty years. It is within the memory of all of us here that the United States was looked upon as one of the great food supplies of the world. We not only provided for ourselves, but we provided for countries abroad. These conditions have changed within the last twenty years, so that with increasing population and decreasing productivity of our farms we are now barely able to supply our own foodstuffs. The remedies for this must be worked out if we are to be a self-sustaining and prosperous nation. A number of gentlemen throughout the country, recognizing in this one of the most serious problems before the United States to-day, have given generously of their time and of their energy to try to solve this problem. We are fortunate in having one of them here to-day, who will speak to us on "European Land and Rural Credit Facilities." I take great pleasure in introducing Mr. Edwin Chamberlain, Vice-President San Antonio Loan & Trust Company, San Antonio, Texas.

European Land and Rural Credit Facilities.

After reading printed address, Mr. Chamberlain spoke as follows:

I might say, gentlemen, that I have gathered a great deal of data in the shape of contracts, forms and laws, constitutions and by-laws, in the different languages where I visited and in other places, and our Committee, the Agricultural Committee, of which Mr. Joseph Chapman is Chairman, are recommending to the Executive Council to have those forms all translated and sent out, giving the essential features that might be of importance to our Association, and I believe the programme to-morrow forenoon of the American Bankers' Association is going to be largely devoted to a discussion of the different features of the agricultural matter, and among them Mr. Charles A. Conant, who is quite an authority on finance, is also going to deliver an address bearing along the same lines as this which I have given, and I am very glad he is, because, of course, he is more of a student and a better authority than I am. I have done this all in just a few weeks over there, but I am greatly interested. I thank you for your attention.

First Vice-President Stephenson: Mr. President, this is a live subject in which not only the members of the Savings Bank Section are interested, but all the bankers throughout the United States are vitally interested in it. I think that Mr. Chamberlain is to be commended for the unselfish manner in which he has devoted his time and expense to the investigation of this subject, and I move that we extend to him a vote of thanks for the excellent manner in which he has presented the subject before us this morning, and that we authorize the Secretary of our Savings Bank Section to have printed a number of copies of his address for distribution among the members of the Savings Bank Section and to others who desire it.

This motion was duly seconded, and, being put to a vote by the Chair, was unanimously adopted.

President Aiken: As all of you gentlemen know, the functions of a savings bank are by no means limited directly to its monetary transactions. We all occupy an important part in the sociological organization of our communities. This is attracting more and more attention. We have with us to-day a gentleman whose bank is, I think, the largest mutual institution of savings in the world, and is doing a corresponding amount of work along these lines. Mr. John J. Pulleyn, Comptroller of the Emigrant Industrial Savings Bank, of New York, will tell us of some phases of that work. (Applause.)

The Savings Bank and the Community.

[Mr. Pulleyn's address on this subject will be found printed on page 196.]

Mr. William R. Creer, Cleveland, Ohio: Mr. President, I desire to offer at this time the following resolution:

"Whereas, the Committee on Methods and Systems has undertaken a campaign of education in savings and thrift throughout the United States; therefore be it

"Resolved, That the Savings Bank Section of the American Bankers' Association heartily endorses this movement, believing that great good will result, both to the country and the banks, and further that this Committee, when it is appointed for the ensuing year, be authorized to appoint sub-committees and proceed with the work according to their best judgment."

I move the adoption of that resolution.

This motion, being duly supported, was put to a vote by the Chair and the motion prevailed.

Mr. Clinton T. Rose, Syracuse, N. Y.: Before proceeding further I think it is due us, as savings bank men, to extend to Mr. Pulleyn a very warm vote of thanks for his excellent paper. His bank, of course, is one of the big banks, and he is one of the big men in this system. I knew his predecessor and his pre-predecessor in that big institution. Some few years ago I had the honor myself of being invited to prepare some statistics on savings banks, and I knew what that means. You cannot go to the Comptroller's report or the State report of New York and find it figured out. It means work. We are under obligations to Mr. Pulleyn for his excellent paper on savings banks. It is worthy of our careful thought and attention. I move a vote of thanks to Mr. Pulleyn for his paper.

This motion, being duly supported, was put to a vote by the Chair and the motion unanimously prevailed.

Mr. Allen W. Johnston, Schenectady, N. Y.: Mr. President, I am one of those who voted just now to thank Mr. Pulleyn, from New York, for his able and interesting paper, and as a New York man I might state that there are a few possible omissions that would be very interesting in connection with his paper; and if I may have just a moment to very briefly state one or two of them which should be considered in connection with the statement which the gentleman has made.

President Aiken: The Chair very much regrets that he cannot permit that at this time. There are a number of matters in the regular order of business that must be taken up. We will be very glad to hear from you later if we have the opportunity.

Mr. Johnston: All right.

President Aiken: The Chair would notify the members of the Executive Committee of the Savings Bank Section that following the adjournment of the present session there will be a meeting of the Executive Committee, including the new members to be elected to-day, in this room.

One other announcement: In view of the wide interest that has been evidenced in the matter of finger print identification for illiterates in savings banks, the Secretary has arranged to have an exhibit of the methods here. Perhaps many of you gentlemen have already seen it, but it is established on the ground floor in the registration room, and is subject to your inspection.

The next regular order of business is the report of the Nominating Committee. I will ask Mr. Edwards, the Chairman, to report.

NOMINATIONS.

Mr. Edwards then read the following report:

"Mr. Alfred L. Aiken, President of the Savings Bank Section, American Bankers' Association:

"Mr. President, your Committee on Nominations beg to submit the following report:

"For President, R. C. Stephenson, Vice-President of the St. Joseph County Savings Bank, South Bend, Ind.

"For Vice-President, J. F. Sartori, President of the Security Trust and Savings Bank, Los Angeles, Cal.

"Three members of the Executive Committee to serve three years: W. G. Toepel, Cashier of the Peninsular State Bank, Detroit, Mich.; Clinton T. Rose, President of the Onondaga County Savings Bank, Syracuse, N. Y.; H. S. Cable, President of the Rock Island Savings Bank, Rock Island, Ill.

"Regarding the nominations for Vice-Presidents for the several States, no opportunity has been afforded the members to make recommendations to this Committee. We therefore suggest that the members make such recommendations to the Secretary of the Section and submit same to the Executive Committee for approval.

"(Signed) G. E. Edwards,
J. H. Haas,
F. C. Nichols."

Mr. Wm. R. Creer, Cleveland, Ohio: Mr. Chairman, I move you, sir, that the rules be suspended and the Secretary be authorized to cast a ballot representing all here for the names placed in nomination.

This motion was duly seconded.

President Aiken: To carry out the strict parliamentary procedure, I believe this report should be adopted and an opportunity should be given for further nominations. Will you make such a motion, Mr. Creer?

Mr. Creer: My motion, of course, is, in fact, an adoption of that. There is still an opportunity for further remarks or further nominations if any one sees fit to do so.

President Aiken: The motion is made that the report of the Committee be adopted?

Mr. Creer: Yes.

President Aiken: All in favor will signify by saying "Aye."

The motion is unanimously adopted.

President Aiken: Are there any other nominations? If not the Chair will receive Mr. Creer's motion that the Secretary be instructed—will you repeat it?

Mr. Creer: That the rules governing the election be suspended, and that the Secretary be instructed to cast a ballot representing all the delegates present for the names nominated.

This motion, being duly supported, was put to a vote by the Chair and the motion unanimously prevailed.

President Aiken: The Chair will declare the following gentlemen elected: President, R. C. Stephenson, Vice-President St. Joseph County Savings Bank, South Bend, Indiana; for Vice-President, J. F. Sartori, President The Security Savings Bank, Los Angeles, California. For the three members of the Executive Committee, to serve three years: W. G. Toepel, Cashier Peninsular State Bank, Detroit, Michigan; Clinton T. Rose, President Onondaga County Savings Bank, Syracuse, New York; H. S. Cable, President Rock Island Savings Bank, Rock Island, Illinois.

One of the pleasantest duties that devolves upon the President of the Savings Bank Section is the induction into office of his successor. Mr. Stephenson, I want to offer my hearty congratulations, and to bestow the responsibilities, as well as the pleasures of this insignia of those responsibilities and pleasures, upon you. (Applause, while President pins badge upon President-Elect Stephenson.)

I cannot lay down my office without once again expressing my appreciation to the members of this Section for the many courtesies they have shown me, and to congratulate them on their new President and his fellow officers.

President-Elect Stephenson: Mr. President and gentlemen of the Savings Bank Section, I desire to thank you cordially for your kindness in elevating me to the highest office within the gift of the Section. The gentlemen who have preceded me in occupying this office have shown great efficiency and ability, and I shall certainly feel that I have been successful in the administration of my office if I can come up to the standard that has been set by the gentlemen who preceded me in the occupancy of this office. And I would request that Mr. Aiken proceed to act as the Chairman of this meeting until your adjournment. (Applause.)

President Aiken: I should like to say to the members present that I did not take my watch from the table because of any lack of confidence in my successor.

The next formality is the installation in office of the Vice-President. Mr. Sartori will present himself. (Applause.) I will say to Mr. Sartori that I congratulate the Section on this addition to their executive staff, as well as yourself on the honor that it implies.

Vice-President-Elect Sartori: Mr. President and gentlemen of the Section, I accept the office with a due appreciation of its responsibilities and of the honor conferred. As Mr. Stephenson has just said, our predecessors in office have set such a high standard, they have given so much time, so much good thought and so much of their efforts to the work in the cause of this Section, that it will be quite difficult for me to follow in their footsteps, but I assure you that, considering my limitations, I will endeavor to do the best of my ability in performing its duties. I thank you sincerely.

President Aiken: The Chair had supposed that he had definitely arranged—and I don't wish the members to infer that there was any general arrangement—but a definite arrangement with the prospective President that I should be relieved of my duties on his installation, but that does not seem to have come to pass, so that we will continue as we are for the time being.

Is there any new business to come before the Convention?

Mr. F. N. Briggs, Denver, Colo.: Mr. Chairman, yesterday morning during the discussion here over the report or the address of Mr. Weed of the Postal Savings Bank Department, I gave notice that I would introduce a resolution at this session, or before adjournment, considering a certain question which arose over statements made by Mr. Weed. [The point here raised by Mr. Briggs was then discussed quite at length, but in an informal way, and it was agreed that the discussions should not be made public.]

SEGREGATION OF DEPOSITS.

Mr. Creer: Mr. Chairman, one question which this Section has conscientiously and persistently pursued with a great deal of thought and effort is the segregation of deposits. General bankers throughout the country in various sections have opposed the idea, but slowly but surely the seed of the justice and equity of the segregation of savings deposits and the separate investment of those funds is finding a way and a place among the laws of the various States. I think it meet and proper that we should have a Committee in our Section on Segregation, and I move you, sir, that a Committee of Five be selected by the Executive Council upon the subject of Segregation of Deposits as standing committee.

The motion is duly seconded.

Mr. David Hoyt, Rochester, N. Y.: Mr. President, I have the honor to be elected Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Savings Banks of New York. In 1911 I had a request from the Superintendent of Banks for the appointment of a Committee of Five of our Association and a Committee of Five from the Trust Companies and a Committee of Five from the State Association. We met, fifteen men, in the Superintendent's office at Albany and discussed the subject, and by the way this American Bankers' Association, the law report of 1910, I think, gives a very exhaustive expose of the Segregation of Deposits in the States that have adopted it, and it would be very interesting for you to refer to and read upon it. We talked upon that subject for about three hours, and appointed a Committee of Five to meet the Superintendent of Banks and prepare a bill for the Segregation of Deposits. The tentative bill submitted was very modest, having a limitation of $500. All sums of $500 or less deposited in a bank that paid to exceed 2½ per cent. must be segregated that is, invested in savings banks securities of New York State, under the New York State law. The State went Democratic, and Mr. Cheney, our Superintendent of Banking, in about ten days was down and out. I called on the new Superintendent in New York, supposing he was in New York, and he was not in his office. I met his deputy, and I said: "What has become of that Segregation bill that we were working on?" He said: "Oh, Van Tuyl is a Trust Company man." (Laughter.)

Mr. Sartori: Mr. President, I was about to present a resolution upon the same subject, and I heartily indorse the resolution proposed by Mr. Creer. I hope we will take a vote upon it as soon as possible, for the reason that the time is getting late, and also for the reason that I believe that almost every savings banker present is heartily in favor of the principle of its preparation.

President Aiken: The motion before the house is that the Chairman of the Executive Committee appoint a standing Committee of Five, having for its special consideration the matter of Segregation. All those in favor of the motion will signify by saying "aye."

This motion, on being put to a vote, was carried.

President Aiken: Is there any further business to come before the Convention?

President Lee: Stephenson. I desire to offer a resolution that we extend our hearty thanks to the various members of the Clearing House of Detroit, to the newspapers and the reporters of this city and to Mr. J. H. Johnson, the Chairman of the Entertainment Committee for the courtesies and the many kindnesses that they have extended to us during our sojourn during the Convention in this city.

This motion, being duly supported, is put to a vote by the Chair and the motion unanimously prevailed.

Mr. Sartori: I move that a vote of thanks to our retiring President for the many years of his faithful and efficient service in this Section be extended, and we hope that he will meet with us often in the future and give us the benefit of his experience and service.

This motion, being duly supported, was put to a vote by Mr. Sartori, and the motion prevailed by a rising vote.

Mr. Sartori: The motion, Mr. President, is unanimously carried.

Mr. Creer: If there is no further business I move we adjourn.

President Aiken: Mr. Johnson, of Detroit, has something he wishes to say.

Mr. J. H. Johnson, Detroit: I have nothing to say, Gentlemen, except that I feel that is a rather pleasant finale to seven years of my work on the Council to have been enabled to assist in your entertainment in this hustling, and I hope before you leave you will say, "hospitable city of Detroit." We have been a little bit handicapped in the matter of hotel accommodations, because we have grown so fast that our clothes don't quite fit in the hotel line. But the next time you come this way we will have plenty of room and plenty of rooms, and we hope that you will have a good time until you leave the city, no matter how long you stay. The gate is unlocked and the key is on the outside, and if there is anything we can do for you, let us know. To such as have tickets for the Walker reception this afternoon I will caution that the boat leaves very sharply at 1.30 from the foot of Third Street. I thank you again.

Thereupon the motion to adjourn was put to a vote by the Chair and the motion prevailed.

(Wahl Adding Mechanism)

This machine is not only accurate itself but it enforces accuracy on those who use it. Likewise it admonishes to accuracy every clerk on whose work it affords a check.

Fewer errors are made in every bank where the Remington Adding and Subtracting Typewriter is used. Why? Because every clerk knows that this machine will infallibly detect his errors, and this knowledge makes him more careful in everything that he does.

Thus, the machine adds accuracy to mechanical labor-saving in bank remittance work, customer's monthly statement work, country bank statement work, and all work where writing and adding are done on the same page.

THE NEW-TYPE CAR IN AMERICAN STREET RAILWAYS.

It is more than a coincidence that the double-deck type of car has made its appearance simultaneously in the streets of several of the largest cities of the United States. The novelty marks an alteration in a characteristic difference of car type which has distinguished the great American city street railways from the practice in European countries. Because it embodies the prepayment system which British and Continental companies seem likely to adopt in due course as soon as some necessary readjustments are definitely arranged, the double-decker may some day become a familiar sight in American city streets. The two principles go very well together in car construction—economy in fare taking and economy in occupying track space. In the comparatively short time, seven years, since the prepayment type of cars became a commercial factor, more than 16,000 cars of this kind have been put into service, in 138 cities. In the combination of advantages of greater simplicity in the collection of fares, with a simultaneous reduction ot accidents, lies the greatest asset of the prepayment car. Large installations of cars of well accepted standard pattern have necessarily caused the responsible managers of older city companies to enter upon any new departure in car construction with deliberation and caution. The use of the prepayment car has now, however, become so widespread that a comprehensive collection of experience and operation results is possible. The Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company's report on the chief points to be noticed in the prepayment cars used on sixteen properties, in thirteen cities is, therefore, peculiarly appropriate and timely, and, it may be said, is extremely valuable for comparative purposes.

The introduction and use of the double-deck car in the United States is directly traceable to the structural alteration of cars found most suitable for the improved system of taking fares on the prepayment system. The pay-as-you-enter method, as designed by two Scotsmen and initiated by the Montreal Company some five years ago, when it was imagined to be rather a hazardous and courageous experiment, was found not only to check peculation on the part of the conductor, to the increase of the company's revenue, but incidentally to give passengers greater comfort, reduce the number of accidents and consequent claims and facilitate the more efficient operation of the cars. The experience of the New York Third Avenue line under the management of Mr. Whitridge, the receiver, was a triumphant demonstration of the power of the prepayment car in helping to retrieve the fortunes of a city electric railroad. Other companies followed suit and the prepayment system has now with suitable adaptation to zone fares made its way abroad. Curiously enough, the Gateshead City Company, which operates a suburban route outside Newcastle on the Tyne in England, has been the first to adopt the prepayment car as it was almost the first English company to employ the large double decker, drawn by a "dummy" steam locomotive. Congestion in the interior of the American cars having been relieved by the system, it occurred to the engineers of more than one great American city company that congestion of cars in busy streets might also be relieved if double-decked cars of moderate size as restricted by the clearance limits of the locality could be constructed so as to double the capacity of a car without the necessity of increasing the train crew or incurring the cost of extra "bogies" and car trucks, as would be the case in the employment of "trailers". The trailer, as matters now stand, is the only serious rival to the prepayment "double decker".

There are circumstances in which the double-deck car may be found unsuitable or unnecessary and where the trailer may provide the best means of relieving temporary heavy pressure of traffic. But the success which has attended the running of the double decker in the cities where it has been put into use during the summer seems to foreshadow the general introduction of the car for standard practice. Certainly it has found favor with the public. It has justified the hopes of the engineers of the lines which, in lack of willingness of the car manufacturers to undertake the building of such cars, started on their own initiative the building of the new type of car or the conversion of old cars in their local repair yards.

There is, consequently, much difference of detail in the internal economy and design of these prepayment and double-deck cars. The low-stepped centre door is the common feature of the cars designed and put into use respectively by the New York Railways Co., the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, the Pittsburgh Railways Company and the St. Louis United Railways Company. The Pittsburgh low-floor car, however, has the important distinction of two side doors separated by six or seven feet for entrance and exit, respectively. A new small motor has been developed under the direction of the company's officials, suitable for carriage upon a 24 inch wheel with 3½ inch clearance.

The aims of the designers of the New York Railways car, the Hedley-Doyle car, were, according to the former Interborough's Chief Engineer, directed to improvements in safety, comfort, better operation and relief of congestion. The actual operation has shown that dangers have been eliminated in getting on and off cars and discomfort and inconvenience greatly reduced for the passengers. Scientific ventilation and heating and suitable facilities for smokers have been provided, while open air transit during the entire year has been made possible, with improved and increased seating facilities. Pedestrians crossing the street in front of the cars are less liable to injury from the cars by the equipment of an extremely low fender so arranged that contact with it automatically shuts off the power, applies emergency brakes and instantly lowers the fender to the rails. Greater sanitation is secured throughout and motormen and conductors are enabled to work under better conditions in all weathers. There is every prospect that the reduction of congestion by the doubling practically of the carrying capacity per foot of street occupied will aid greatly the municipal authorities in controlling traffic congestion. Financially, enhanced revenues ought speedily to remunerate the companies for the outlay incurred in their energetic progressive improvement policy.

The trip-by-trip record of its experimental centre-entrance car maintained by the Brooklyn Rapid Transit RR., which is to be continued for several months, gave in July a maximum number of 108 passengers, of whom 58 were seated. With increasing familiarity of crew and public, the average length of stops was reduced in July to 2.29 seconds and the speed increased from 8.23 to 8.47 miles per hour.

That the experiments have proved the operation of the new type of car to be satisfactory is apparent from the orders put in by the various companies concerned for the construction of new cars. The New York City Railways Company has already given instructions for the building of 200 cars on the pattern of the single low-floor stepless car, and the Brooklyn Rapid Transit has ordered 100. The latter company has not yet ventured on a test of the suitability of the double-decker to its system, and, owing to the clearance height of bridges and trolley lines in use on some of its lines, it would seem to be impracticable. But in Manhattan the case is different, and the City Railways Company will try out the double-decker experimental car for some months, as the holiday sightseeing nature of the passenger traffic using it during the summer does not allow a fair basis on which to form a trustworthy estimate of its annual revenue-earning capacity or its advantages over the single-deck-type car. In any case other important considerations must enter into the calculations, such as the increase in the length of stoppage and the attitude of the traveling public when the first curiosity and novelty have worn off. Its suitability will be judged, moreover, by such local conditions as the presence of factory and other elements characteristic of populous districts outlying. Pittsburgh and Boston may find the long-haul through traffic to and from suburban crowded residential sections more profitable than would New York. It is probable, however, that the double decker has come to stay in the last-named city for the trunk routes, where it takes up less track capacity at cross streets than would a close line of single cars. Boston placed fifty cars in service in July last year. It quickly installed fifty duplicates and has now ordered 75 more. Philadelphia's first fifty led to demand for 500, and 800 more are ordered. Pittsburgh has converted fifty of its present cars into the low-floor type and has ordered 44 double-deck trailers, and six double deckers equipped with motors. In St. Louis no difficulty has been experienced on account of the novel entrance features and it is intended to purchase a number of trail cars to be operated during the rush hours. Milwaukee has embarked on a program of rebuilding the old standard, double and wooden body cars to suit the prepayment system and with a number of improvements and additional features.

In efficiency of operation the figures relating to the saving of time in stoppages vary considerably, owing to the calculations being made on different bases according to the number of stops throughout a journey or the enumerations made at certain fixed stopping places. But it is an interesting fact that the average time of passenger loading is given at Baltimore as 1.75 seconds, Boston 1.57 seconds, Cleveland 1.47 seconds, Detroit 1.73 and Washington 2.00.

While greater efficiency in operation has been obtained, the diminution in accidents has been a gratifying feature of the new-type car. Thus the four years' experience of Cincinnati has shown, according to the records, a noticeable decrease of accidents in boarding and alighting and better protection for the conductor. It was the desire to reduce accidents that specially led the officials of the Capital Traction Company of Washington, D. C., to introduce the pay-within system, and the comparative data collected by them show that the relative saving of expense due to accidents and damages therefrom is in the following rates—"Pay within" cars, 1, "pay-as-you-enter" cars, 4.03, old standard non prepayment, 14.8.

ELECTRIC RAILWAY OPERATION ECONOMIES.

While the central station power engineer is putting forward strong arguments to demonstrate the feasibility of effecting economies in the cost of power generation necessary for electric railway operation, workers in other departments of electrical science are equally active in studying how savings may be made by a reduction in the weight of equipment. The advance in structural design of rolling stock has been so rapid in the comparatively short period of the electric railroad's existence that considerable waste has been an almost necessary evil, equipments having become obsolescent in half a dozen years. The latest built roads are furnished with cars and traction apparatus of a sumptuous and superior technical character that has made the earlier type employed on the previously established lines seem old-fashioned and archaic by comparison, though for all practical purposes the usefulness of such rolling stock is far from being outgrown, and the possibility of a long life in service may still fairly be reckoned among the assets of its owning company. But the efficiency engineer is not to be denied his prerogative of investigating every means of saving where more and better work can be accomplished. Much of the apparatus before it is really worn out must unquestionably be consigned to the scrap heap as no longer fit for operation under the conditions of the high power developed in the generating machinery. Much may be saved for continued uses through reconstruction, but it is found that the original designs are often too clumsy and heavy to make it desirable that the stock should be used in conjunction with the improved motors and cars turned out from the chief workshops. There is reason for the contention that as the weights of car bodies and trucks have been reduced by the use of high-grade materials and pressed steel shapes, the weight of the motors and control apparatus may also be materially lessened with the diminution of the wear and tear on the tracks and at the same time the trustworthiness of operation may be increased with less cost of inspection and incidental damage.

Here then in the reduction of weight is one of the items in cost which may allow play for the construction engineer's faculties, provided he can ensure that reliability is not impaired but rather may be enhanced. To go to the extreme and endeavor to effect an immediate saving of two or three cents a pound as some have calculated by reducing the dead weight of a car or locomotive is poor economy, if the consequence is the more frequent renewal of wearing parts. It is nevertheless true that in the early days of the construction of electric rolling stock, development was so rapid that builders and repairers were apt to increase weight and section, using designs unnecessarily heavy. The processes in the manufacture of the machinery parts have greatly improved from the forges of the rolling mill to the lathe planing of the most delicate mouldings. As was evident from the proceedings of the International Conference for Testing Materials recently held at New York, metallurgical and chemical scientists, whose services are employed by the great railway, manufacturing and operating companies, have invented and introduced higher grades of material and are, day by day, producing castings and gear of greater tensile strength and increased capacity for sustaining stresses in operation. Mr. F. E. Wynne has thrown much light on what is being done and may be done in this direction of promoting economies in railway operation. He has pointed out to his fellow members in the American Institute of Electrical Engineers that the weight of motors is being considerably reduced by cutting out all useless weight in improved designs, or by re-designing so as to distribute the material where necessary for strength and effecting a reduction of weight in the whole body. The limit in the reduction of the useless weight in a motor, he thinks, has been nearly, if not already, reached. Improvements in steel castings of recent years have further reduced useless material by the employment of thinner sections than heretofore. Caution is needed in the use of high-grade insulation, as no great increase in capacity is to be expected, while sudden heavy loads on the motors and excessive heating of the entire armatures might in this particular inflict injuries offsetting any advantages to be gained from a little lighter weight. Engineers have found other means of saving power and increasing the output by forced ventilation and by a change in gear ratio. In the one case the continuous capacity of motors may be increased from 45 to 50 per cent of the one-hour current rating to 65 to 80%, even a small amount of air circulating through the motor having a surprising effect on its temperature and capacity. The system of forced ventilation employed in the pioneer single-phase locomotives of the New York New Haven & Hartford has been found so useful that it is now generally used, not only for locomotives but for some motor cars on the New Haven system, the Spokane & Inland Empire, the St. Clair tunnel and other lines. In the case of the change in gear ratio, where the armature speed can be safely increased without sacrificing economy of operation, it is not uncommon to save 15 or 20 per cent on power, though the weight of the motors alone cannot be changed materially.

It is further being proved that economy of operation can be secured by the elimination of all useless weight from control apparatus. This is effected by improved design of parts, more efficient arrangement of switches, more efficient use of resistance and the better location of apparatus on the car. For instance the device by which 13 unit switches have been connected so as to perform the same function for which 18 had previously been used in conjunction with high-voltage direct current motors has resulted in a better as well as lighter control. Closer co-operation between the car builders and electrical manufacturers may accomplish much in reducing to a minimum the amount of wiring under a car. Two motor equipments in place of four motor equipments have been found to give a higher weight efficiency as well as a higher electrical efficiency and hence have come into favor as these advantage have reinforced the consideration of economy on the first cost of maintenance.

Mr. Wynne, moreover, estimates that probably 5% to 10% of all the power used for propelling electric cars and trains could be saved by correct gearing. It is becoming better appreciated that questions of motor speed and gearing must be carefully considered in framing the estimate on which the installation of a new system or a new line should be undertaken. Many railway systems are under the necessity of operating more cars while their generating and distributing systems are already loaded to their full capacity. Before embarking on a large expenditure for the supply of additional power from isolated plants or central stations, it is the engineer's duty to weigh well what could be done by the reduction in power consumption with slow speed motors, especially in city service where there are frequent stops per mile and little or no necessity for running at full speed. There is much truth in the remark that high speed is too often assumed to be the essential element in building and maintaining traffic when in reality frequent service and ability to receive and deliver passengers at several central points in the terminals and towns served assures all the profitable traffic.

ELECTRIC RAILROADS AND THE FARM.

Among the rapid developments taking place under our eyes of the commercial application of electricity to every-day life, its use in farm operations must be reckoned as full of significance. Lack of labor and difficulty of transportation are as much causes of anxiety to the farmer as the uncertainties of the season and inclemencies of the weather. Electricity is coming to his aid and by all the accounts that come from West, South and East he is bestirring himself to take advantage of its beneficent utility. The farmer's strength is as the strength of two and more when he can summon electric power to be his help without excessive cost. If it can insure him a fair return on his capital, intelligence and personal labor, electricity may be expected to become a potent instrument in re-establishing the farming vocation in public estimation, greatly increasing the number of small and medium sized farms, and re-directing to the pursuit of agriculture as a pleasant livelihood the younger and pushing generation, who may have been discouraged or turned aside by the toil it necessitated and the disappointments it engendered.

The rural electric trolley and the interurban electric railroad are effecting a noteworthy change. Maps of various sections of the country recently published show how State after State is becoming gridironed in prosperous counties with electric tracks. The Central Association of Electric Railroads is particularly instructive in this respect. The Ohioan system, the Kentucky, Iowa and Illinois network of roads, in which the country backlands are being brought into close contact with the towns and great cities, are fraught with immediate profit in the populous heart of the country. But in the West, as the observers of the American Electric Railway Association noted in their recent trip from ocean to ocean, the development has been equally astonishing, and in no district have there been greater strides made than around Los Angeles and in the valleys of California. In all sections of the Pacific Coast the possibilities of the adaptation of electricity to almost every conceivable purpose in farming operations promise important aid in the solution of the vexed question how to reduce the high cost of living.

As the great ranches have been converted into homesteads and thousands of acres formerly devoted to grain fields cut up into small farms that a man and his family can easily cultivate by intensive methods, with the aid of electricity, saving labor time and money, California and other States cannot fail to become richer with added values to property and increase in population.

Traction interests have been foremost in familiarizing the farmer with the long-distance transmission of power, though irrigation in waterless areas where electricity could be obtained for pumping purposes and the distribution of water by hydro-electric plants of the mountain footholds may have run them a close second and in some cases led them. As the trolley lines have stretched out from the towns and market places into the country, their availability for the carriage of farm produce has been seen to offer the means of profitable revenue.

The generating station company has now stepped forward to take off the shoulders of the electric railroad company the special work of providing power. It is easy for the power company to adjust its power supply of electricity to the combined needs of traction, light and domestic uses. Farm operations are now following in the wake of the application of electricity to mining and irrigation. There is already satisfactory evidence that more than a beginning has been made through the employment of electricity on the farm to remedy the exhaustion produced by the pioneers of American farming, who, after exploiting the original fertility of the soil, when land was abundant and cheap, have moved to another location. A new era began when electric transmission made it possible to give agriculture the tendency to intensive farming, not only in the West and South, where there are large areas of dormant agricultural possibilities, but in the Eastern States also, as has been pointed out by Mr. Putnam A. Bates in a paper on the subject given at the Boston meeting of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers. Much work is ready to hand for years to come in the reclamation of worn-out farms and the barren lands of the Atlantic Slope by the use and distribution of electric power.

For the reduction of food prices in the great cities it is becoming clearer every day that we should look to the development of the "new agriculture". That includes as a necessary corollary, or precedent condition, the ready supply to the farmer of implements, seed and live stock as raw material. In the Eastern manufacturing States the short haul from the inland pasture lands and from the sea through the advantage of ocean and water routes from domestic and foreign lands, and the proximity of great consuming centres, ought to avail for the reduction of the cost of transportation. Ample opportunity awaits the farmer who takes occasion by the hand. The electric railroad chiefs, following the example of many of those directing the agricultural departments of the great trunk lines, have a fruitful field before them in using the ramifications of their systems to benefit the producing farmer and the consumer alike by the distribution of live stock, meat and grain.

When stock feeding for the production of meat becomes a great branch of the farming industry in the East, the transportation of the young cattle, first to the farm as raw material, to be manufactured in due course into marketable carcasses, is likely to be an important source of freight revenue for electric roads serving agricultural and inter-urban districts. Beyond, co-terminous with or intermingled with the "dairying" zone should be the stock-raising and feeding farms, distinct, however, just as the dairy breeds of cattle need specialization from the meat-producing sort. The introduction broadcast of alfalfa or similar pasturage, the cutting of the "roughage" and grinding the grains for ensilage need the distribution of electric power for economical operation. In the West large local supply stations are distributing light and power over large areas. Some of these installations provide irrigation through pumping plants and sub-stations, cover districts 80 square miles in area and are capable of extension, it is stated, to a radius enveloping 200 square miles of the rich lands of the lower Sacramento and Upper San Joaquin valleys of California. Reasonable rates enable the rancher and small homestead farmer alike to increase the production of his land and augment his revenue by 100% and more through the saving in time and labor alone. The telephone is also an invaluable handmaid in the Western farmer's equipment.

In the East progress has been tardy, but there are many instances of individual farms in Virginia, New Jersey, New York and Maine where electricity has been put to successful use. In dairying for scientific milk production and marketing it is found a convenient and economical form of energy for working the refrigerating plant, the cream separator, the cream and butter working. The electric artificial "milker" and even the electric "cow groomer" are making headway in their records at experimental dairies of the State agricultural departments and of pioneer farmers.

To furnish these farmers with the means of convenient local transportation is the next field of operation to be explored by the electric railways in their expansion. It has been stated, and may well be believed, that the money expended in wagon hauling freight to and from freight depots of one of the largest railroad systems in New England is greater than the gross receipts of the railroad from its freight business. The heavy cost and comparative slowness of this wagon haul to and from railroads must enter largely into the ultimate price paid by the consumer for farm produce, though it rarely receives its full recognition in the analysis of the various factors combined in the final charge. The work of interurban electric roads in territory tributary to steam railroads has greatly facilitated the local collection and distribution of traffic and is capable of great development, as is evidenced by the success attending the freight service of many country electric railways. In the next few years one may look for a branching out in this direction that will make present achievements appear trivial by comparison.

ELECTRIC RAILWAYS.

SECURITIES AND REPORTS.

This is one of our six Sections or Supplements. In using the series it is to be remembered that they are inter-dependent publications, complete only as a whole. If utilized together, and with the fresh items of news the "Chronicle" contains from week to week, the investor will have all the information he needs in seeking a safe and remunerative lodgment for his money.

Street and Electric Railways forcibly illustrate this inter-dependence. Such roads obviously rely for their income, and therefore in great part for the value of their securities, upon the population and activity of the country they serve. Hence constant reference to our "State and City" section will be found necessary by those wishing to purchase the stocks and bonds of street roads. Population, assessed valuation, tax rate, total debts of the counties, cities and minor municipalities are given at length in that publication, every one of which items is an essential fact contributing more or less to any correct estimate of the amount of suburban travel a given road commands.

The abbreviations used in our Electric Railway statements will be found explained in a table immediately following the last statement in this publication.

ORGANIZATION.—Charter granted in 1897 provides for an extensive system of free transfers. The company also, in addition to regular street railway taxes, has to pay ⅝ of 1% of gross "earnings of all lines owned, leased or operated by it," and a sum equal to the excess of the dividends over 6%. Its charter, however, is understood to "grant it exemption from reduction of fares, and also other immunities." (See Massachusetts RR. Commission, V 65, p. 1223.) Elevated cars run with electricity by "third-rail" system; surface lines by trolley. Six miles of elevated road opened in June 1901; in Aug. 1901 put in operation the Atlantic Ave. Loop Division.

Extensions.—An extension of the elevated road to Forest Hills was put in operation Nov. 22 1909: V. 89, p. 1410. In April 1905 $7,500,000 new bonds were issued to provide for this extension and for payment of floating debt, &c. See V. 80, p. 1423. On June 1 1912 put in operation the East Cambridge elevated extension, extending from Lechmere Sq., East Cambridge, through the West End of Boston, to North Station. V. 94, p. 1565.

On April 29 1903 leased from the Old Colony Street Ry. (now merged in the Bay State St. Ry.) all that company's tracks in the city of Boston, amounting to 23.753 miles. The lease is for 99 years and provides that besides paying taxes the Elevated Co. will pay 6 ⅛% of replacement value (appraised at $353,979, less the rental of certain short pieces of track appraised at $13,866) of the property leased as of date Feb. 16 1903, and 4% on the cost of all additions and betterments.

Lease of West End and Subway and Tunnels.—The West End Street Ry. is leased until June 10 1922.

In Dec. 1896 the West End Street Ry. leased the right to use the Tremont Street subway in Boston. See terms under West End Street Ry.

On Dec. 24 1904 the East Boston tunnel (under Boston Harbor) was leased by the Boston Elevated Ry. until June 10 1922 for a rental of ⅜ of 1% of earnings of all lines owned, leased or operated. The company also collects a toll of one cent per person, which goes to the city; but under the general extension of contracts made in 1911, this provision will be eliminated after June 10 1922. The tunnel was opened Dec. 30 1904. It extends from the main land to East Boston, 1.4 miles, and cost $3,500,000.

On June 28 1902 Washington Street Subway bill became a law. The city has constructed a tunnel for elevated trains and leased same to the Boston Elevated Ry. for 25 years at an annual rental of 4 ½% of total cost of construction, which up to Sept. 1912 was $7,580,203 net. V. 88, p. 98. Proposition was ratified by voters at Dec. 1902 election. V. 75, p. 28, 496, 1315; V. 77, p. 2097; V. 82, p. 217. The Washington Street tunnel began operation Nov. 30 1908. V. 87, p. 1477. In 1907 an Act was passed modifying plans somewhat, and permitting Boston Transit Commission to construct a subway to be known as the Riverbank Subway, but this was repealed in 1911.

Subways in Cambridge.—In June 1906 a measure passed by the Massachusetts Legislature became a law, which permits the Boston Elevated to construct two subways in Cambridge, and to issue stock or bonds to meet the cost. At the end of 20 years the city of Cambridge is to have the right to purchase these subways by paying their cost plus 7% interest, less dividends. V. 83, p. 93. See remarks concerning these subways in company's report for 1906, as given in V. 84, p. 155. Work on subways was begun Aug. 12 1909. The company in 1908 filed with the Mass. RR. Comm. preliminary estimates of the cost, showing an aggregate of $10,639,278. See V. 87, p. 1662. On Jan. 4 1912 the first through train was run in the new subway; it was opened for public travel Mch. 13 1912. V. 94, p. 1185.

New Construction of Subways and Old Contracts to be Extended.—In July 1911 Mass. Legislature passed an Act (accepted by the city and Bost. Elev. in Sept. 1911) providing for the construction by the city of three additional subways, viz., Dorchester Tunnel, Boylston St. Subway and East Boston Tunnel extensions and the extension of all existing contracts until July 1 1936, the date to which contracts for new lines are to run. Annual rental after expiration of old contracts to be as follows: Tremont St. Subway (see under West End), 4 ½% on net cost; East Boston tunnel (now expiring June 10 1922), 4 ½% on net cost (provision for tolls from passengers using the tunnel eliminated for extension period); Washington St. tunnel (now expiring Nov. 30 1933), 4 ½% on net cost. Annual rental for new lines: Cambridge connection, for first 20 years, 4 ½%, on net cost; thereafter 4 ½% on net cost; Dorchester and Boylston tunnels and East Boston tunnel extension, 4 ½% on net cost. The Act also provides that all contracts are to continue after July 1 1936 until terminated by a two-years' notice by either party. The various new leases and extensions of old leases were signed by the parties thereto on Dec. 7 1911. V. 93, p. 1785.

Damages by Noise.—In Aug. 1902 Judge Mason, in the Superior Court at Boston, held that the company is liable for damages from noise caused by the operation of trains. V. 75, p. 496. This was affirmed April 1903 by Massachusetts Supreme Court. V. 76, p. 809.

Strike.—The strike of conductors and motormen, which began June 7 1912, was ended July 29 1912, the company having agreed not to discriminate between union and non-union men. V. 95, p. 296.

Consolidation with West End Street Ry.—In July 1911 Massachusetts Legislature passed an Act (signed by the Governor on July 21 1911) superseding that approved May 28 1908 (V. 86, p. 917, 1342), permitting the consolidation of Boston Elev. and West End St. Ry. at the expiration of the present lease, on June 10 1922. 8% cum. 1st pref. stock of Bost. Elev. (having the ordinary voting powers, but not "entitled to participate in any increase or issue of new stock, com. or pref."), to be issued, $ for $, for West End pref. and 7% cum. (or 8% if arbitrators so decide) 2d pref. (having all voting powers without exception) for com. stock of West End. After the issue of the new pref. shares no other stock to be issued "prior or equal to such 1st pref. and 2d pref. stock without the consent of two-thirds of the holders of such stocks, respectively." The Act also provides that the Street Ry. shall forthwith sell to the Elev. Co. all unused real estate, the proceeds not exceeding $1,500,000 to be invested as a special trust fund and accumulate until June 10 1922. Thereafter the annual income thereof shall be applied to cancellation of 2d pref. stock. When all the 2d pref. has been retired then said fund shall be applied by the Elevated Ry. Co. to any purpose for which stock and bonds can legally be issued. See terms of Act in V. 93, p. 344. Shareholders of both the Boston Elev. and West End St. Ry. approved the Act; the former on Aug. 24 1911 and the latter on Sept. 6 1911. V. 93, p. 666. Holders of West End com. and pref. stock may on or before June 10 1922 exchange their stock at par for Elevated Ry. common. After June 10 1922 holders of Bost. Elev. 1st or 2d pref. may exchange their stock for an equal amount at par of Bost. Elev. com.

On Sept. 5 1911, in a suit brought to test the constitutionality of the Merger Act, Judge Colt in U. S. District Court sustained the demurrer of the West End St. Ry. and dismissed the suit to prevent the merger. V. 95, p. 618.

The Brooklyn City RR. Co. is held under a 999-year lease dated Feb. 14 1893, guaranteeing all fixed charges, organization expenses, taxes and 10% dividend on $12,000,000 of stock. The lease is nominally to the Brooklyn Heights RR. Co., but the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Co. owns the entire capital stock of the Brooklyn Heights Co. In 1898 the Heights Company leased the Brooklyn Queens County & Suburban RR. The lease was renewed year by year, rental being fixed charges, taxes and organization expenses. On July 1 1901 the B. Q. C. & S. began operating separately again. On April 1 1899 the Heights Company temporarily leased the Nassau Electric RR. Later permanent leases were made, but on June 30 1904 presumably in consequence of a decision (V. 79, p. 102) compelling the issuance of transfers, the lease of the Nassau Electric RR. was canceled.

The Brooklyn Heights RR. in April 1899 leased for the period of 999 years the Prospect Park & Coney Island RR. (see terms under the latter), the New York & Coney Island RR. and the Prospect Park & South Brooklyn RR., but the leases of these companies were assigned in March 1907 to South Brooklyn Rwy., which had been acquired by purchase in Feb. 1902. V. 74, p. 479. In July 1912, however, the South Brooklyn Ry. acquired 495 out of 500 shares of P. P. & So. Bklyn. stock and 820 out of 1,000 shares of N. Y. & C. I. V. 95, p. 47. The South Brooklyn Ry. owns the double-track road (1½ miles) extending from New York Bay, near 38th St., Brooklyn, to 38th St., near 9th Ave., Brooklyn, and in June 1907 increased its stock from $150,000 to $500,000.

In Nov. 1905 purchased at foreclosure for $262,000 the road of the Brooklyn & Rockaway Beach RR., 3¼ miles, from East New York to Canarsie, and later organized the Canarsie RR. Co., with $250,000 capital, to operate the road. V. 82, p. 1155. The entire stock of this company is owned by the Transit Development Co. Through elevated train service from the Broadway Ferry, appoining the Williamsburgh Bridge, to Canarsie was instituted July 30 1906. V. 83, p. 271; through service over the bridge to Delancey St., New York, was put in operation on Sept. 16 1908, the connection from Broadway Elev. to Bridge structure having been completed.

On May 21 1904 the Brooklyn Heights Railroad Co. signed an agreement with the city for operation of trolley cars over the new Williamsburg Bridge. See V. 78, p. 2013, 2386. Later the Bridge Operating Co was formed, with $100,000 capital, to operate local service on the bridge. See V. 79, p. 626. Through surface cars are operated over bridge by Brooklyn Heights RR., Nassau Elec. RR. and B'klyn Queens Co. & Sub. RR. Surface cars began to cross this bridge in Nov. 1904. V. 79, p. 2084. In Sept. 1909 cable line on Montague St. between Court St. and Wall St. Ferry was replaced by trolley.

Decision in Suit against Brooklyn City RR.—On June 8 1912 the Appellate Div. of N. Y. Supreme Court, 2d Dept., handed down a unanimous decision affirming, to the extent of $1,766,892 principal (with int from March 3 1910); the judgment awarded by the lower Court (V. 90, p. 558; V. 80, p. 1174; V. 70, p. 841) in the suit (begun in April 1900) of Brooklyn Heights RR. against the Brooklyn City RR., but modified the judgment of the lower Court by striking therefrom the sum of $1,616,680, representing interest to March 3 1910. V. 94, p. 1565; 1625. Brooklyn City RR. has taken an appeal to the Court of Appeals. Pending a final decision, Brooklyn City Ry. in July 1910 reduced its dividend to 2% quar., ½ of 1% being retained quarterly and set aside in a special fund to be returned to stockholders if not used in settlement of Brooklyn Heights Co. claim. V. 91, p. 93.

Proposed New Subways and Extensions.—An agreement having been reached in May 1912 as to how the routes of the new dual subway system in lower Manhattan should be apportioned to the Interborough and Brooklyn Rapid Transit, and the Court of Appeals at Albany having on June 29 1912 affirmed the decision of Justice Blackmar (V. 94, p. 1057) holding to be constitutional the terms of the proposed contracts with the Interborough and B. R. T., the Public Service Comm. is now engaged in preparing formal contracts for the proposed new subway lines. See under caption "Rapid Transit in New York City" in V. 94, p. 1384, 1449, 1566; V. 95, p. 48, 111, 237, 420. The new subway lines, to be built jointly by the Brooklyn Rapid Transit and the city, are briefly as follows: (See also annual report, V. 95, p. 294, for further details:

(a) Subway line traversing the Borough of Manhattan from the Battery to 59th St., mostly on Broadway, and connected by tunnel under the East River with subway lines in Brooklyn, with rights over the Brooklyn, Manhattan, Williamsburg and Queensboro bridges;

(b) Center St. loop extended through Nassau and Broad Sts., Manhattan, to a connection with the lower East River tunnel and the 4th Ave. subway in Brooklyn, with extensions to 86th St. and Coney Island, both of which (excluding extensions) are expected to be ready for operation within a year.

(c) Subway line extending from 6th Ave. and 14th St., Manhattan, across Manhattan, under the East River, to Bushwick Ave., Brooklyn, and thence an elevated line to East New York.

(d) Subway line in Brooklyn connecting Manhattan Bridge with the Brighton Beach RR.

In addition to the above, there are several extensions of present lines to be built by the company as well as third tracking and making additions and improvements to existing lines:

Track Mileage of the Unified System will Approximate 268,999 Miles.

Existing rapid transit lines	105.522	Subways and tunnels	70.580
Additional tracks on above	19.863	Elev. extens. (incl. bridges)	73.034

The estimated cost of the proposed new construction and equipment is stated as follows (see under "Rapid Transit in N. Y. City", V. 94, p. 1566).

By the city—New lines	$64,722,950
By the company—For city lines	13,000,000	$77,722,950
By city for 4th Ave. (Bklyn.) and loop lines now under constr.	28,486,000
By company for elevated extensions and improvements	21,000,000
By company for equipment	26,000,000
Total Brooklyn Rapid Transit System		$153,208,950

A new company is being organized whose stock will all be owned by one of the companies in the B. R. T. system, to operate the proposed new lines. As to financing of the new construction work by the B. R. T., see Secured Gold Notes in table below, and text relating thereto, and also V. 94, p. 1694.

The order in which earnings of the enlarged system will be pledged is as follows:

1. To Subway Company an amount equal to annual net earnings of the Brooklyn Union Elevated, the Canarsie and the Sea Beach railroads.
2. To the Subway Company an amount equal to 6% per annum on the sum invested by the Subway Company in construction and equipment—which on $60,000,000 would aggregate $3,600,000—equivalent to interest at 5%, and sinking fund of 1% on the new bonds.
3. To the city, interest and sinking fund on its investment.
4. The remaining net earnings will be divided equally between the Subway Company and the city.

The Subway Company's preferential payments will be cumulative.

Valuation of Property.—In Dec. 1909 Bion J. Arnold, Consulting Engineer of the Public Service Com., in hearings on the application pending before the Commission to reduce fare to Coney Island from 10 to 5 cents, estimated the valuation of the physical property of the company, including percentages for contractors' profits, incidentals, &c., as $160,705,689; value of non-operative property, $2,511,099; total cost of reproduction alone, $103,216,789. (V. 89, p. 1595.) In this real estate has been taken at its assessed value, and Mr. Arnold thought that, allowing for this and other items, the total might be brought up to approximate the capitalization of the co.

Special Franchise Tax Reduced.—For decision allowing for obsolescence in fixing special franchise tax, see V. 91, p. 1511.

Express Matter.—On Jan. 1 1909 the contract with the American Express Co., under which the latter company had been using the Brooklyn Rapid Transit system for distribution of express matter, expired, and was not renewed. V. 88, p. 157.

Damage Suits Against Line in Union Street.—On May 2 1910 the Court of Appeals at Albany affirmed judgments in favor of property owners claiming injury from the construction of the trolley line in Union Street. V. 90, p. 1238.

Wages.—Effective July 1 1912, and affecting about 5,000 men, the wages of nearly all employees of the transportation department of the surface roads were increased. V. 94, p. 1762.

The Transit Development Co. was organized in April 1903 under the Business Corporation law, with $25,000 capital, and is owned exclusively in the interest of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Co. It is authorized to manufacture and sell power and to do general contracting work. On March 1 1907 special arrangement was made by which the concern furnishes power and takes charge of the maintenance and repair of all the railway properties in the Brooklyn Rapid Transit system, including their equipment. V. 84, p. 569. In June 1907 capital stock was increased to $500,000.

The American Railway Traffic Co. was incorporated in Jan. 1904 with a capital of $1,000,000 (of which $980,000 is owned by the Transit Development Co.) for the purpose of hauling and disposing of city ashes and refuse. Contract with city expiring Dec. 27 1908 was not renewed and company will be dissolved. Is in process of dissolution.

Division of Territory with Long Island RR.—At an investigation by the Public Service Commission in Nov. 1907 it developed that on April 1 1899 an "agreement of alliance" had been entered into with the Long Island RR. for division of territory. "Long Island territory" is described as part of Queens County and the counties of Nassau and Suffolk, while "Transit territory" includes all of Kings County and part of Queens. Besides this, there is neutral territory consisting of College Point, Flushing, Jamaica and the islands in Jamaica Bay, into which neither may enter without the consent of the other.

Re-Classification of System Lines.—Owing to the opinion of the Court of Appeals in its decision upholding the right of the Brooklyn Heights RR. to charge 10 cents fare to Coney Island, to the effect that Article IV of the Railroad Law relates only to street surface railroads and that different provisions govern elevated and steam surface railroads, a re-classification of the roads of the system was made in March 1907 so as to limit the functions of each railroad to the operation of its own character of railroad. Accordingly the Brooklyn Union Elevated now operates only the elevated roads and the street surface railroad corporations operate street surface roads only. As part of this arrangement the leases of the Brooklyn Union Elevated RR., the Sea Beach Ry. and the South Brooklyn Ry. to the Brooklyn Heights RR. were terminated. The leases of the Prospect Park & Coney Island Ry., the New York & Coney Island Ry., the Prospect Park & So. B'klyn Ry. were assigned to the So. B'klyn Ry. V. 84, p. 569. In July 1912 the latter company acquired a large part of the share capital of the New York & Coney Island and the Pros. Pk. & So. Bklyn. V. 95, p. 47.

Transfers and Fares.—For decisions as to transfers, see V. 79, p. 2204, 2587. Also see V. 82, p. 1323. In Aug. 1907 the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court in Brooklyn held that cumulative penalties could not be collected for refusal to issue transfers—see V. 85, p. 404. In June 1906 transfer system was greatly extended. For decision as to expired franchises, see V. 82, p. 1101. In Dec. 1908 Public Service Commission dismissed a complaint to reduce the fare to Flushing from 10 to 5 cents. V. 87, p. 1604.

In Aug. 1906 the company's right to charge a 10-cent fare to Coney Island was disputed and riotous proceedings resulted. See V. 82, p. 379, 435, 686. In Jan. 1907 Court of Appeals sustained the company's contention as to the legality of the 10-cent fare. See V. 84, p. 101. On May 23 1908 Gov. Hughes vetoed a bill which, though general in form, was intended to provide a 5-cent fare from Manhattan to Coney Island. V. 86, p. 1342. On Mch. 8 1910 Pub. Ser. Comm. also upheld the 10-cent fare to Coney Island. V. 90, p. 696. On Jan. 31 1912 agreed to sell round-trip tickets on elevated lines only for 10 cents, good between 6 and 9 a. m. at Coney Island terminal and between 4 and 7 p. m. at Manhattan end from Sept. 15 to May 15. V. 94, p. 349. The round-trip fare of 10 cents good to Coney Island between 6 and 9 a. m. and good for return trip between 2 and 4:30 p. m., tried in summer of 1911, will be in effect from May 15 to Sept. 15. V. 94, p. 349; V. 93, p. 285.

On Feb. 13 1912 the Court of Appeals at Albany held that the Brooklyn Queens Co. & Sub. RR. is not required to give transfers for a continuous ride for 5 cents from Brooklyn to Jamaica. V. 94, p. 487.

Mortgages of Constituent Companies to Secure Advances by Brooklyn Rapid Transit.—In May 1907 the New York State RR. Comm. consented to the Sea Beach Ry., the Canarsie RR. and the South Brooklyn Ry. making mortgages of $2,000,000, $2,000,000 and $4,000,000 respectively to secure certificates of indebtedness issued by those companies to the Brooklyn Rapid Transit for moneys advanced for additions, betterments, &c. In June 1907 Brooklyn Union Elevated authorized a mtge for $20,000,000 and the Nassau Electric for $5,000,000 for same purpose; but in July 1908 Public Service Commission denied application for the approval of these latter two mortgages. See particulars V. 87, p. 224. No bonds will be issued under any of these mtges., which are created simply to secure the certificates of indebtedness as issued from time to time. The certificates cannot be issued at less than par and are deposited under the Brooklyn Rapid Transit first refunding mtge. V. 84, p. 1181, 1246, 1550.

Mortgage for $150,000,000.—Stockholders authorized March 20 1902 first refunding 4% gold convertible bonds for $150,000,000. $59,304,000 is intended to retire all the existing bonds of the system (including the $7,000,000 Brooklyn Transit 5s), and the rest for improvements, additions and new acquisitions, as needed from time to time. The mortgage provides that a fund of $5,000,000 in bonds or their proceeds be at all times at the disposal of the company for the purposes mentioned. See V. 74 p. 377. As this fund is reduced for any of the purposes authorized, more bonds may be authenticated by trustee and delivered to the company on its order. These bonds can be converted into stock, par for par, before July 1 1914, and are subject to call on any interest day until year 2000 at 110 and interest; after that at par and interest. See listing applications in V. 81, p. 1856, 1857, for list of securities pledged for the bonds; also listing applications in V. 82, p. 517; V. 83, p. 1122; V. 85, p. 1523; V. 86, p. 923, and V. 90, p. 786.

Bonds.—Of the $7,000,000 50-year gold 5s of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit, $3,000,000 went to stockholders for the assessment. For description of property covered by the mortgage, see V. 62, p. 1138. See also application in V. 67, p. 904.

Brooklyn City RR. mortgage of 1891 is for $6,000,000 and is a first lien on the old Brooklyn City road and a consolidated lien on the lines acquired by consolidation in 1890. Of the $6,000,000 issued, $4,373,000 are in the hands of the public and the balance is held in the guaranty fund.

Stockholders of Brooklyn City RR. July 10 1906 authorized a new mortgage for $6,925,000 to provide for refunding. V. 82, p. 1437. These bonds are subject to call after July 1 1915 at 110 and interest.

The total authorized issue of first consolidated mortgage gold 5s of the Brooklyn Queens County & Suburban RR. is $4,500,000, of which $1,616,000 are reserved for extensions, on which they will be a first lien. Of the $2,884,000 outstanding, $2,255,000 in 1898 were endorsed with the guaranty of the Brooklyn Heights RR. Co. as to principal and interest, and in Jan. 1899 provision was made for guaranteeing the remainder of the payment of $10 per bond. Both B. Q. C. & S. loans are subject to call in 1916.

The Sea Beach Ry. 1st 4s also are guaranteed as to principal and interest by the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Co. V. 65, p. 1219.

The Nassau Electric bonds are guaranteed (by endorsement on each bond) by the Brooklyn Heights RR. Besides covering the mileage directly owned they are a lien by a supplemental agreement upon the stock of the Coney Island & Gravesend Ry. and the Sea Beach Ry. and will become a direct lien on these lines should the latter become merged in the Nassau Electric. Of the total of $15,000,000 bonds authorized, the unissued remainder ($3,492,000) is for prior liens. See listing application in V. 72, p. 342.

Owing to the unwillingness of the Pub. Serv. Comm. to permit the capitalization called for by the modified plan of reorganization (see plan, V. 90, p. 1675, and modification of same, V. 92, p. 261), on Mch. 22 1911 a "substituted plan" was filed, calling for (1) exchange of old coll. tr. 4s, $ for $, for new coll. tr. 4s of International Trac. Co. due July 1 1949, and limiting the issue to $18,335,000, instead of the $30,000,000 proposed; (2) deposit as collateral for new bonds, all the coll. now pledged for old bonds, incl. entire stock of International Ry., except that in place of unsecured certifs. of indebtedness of operating cos., there be deposited at least an equal amount of new International Ry. 5s; (3) establishment of a sk. fd. to pay off at maturity, on or before July 1 1949, all underlying bonds of operating com-

On Oct. 30 1905 acquired the entire $80,000 capital stock of the Electric City Ry. In Jan. 1907 organized Frontier Elec. Bonds and Stock.—Of the $30,000,000 collateral trust mortgage, $12,285,000 were originally reserved to take up an equal amount of the underlying bonds of the allied and controlled companies outstanding, and $620,000 of that amount has been issued for that purpose, leaving $11,665,000 still reserved. Car trust certificates No. 2 are secured by title to 150 cars. They fall due in semi-annual installments of $30,000 each from Dec. 1906 to June 1916 inclusive. Car trust certificates No. 3 are secured by title to 50 cars. They fall due in semi-annual installments of $12,000 March 1 and $13,000 Sept. 1 from March 1 1908 to Sept. 1 1917.

Franchises.—In June 1906 we were informed that the majority of the franchises in Buffalo are practically perpetual, none in Buffalo or other cities and towns having then an unexpired term of less than 40 years, excepting only the Fillmore Avenue franchise, covering an extension of 6½ miles on the east side in Buffalo, which was limited to 25 years; also portions of Franklin, Pearl, Genesee, W. Seneca, Morgan, and W. Chippewa Sts.; extension of Morgan St. or Elmwood Ave., in the Terrace and College Place.

Consolidation or Constituent Companies.—On Feb. 20 1902 the International Railway Company was incorporated in New York with $10,120,500 stock and in Aug. 1902 this was increased to $17,000,000, of which $16,320,500 has been issued (all owned by the International Traction Co.), as a consolidation of the following companies, whose shares had previously been held by the Traction Co.: V. 74, p. 427.

Buffalo Railway Co. (after Buffalo Traction and Buffalo Bellevue & Lancaster had first been merged in the same).
Buffalo & Niagara Falls Electric Railway.
Buffalo & Lockport Railway (after Elmwood Ave. and Tonawanda Electric Railway had been merged).
Buffalo Tonawanda & Niagara Falls Electric RR. Co.
Lockport & Olcott Railway.
Niagara Falls & Suspension Bridge Railway (after the Niagara Falls Whirlpool & Northern Ry. had been merged in it).
Niagara Falls Suspension Bridge Co.

The Buffalo Railway owned the $2,850,000 stock of the Crosstown Street Ry. of Buffalo, and this passed to the International Railway Co.

On July 1 1902 the International Ry. Co. acquired by purchase the Niagara Falls Park & River Ry., the Clifton Suspension Bridge Co., the Lewiston Connect. Bridge Co. and Queenston Heights Bridge Co. This leaves the Crosstown St. Ry. Co. of Buffalo, the Electric City Ry., the Frontier Elec. Ry. and Inter. Ry. Co. as the only operating companies, and eventually (that is, as soon as the $1,000,000 Buffalo Ry. debentures secured by $2,000,000 stock of the Crosstown St. Ry. are retired) the Crosstown St. Ry. can also be merged, thus leaving the International Railway Co., the Frontier Elec. Ry. and the Electric City Ry. the sole operating companies and the International Traction Co. the holding company.

(1) Chicago City Railway.—An electric road.

ORGANIZATION.—Incorporated in Feb. 1859, and has extensive surface road privileges in the south division of Chicago. In June 1908 entered into a contract with the Commonwealth-Edison Co., by which the Chicago City Ry. agrees to buy all of its electric power from that company until June 1918. The railway has abandoned its producing plants but retains its distributing plants. V. 87, p. 1010.

New Ordinances and Franchises.—On Feb. 4 1907 the City Council passed ordinances providing for a settlement of the franchise question. These ordinances were approved at the city election on April 2 1907 and formally accepted by the company's board of directors on April 15 1907. Suit to set aside franchise was dismissed in April 1912. V. 94, p. 1118. An extended outline of these ordinances, one to the Chicago City Railway Co., and covering the lines operated by that company, and the other to the Chicago Rys. Co., and covering the lines of the former Chicago Union Traction Co. (now the Chicago Railways Co.), was given in V. 84, p. 1123. The value of the tangible and intangible property of the Chicago City Ry. at date of the ordinances was fixed at $21,000,000. The city or any company authorized by it is given the right on Feb. 1 or Aug. 1 of any year, on six months' notice, to purchase the entire property of the two systems, or either of them, at their value at date of ordinance, plus "the cost of rehabilitation and extensions, including fair allowances for construction, profit and brokerage." But if the properties are acquired for operation by a private corporation, for its own profit, the purchase price is to be increased 20%—barring the case of a private company which might be willing to turn over to the city all profits above 5% on the cost of the investment. The companies are limited during their operation to an interest return of 5% upon the agreed value plus the cost of rehabilitation and extensions. All net profits above this are to be divided on the basis of 55% to the city and 45% to the companies, but a deficit in any year is to be made good out of the profits of subsequent years. After April 15 1910 the companies are required to set aside 6% of the gross receipts for maintenance and repairs and an additional 8% of the gross receipts to cover renewals and depreciation. Whatever portion of the two funds is not used, remains in the funds and passes to the city or its licensee upon purchase. But if the two funds are not sufficient for the purposes named, the companies are obligated to supply additional funds.

Free transfers are required over all connecting lines within the city limits covered by the Chicago Railways Company, the Chicago City Railway and the Southern Street Railway (except territory bounded by Twelfth Street, south and main branches of Chicago River and Lake Michigan, until subways are in operation, when transfers will be given at all intersections in the subways), provided the passenger has paid a five-cent fare and is traveling in any one general direction. Certain extensions are provided, and the Chicago City Company agreed to construct in addition the equivalent of eight miles of single track and the Chicago Railways system the equivalent of twelve miles of single track, in each year after the third year. The companies also agree, upon demand of the city, to furnish funds not exceeding $5,000,000 in the aggregate for the construction of a central down-town subway to be built and owned by the city, two-fifths of the cost to be borne by the Chicago City Ry. and three-fifths by the Chicago Railways. Section 25 of Chicago City Ry. ordinance fixes the capital investment limitation of the company as follows: "The company shall not be required on account of any extensions or subways or on account of underground trolleys, or on account of any extensions of its street railways, other than the extension provided for in exhibit "A," and in Section 36 of this ordinance, and four (4) miles of double or eight (8) miles of single track per annum, as in Section 3 hereof provided, to increase its total capital investment to such an extent that the return thereon over and above the interest charge of 5% thereon by this ordinance authorized would be reduced to an inadequate or unreasonably small amount."

The franchises granted by the ordinances run until Feb. 1 1927. The city reserves the right at any time to commute a sum not exceeding the city's share of the net receipts for the previous year into a reduction of the rates of fare.

Calumet & South Chicago Operated.—Under an operating agreement entered into in 1908, operates the Calumet & South Chicago Ry. and will also direct the work of its rehabilitation.

Southern St. Ry. Operated.—Under ordinance which went into force April 1 1909, operates the Southern St. Ry. and will carry on work of the rehabilitation of that road.

On Jan. 29 1912 City Council passed an ordinance providing for the acquisition by Chicago City Ry. of city lines of the Chicago & Southern Trac. Co. V. 94, p. 349, 629. The latter was sold at foreclosure in Feb. 1912. The lines outside the city were taken over by the Chic. & Interurban Ry. in the interest of the Hammond Whiting & East Chicago Ry.

Wage Agreement.—See under Chicago Rys. and in V. 95, p. 618.

Operating Agreement with Chicago City Railway Co.—On June 29 1908 Chicago City Council approved agreement by which Chicago City Ry. agrees to operate Calumet & South Chicago Ry. Co.'s street railway system, and to place in operation the zone system of transfers, as described above. The latter company agrees to pay actual cost of this operation, and joint costs are to be paid by both companies in proportion to gross receipts of each, with certain exceptions. In addition, Calumet & South Chicago Ry. will pay Chicago City Ry. ¼ of the actual saving in oper. exp. resulting from joint operation, such saving to be determined by a board of engineers. See V. 87, p. 224.

Receivership.—On Jan. 28 1908 Judge Grosscup appointed W. Irving Osborne, Chicago; D. B. Hanna, Vice-Pres. Canadian Northern Ry., Toronto, and H. A. Haugen, Pres. State Bank of Chicago, receivers. George G. Moore was subsequently substituted for Mr. Haugen. See V. 86, p. 284, 337, 1223. In Feb. 1911 W. O. Johnson (a director of the Western Trust Co., Chic.) was appointed as receiver by Judge Grosscup, the former receivers being retained as advisers. V. 92, p. 525. April 1908 Judge Grosscup authorized the Wisconsin corporation to issue $1,000,000 receivers' certificates to complete road (V. 86, p. 917, 1159, 1223). Interest due July 1 1908 on the $4,000,000 bonds of 1902 is in default; the interest due on $1,080,000 1st M. bonds of 1899, however, has been paid. Default also occurred on Wisconsin Division bonds July 1 1908. V. 87, p. 96. Sink. fund due July 1910 and 1911 on Ry. 1st M. of 1899 was not paid.

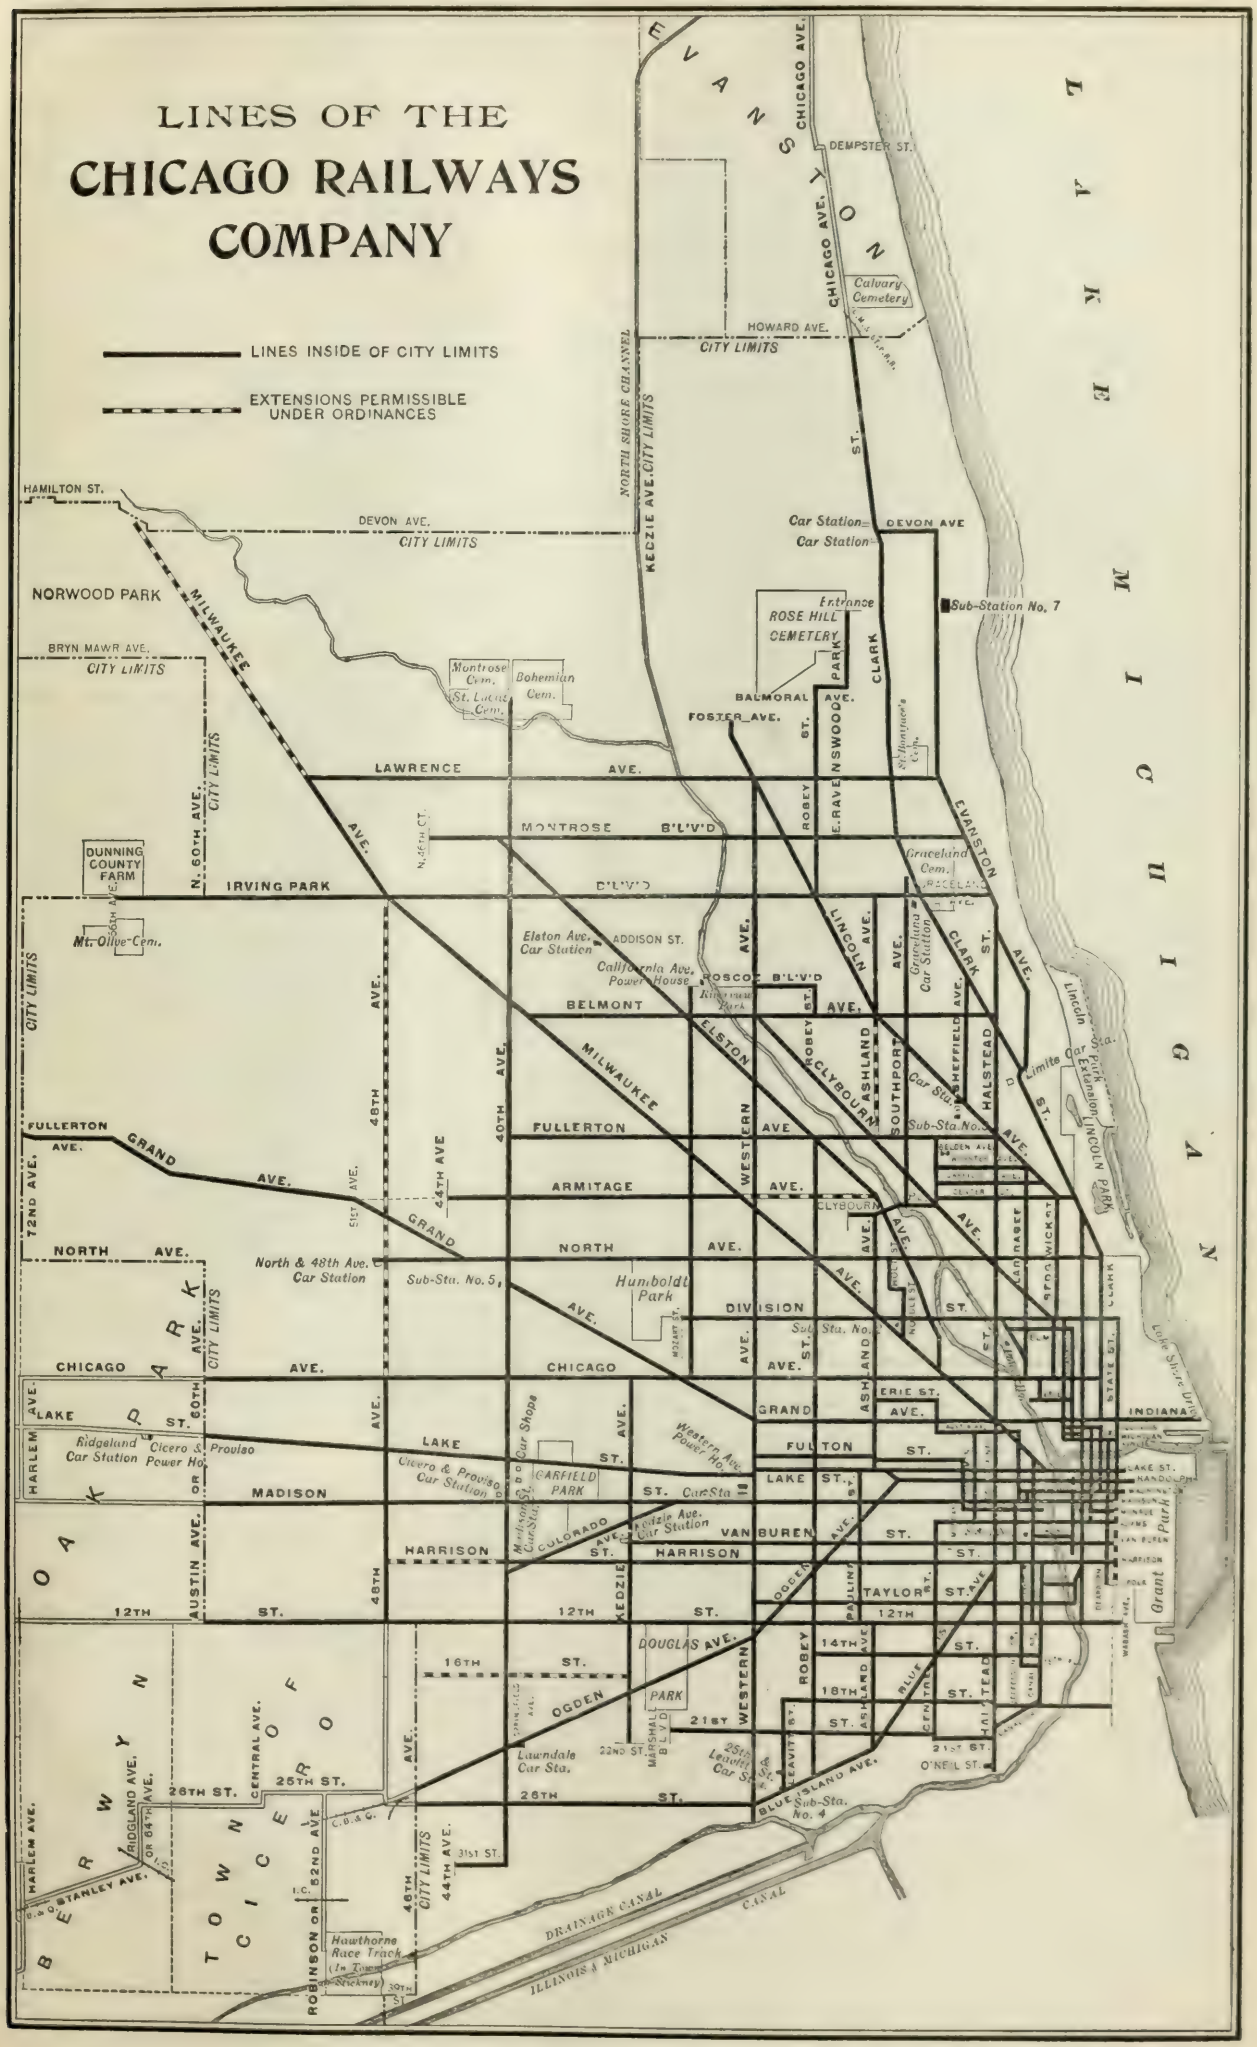
Proposition to Unite Surface and Elevated Lines.—On March 27 1912, at the request of Henry A. Blair, representing Chicago Rys., I. M. Cobe, Chicago City & Conn. Rys., and Samuel Insull, Chicago Elev. Rys., the transportation committee of the City Council adopted a resolution providing that the committee shall at once proceed to draft an ordinance looking to the merger of the surface and elevated lines. V. 94, p. 982; V. 93, p. 1190, 1599. In July 1912, however, negotiations for the proposed merger were, it is stated, at least temporarily, broken off. See under Chic. Elev. Rys. in V. 95, p. 47.



ORGANIZATION.—Incorporated in Illinois in Oct. 1903 and on Jan. 25 1908 acquired at foreclosure sale the property of the old Chicago Union Traction, comprising the lines of the North and West Chicago Street RR. The purchase was made under a modified plan of reorganization and readjustment dated Oct. 15 1907 and outlined in V. 85, p. 1269; see also p. 1576

Notice to Non-Assenting Holders.—In April 1912 notice was given that after June 15 1912 no additional amounts of stock (or assessments thereon), bonds or other obligations affected by the reorganization plan of Oct. 15 1907, will be received on behalf of the railways Co. V. 94, p. 1185.

Franchises.—On Feb. 5 1907 the City Council passed ordinances providing for a settlement of the relations between the city and the street railway companies. V. 84, p. 338, 390. The franchises granted by the ordinances expire Feb. 11 1927 and were approved at the popular election held April 2 1907. On Oct. 10 1910 supplemental ordinance was passed expiring Feb. 1927, covering lines of Chic. Consol. Trac. properties. V. 91, p. 1025.

In the remarks concerning the Chicago City Ry. on a preceding page of this publication will be found a brief summary of the main terms, requirements and conditions of these ordinances. A very extended outline of the same was printed in the "Chronicle" of May 11 1907, pages 1123, 1124 and 1125, to which the reader is referred for detailed information.

The ordinance for the Chicago Rys. Co. provides that the valuation of the properties acquired shall be deemed and considered to be $29,000,000 (the value fixed by a board of expert engineers acting for the city) plus $1,779,875 for expenditures from the date of the valuation on June 30 1906 to Feb. 1 1907, making total valuation of properties as recognized by ordinance $30,779,875 as of Feb. 1 1907. With the further expenditures already made and upon the expenditure of proceeds of all bonds now outstanding, the valuation of road, equipment and franchises will be not less than $76,863,605. V. 87, p. 677; V. 88, p. 504. See circular to stockholders dated July 22 1912 in V. 95, p. 236 and 419, outlining the measures taken since 1907 to rehabilitate the property.

All expenditures for reconstruction and extensions are being made under the direct supervision of a board of supervising engineers headed by Mr. Bion J. Arnold, and the company is required, under conservative restrictions, to advance moneys for the construction of subways by the city. The expenditures for reconstruction and extensions, including any contributions for subways, after Feb. 1 1907 are to be added to the value of the properties recognized by the ordinance, together with 5% of such expenditures for brokerage. As compensation for its services in construction, the company will receive an additional 10% of all expenditures for reconstruction and extensions, exclusive of amounts contributed for subways. The company agreed to lower and reconstruct the tunnels under the Chicago River at Washington, La Salle and Van Buren streets. The ordinance requires through routing over certain lines of the Chicago City Ry. Co. and the exchange of transfers with that company. The lines of the Chicago City Ry. Co. cover what is known as the South Side of Chicago, and the lines of the Chicago Rwys. Co. the North and West Sides.

Right to Purchase by City.—Under the terms of the franchise, the company agreed to waive all rights under previous grants, and granted the city an option to purchase all of its property for municipal operation at any time prior to the expiration of the 20-year franchise granted the company by the ordinance. The price to be paid by the city to be $30,779,875, the valuation of the properties February 1 1907, as above mentioned, plus all expenditures after that date for reconstruction, extensions and additions to the properties, including any amounts advanced to the city for construction of subways in the downtown business district. In case the property shall not be purchased, as above stated, prior to 1927, the expiration of the present franchise, the city covenants that it will not then grant a franchise to any other corporation for the operation of a competing system in the company's territory, unless such other corporation shall purchase the property of the company at said price. The city also has the option of requiring the company to sell its property to any other licensee corporation of the city, or to purchase the property itself for municipal ownership (with no requirement as to municipal operation) at any time during the life of the franchise; but in case of such purchase by the city or a licensee, the price to be paid shall be 20% more than the price above mentioned; but the licensee shall not be required to pay the additional 20% if it shall agree to pay over to the city all profits in excess of 5% on the investment. In any event (1) the purchase price must be paid in cash and deposited in national or State banks, each of which must have a capital and surplus of at least $1,000,000, and must be approved by the company, and the first mortgage bonds of the company will attach to such cash as a first lien in the event of such purchase; or (2) such purchase (if made within said 20 years) must be consummated expressly subject to the lien of the 1st mtg. bonds, but if made at the expiration of said 20 years, the amount thereof must also be so paid in cash.

Compensation to City.—The company is entitled to a straight 5-cent fare, with universal transfers. In turn provision is made for special compensation to the City of Chicago, but this compensation is payable only out of the surplus earnings of the company after paying or providing for all operating expenses, including the charges for maintenance and depreciation prescribed in the ordinance, and 5% upon the valuation of the company's property at which it may be purchased by the city for municipal operation, as above stated. Of the surplus earnings so remaining, the City of Chicago receives 55% and the company 45%.

Control by Trustees.—The trust indenture securing the participation certificates provides that until Aug. 1 1912, and to the full extent thereafter which may be permitted by law until all of the consolidated mortgage bonds of the company shall be fully paid and discharged, the directors of the company shall be elected by Messrs. A. C. Bartlett, Chauncey Keep, Charles H. Hulburd, Albert A. Sprague and Charles G. Dawes of Chicago, and provision is made in the trust deed securing the 1st mtge. bonds for the appointment of a permanent finance committee, composed of Messrs. Henry A. Blair, Chauncey Keep and B. A. Eckhart of Chicago.

Acquisition of Chicago Consolidated Traction Properties.—On Dec. 27 1910 Judge Grosscup confirmed the sale of the Chic. Consol. Trac. Co. and its eight underlying companies on Nov. 30 1910 to Andrew Cooke, and the sale by the latter of all properties within the city limits to the Chicago Railways Co. (V. 91, p. 945, 1253, 1511), pursuant to an ordinance passed Oct. 10 1910 (placing valuation at $4,021,982), like in tenor, amendatory and supplemental to ordinance of Feb. 11 1907 (V. 91, p. 1025, 1159). See reorganization plan, V. 90, p. 1613; V. 91, p. 37. The lines outside the city were acquired by the County Traction Co., which has no connection, either corporate or operating, with the Chicago Rys. On Nov. 1 1910 a deposit agreement was entered into by the holders of the securities of Chic. Consol. Trac. and its subsidiaries, providing for the exchange of said securities for Chic. Rys. Co. Purchase Money 4% to 5% bonds and Adjustment Income 4% bonds, both dated Jan. 1 1911 and maturing Feb. 1 1927. For description of bonds and terms of exchange, see V. 91, p. 1384, and compare V. 90, p. 1613; V. 91, p. 214.

Contract for Power.—On July 30 1909 reached agreement with the Com.-Edison Co. for power for a period of 6 years from Feb. 1908. V. 89, p. 348.

Wage Agreement.—On Aug. 31 1912 the employees of the Chicago street railways rejected the proposed wage agreement (see V. 95, p. 618) and the matter has been referred to arbitrators.

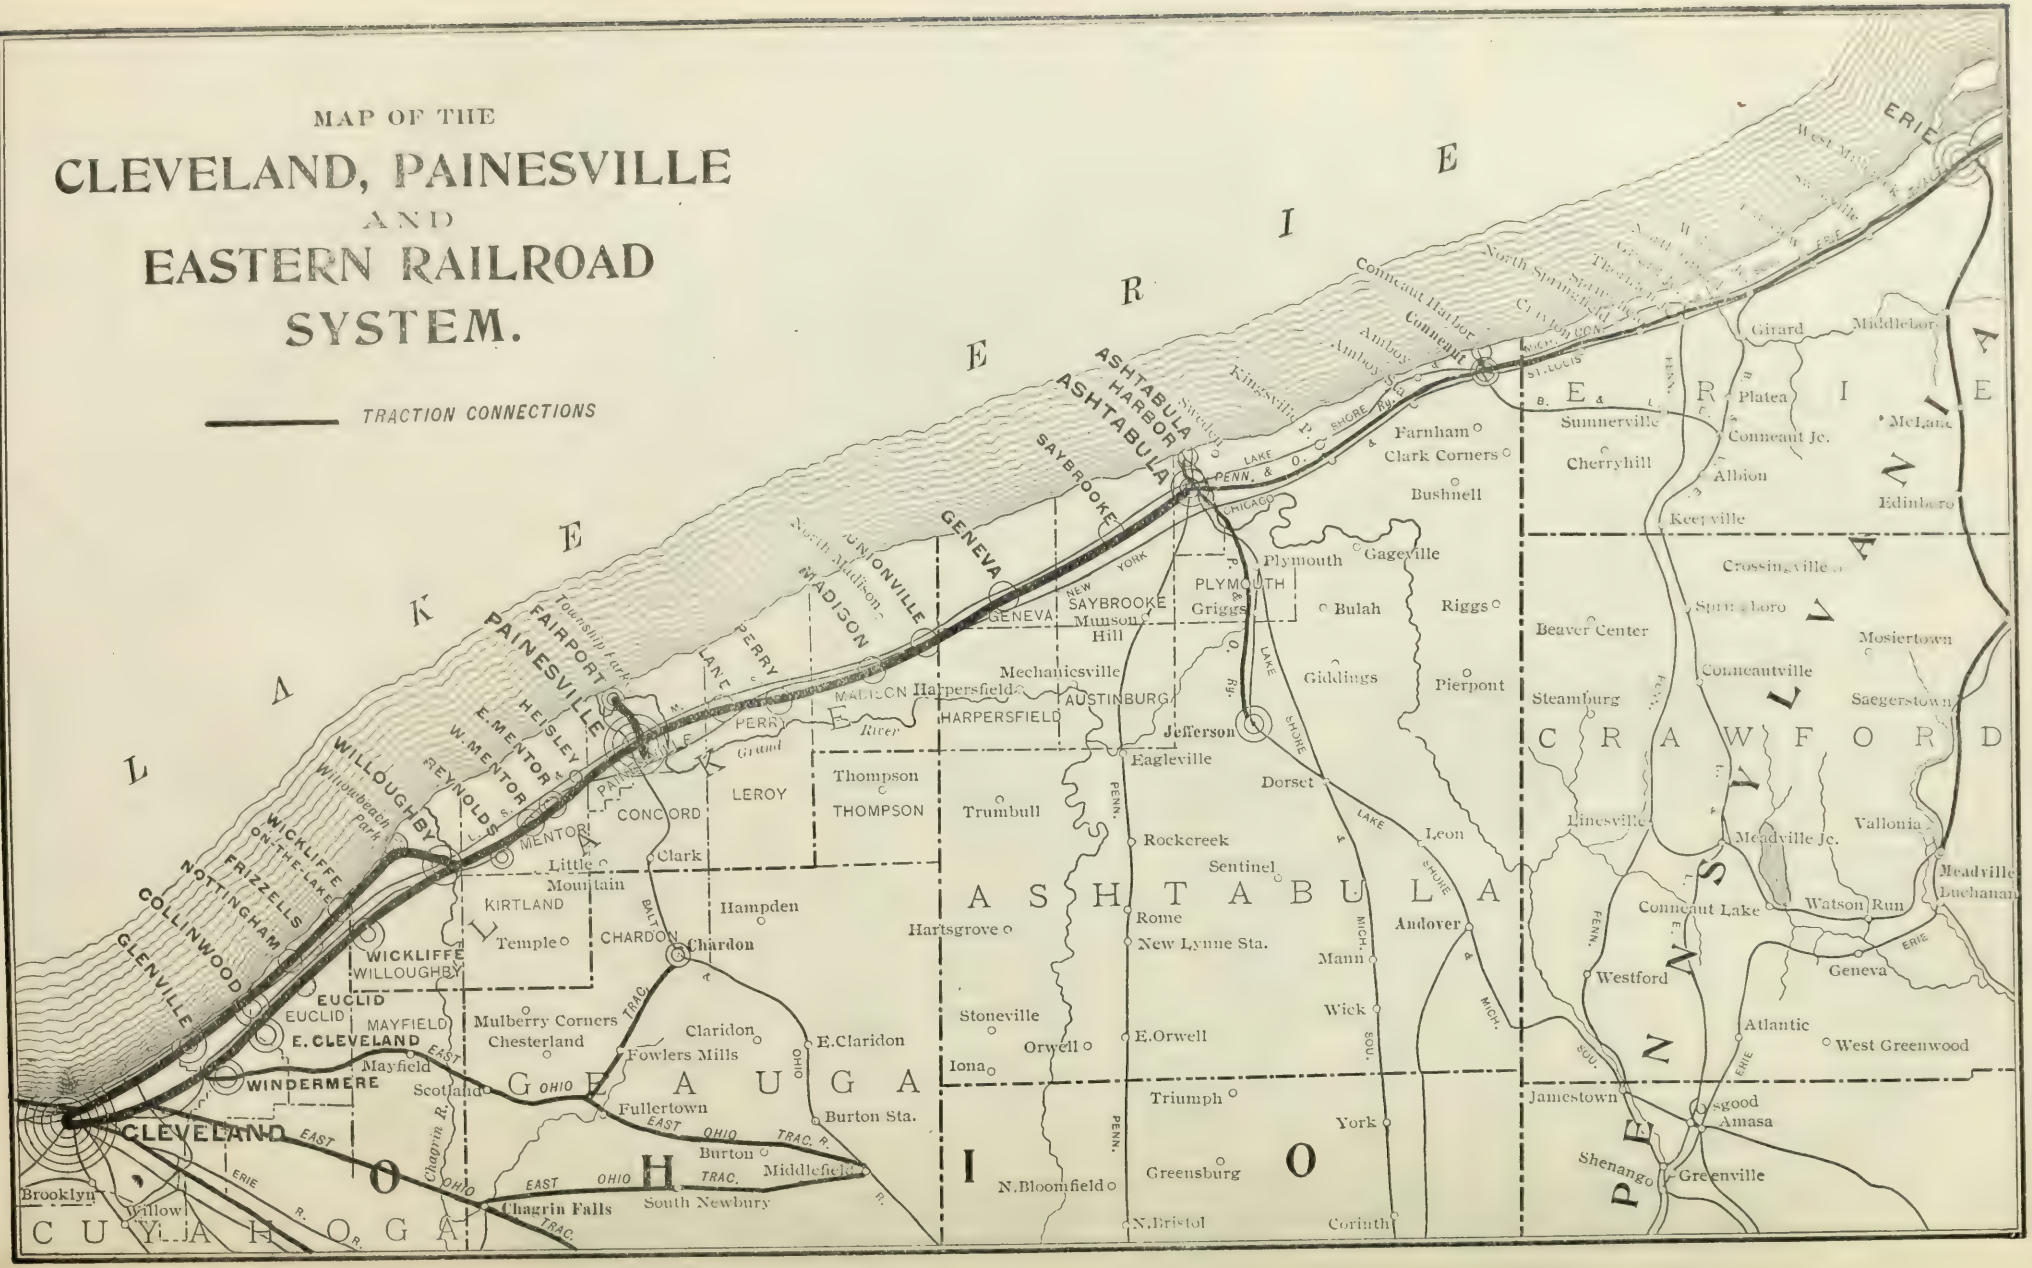
CLEVELAND, OHIO.

CLEVELAND RAILWAY CO.

Company Resumes Possession.—The receivers of the Municipal Traction Co. having been discharged and the debts of that company provided for, the Cleveland Railway Co. on March 1 1910 resumed possession of its lines under ordinance (see below) of Dec. 1909. V. 90, p. 626. The lease to the Municipal Traction Co. was canceled of record.

New Franchise Ordinance.—The "security" franchise ordinance granted April 27 1908 not being ratified (V. 87, p. 1089) and the Schmidt ordinance being defeated at a referendum election Aug. 3 1909 (V. 89, p. 348), a new franchise ordinance (V. 89, p. 1667) was passed in Dec. 1909 by the City Council, and accepted by the railway co., based upon the valuation of the co's property as fixed by Judge Tayler. The ordinance grants franchises to operate on existing roads to May 1 1934, subject to the right of the city to purchase the property. In case the city shall purchase and take over the property of the company, as is in this ordinance provided, then it shall pay for the same the capital value of said property, as fixed by Sec. 16, plus 10% thereof, the city at the time of such purchase assuming and agreeing to pay, in addition thereto, all the obligations, indebtedness and liabilities of said company, and all liens other than bonded indebtedness upon its property then existing, which bonded indebtedness the city shall, at the time of any such purchase, provide for by assumption if the law authorizing such purchase permits, or by payment if the law so authorizes at the time and under the provisions of the bonds they are callable, or by taking the property subject thereto if that be the mode provided by law for dealing with such existing bonded indebtedness in making such purchase. On and after Jan. 1 1918 the city may designate a purchaser or licensee in place of the city on payment of same amount. On Feb. 17 1910 at a referendum election the electors ratified the ordinance (V. 89, p. 1667; V. 90, p. 167, 502). On July 10 1911 City Council passed an ordinance amending that of Dec. 1909 providing, among other things, for additions to capital as required and particularly for the immediate expenditure of $2,500,000 for impts., extens. and equipt. The new ordinance also provides that the right of the city to propose exten., betterments or impts. shall terminate whenever the unexpired term or any renewal thereof is less than 15 years, and also that during such period the company may operate at the maximum rate of fare and fix the schedules subject to the police power of the city. Provision is also made for the use of surplus earnings during this 15-yr. period, either in the payment of floating debt or the creation of a s. f. to purchase securities and reduce capital value. At a referendum election on Nov. 7 1911, the electors ratified the ordinance amending that of Dec. 1909.

Valuation.—Judge Tayler placed the value of the physical property of the Cleveland Elec. Ry. Co. at $17,511,856 and the franchise value at $3,615,844; total, $21,127,700; agreed value of property purchased from Forest City Ry. Co., $1,805,600; total valuation, $22,933,300. To this is added $1,158,300 interest or rental accrued, making the entire "capital value" $24,091,600. The bonded debt of $8,128,000 and floating indebtedness as of Jan. 1 1908, $1,288,000, or $9,416,000 in all, is deducted, leaving $14,675,600. The valuation is to be increased for the purpose of fixing the price at which the city or its nominee may purchase the property by the amount of future requirements, including cost of new pay-as-you-enter cars and 75% of the cost of remodeling old cars as pay-as-you-enter cars.



Fares.—An experimental fare of 3c., with 1c. extra for transfers without rebate, had to be tried to see if it would yield the auth. int. on capital val.—5% on bonds, 6% on floating debt and capital stock. On June 1 1911 authorities ordered the fare reduced to 3c. cash fare, 1c. extra for transfer, but the latter to be rebated when taken up, which in Sept. 1912 was still in effect. V. 92, p. 1198; V. 93, p. 1190. Under the ordinance, fare to East Cleveland is same as city fare. Fare for other suburbs, 5 cents, or eleven tickets for 50 cents, according to contracts. The company's schedules and routes are subject to the supervision of the city, and the rates of fare to be fixed so as to net a return of interest as stated above on the valuation of the property and permit of the maintenance at all times of a so-called interest fund of at least $500,000. V. 89, p. 1667. Maximum fare allowed is 4c. for a single fare, or 7 tickets for a quarter, with 1c. for transfer without rebate.

ORGANIZATION.—In 1908 changed name from the Cleveland Electric Railway Co. (which had in 1903 taken over the Cleveland City Ry.) to Cleveland Railway Co., and authorized new stock to the amount of $55,000,000. The old stock of Cleveland Electric Ry. was given a valuation of $55 per share, or $12,870,000 (the stock having formerly been $23,400,000) which valuation was agreed upon after extended conference, and which was paid in new stock issued by Cleveland Railway at a par ($100) valuation. The Forest City Ry. (which had just absorbed the Low Fare Ry.) was purchased for $1,805,600 stock of Cleveland Ry., the shares of the Forest City Ry. being accepted at their par $1000 value.

On Aug. 15 1912 Shareholders were offered the right to subscribe (to Oct. 1 1912) for 55,014.92 additional stock (par $100) at 90 (from Sept. 21 1912, approved by Ohio P. S. Comm. Sept. 19 1912) at par, payable in two equal instalments on Dec. 2 1912 and Feb. 1 1913. The new stock is for extens., betterments and impts., and to pay part of bonds due Mch. 1913. V. 95, p. 236, 480.

On June 18 1910 motormen and conductors were awarded an increase in wages of 4 cents an hour, effective June 15 1910. V. 90, p. 1675.

Circuit Court at Des Moines, in an action brought by the company to restrain the city from attempting to enforce this ordinance, held that the franchise of the company is perpetual. V 84, p. 508. On May 17 1909 the U. S. Supreme Court reversed the decision of the Circuit Court, but did not decide the question whether the franchise was perpetual. V. 88, p. 1313; V. 89, p. 224. DETROIT, MICH.

DETROIT UNITED RAILWAY.—(See Map page 45.)—Trolley.

ORGANIZATION.—Incorporated in Michigan Dec. 31 1900 and took over franchises and properties of the Detroit Citizens' Street Ry., the Detroit Electric Ry., the Detroit Ft. Wayne & Belle Isle and the Detroit Suburban. V. 72, p. 44, 183. Embraces all the street railway lines in Detroit.

Later absorbed by purchase the Detroit & Northwestern Ry., which is known as the Orchard Lake division, the Detroit & Pontiac Ry., known as the Pontiac division, the Wyandotte & Detroit River Ry., known as the Wyandotte division, and the Detroit & Flint, formerly the Detroit Rochester Romeo & Lake Orion Ry., and known as the Flint division. Owns entire capital stock ($2,000,000) of the Detroit & Port Huron Shore Line.

In Aug. 1901 purchased 2,970 shares (all) of the stock of the Sandwich Windsor & Amherstburg Ry.; 180 shares (all) of the stock of the City Electric Ry. and the People's Electric Light plant of Windsor, Ont.

In Feb. 1906 issued $1,000,000 notes for the purpose of acquiring the entire stock of the Detroit Monroe & Toledo Short Line Ry. V. 82, p 392. These were paid off March 1 1909. V. 88, p. 563.

In Jan. 1907 company purchased control of the Detroit Ypsilanti Ann Arbor & Jackson Ry., the Jackson Ann Arbor & Detroit Ry. and the Detroit Plymouth & Northville Ry., and reorganized them under the name of Detroit Jackson & Chicago Ry. V. 84, p. 450.

The United States Supreme Court on March 3 1902 decided that the ordinance of 1889 compelling the Citizens' Street Ry. to sell 8 tickets for a quarter was invalid. (See V. 74, p. 528.)

The Mich. Supreme Court on Sept. 28 1910 (V. 91, p. 870) refused a rehearing from its decision that company must sell workingmen's tickets at rate of 8 for a quarter within specified hours and within city limits as extended. Applying that ruling, the Wayne Circuit Court on July 6 1912 held that company could not charge more than a single fare on all lines at all times within city limits as extended. V. 95, p. 110.

In July 1906 a proposed ordinance extending the company's franchises until Dec. 4 1924 was submitted to the City Council. See V. 83, p. 271, 1170. V. 84, p. 338. Ordinance, however, fell through. Question of valuation of company's property in connection with proposed new franchise was in April 1910 submitted to a board of arbitration. V. 90, p. 976, 1101. Up to Sept. 1912 valuation had not been fixed.

On Nov. 13 1909 company decided to pay under protest the occupation tax of $300 a day called for by Hally resolution of Oct. 26 1909. The tax is for privilege, after Nov. 14 1909, of operating cars in streets where franchises have expired. V. 89, p. 1347. On July 8 1911 Wayne Circuit Court decided in favor of the city suit brought by city on Sept. 15 1910 to compel the company to pay $200 per day occupation tax, in addition to the $300 above. V. 93, p. 163. The entry of the decree was withheld in order that the Common Council might be consulted as to a modification or suspension of the ordinance or decree.

On May 1 1907 the Supreme Court of Michigan decided that the city of Detroit could not lay street railway tracks through its Department of Public Works (as attempted under an ordinance of the City Council passed in 1905), to be leased, as supposed, to an operating company. V. 84, p. 1052.

On April 25 1907 Judge Swan in the U. S. Court at Detroit granted an injunction (which July 24 1907 was made permanent) restraining the city from enforcing an ordinance seeking to compel the company to give 20 seconds' service on some of its lines. V. 84, p. 1052.

On July 23 1907 Judge Swan granted an injunction restraining the city from enacting an ordinance which provided that company can use patches of line on which franchises are said to have expired on condition only that 5 tickets be sold for 15 cents over entire lines or streets on which patches lie. V. 85, p. 345.

In April 1911 an agreement was entered into between the company and Mayor Thompson (ratified by City Council), whereby the company was permitted to build at once extensions and double-track its lines. Agreement provides that at any time city may purchase any of the extensions. V. 92, p. 956.

Proposed Municipal Purchase.—On Jan. 15 1912 the Mich. Supreme Court handed down a decision holding that the city could not legally vote at proposed election Jan. 23 1912 upon charter amendment to provide for municipal ownership of street railways. See V. 94, p. 207, 123. A similar decision was handed down by the same court on Feb. 1 1911. V. 92, p. 322.

Ordinance Defeated.—At referendum election on Jan. 23 1912, the proposed ordinance (V. 93, p. 1190) passed by the Council Jan. 16 1912, looking to the settlement of all differences between the city and the company, was defeated. V. 94, p. 278.

Wage Agreement.—For agreement ending difficulties with the men, see V. 94, p. 1507.
